Day's Developments Abroad

The first step toward restoration of Hitler's war-lost colonies was seen as a plebiscite was sought in Southwest Africa on the question of returning to the Reich.

German Economic Minister Funk concluded an agreement for the Reich to lend $65,000,000 to Turkey for arms and industrial development. Page 5.

Strife in the Holy Land

By Joseph Driscoll
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Oct. 7.—With the fate of Czechoslovakia fresh in their minds, Zionist circles in London tonight were fearful the Jews of Palestine would next be "sold down the river" in fulfillment of the British policy of seeking peace with the Nazis.

An important conference which may decide the future status of Palestine proceeded all day long today at the Colonial office. There Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald and his staff of Near Eastern advisers talked for hours with Sir Harold MacMichael, high commissioner for Palestine, who had flown here for this purpose.

No communique was issued as the discussions are still in the preliminary stage, and no definite plan is ready for submission to Prime Minister Chamberlain and his cabinet. This will be done in the last week before Parliament reconvenes on November 1.

Arabs Winning War

Unofficially it is reported the government is thinking seriously about dropping the famous Peel Commission's report, which provided for the partition of Palestine into a Jewish state and a British corridor, comprising the Holy Cities and several areas with high strategical importance.

Arabs of Palestine, supported by their brethren in Syria, Transjordania, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, rose in revolt against the idea of partition, and now it is tacitly admitted the Arabs are winning the bloody civil war in which hundreds of British, Jews and Arabs have been killed and wounded.

The Woodhead Commission, which was sent out to Palestine to arrange the technical details of the partition, returned some weeks ago, when its members were unable to agree on the new frontier, and apparently, not even on the idea of any partition. Their report should be forthcoming this month, but it may not be unanimous.

Radical New Plan

Meanwhile, the foreign minister of Irak, Sayid Taufik Al Suwaidi, has arrived in London with a radically new plan, the main features of which are reported to be:

The Peel partition plan is to be definitely abandoned.

The ideal of a Jewish state, a Jewish national homeland, is to be dropped along with all "political Zionism."

Jews are forever to remain a minority group in Palestine. Jewish immigration into Palestine is to be halted, and the population will be stabilized as far as nature allows, around the present figures

France Rebuilds

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 7.—France tonight abandoned her last hopes of obtaining peace from the structure of the Versailles Treaty, and set out toward building an entire new system of foreign policy aimed at collaboration with Great Britain, Italy and Germany.

The French Senate foreign affairs commission, after listening to Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet's three-hour explanation of the "Peace of Munich" and the international realignment which it created, agreed the Versailles "political system" is dead.

In order to maintain her security, France must establish a new policy based first of all on friendship with Britain and Italy, the Senate commission decided.

New Envoy to Rome

Bonnet announced two steps were being taken already to bring about the new course of foreign policy as rapidly as possible.

A new ambassador to Rome, probably Andre Francois-Poncet, who now is ambassador to Berlin, is expected to be named Tuesday. This will open the way to a restoration of friendship pact negotiations which broke down last March because of conflicting interests in the Spanish civil war.

Bonnet also revealed the government is considering establishing diplomatic relations with Insurgent Spain by appointing an envoy to Generalissimo Franco's Burgos headquarters.

"We hope this will hasten the end of the war in Spain," Bonnet said.

Hitler Wasn't Bluffing

The foreign affairs commission approved the role played by Premier Daladier at Munich as "the only reasonable policy" after Bonnet said:

"The government now has proof that Chancellor Hitler was not bluffing. If the Munich meeting had not occurred Europe would now be at war."

As a result of the four-power meeting which surrendered Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland to Hitler, Bonnet said the way had been opened for a possible solution of all European problems on which depends the world's economic prosperity and general peace."

An official communique after the session of the foreign affairs committee said that Bonnet described in detail the following developments:

Sees National Peril Worst in 10 Years
Co-ordination Needed
Congress May Act

By the United Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Concerned over the spy menace in America, which he considers has become a national problem, President Roosevelt tonight studied a plan of action designed to root out the agents of foreign governments.

The Chief Executive revealed that existing Federal machinery was not sufficiently co-ordinated to meet the problem adequately and indicated that a special set-up within the Government might be necessary if espionage is to be combated successfully.

Mr. Roosevelt, in response to questions at his press conference, said spying in this country was on a much larger scale than ten years ago and that foreign agents were concentrating on the Nation's military and naval establishments.

National Problem Seen

He said the situation presented a national problem, adding that the Government's objective was to separate two forms of activities by foreign governments within our borders—dissemination of propaganda and military and naval spying.

Spy activities, he said, occupied his attention at the summer White House earlier in the week when he conferred with Lamar Hardy, United States Attorney for New York who is prosecuting a German spy ring.

At present the Federal Government is carrying on its war against spies through the State Department, Treasury, Federal Bureau of Investigation and the intelligence branches of the Army and Navy.

Co-ordination Held Need

Through proper co-ordination Mr. Roosevelt feels that much greater efficiency could be attained without asking Congress for additional funds to enable the Government to track down its enemies.

The President revealed that he would leave Sunday night for Washington for a week, then return here.

He said week-end guests here would be Dr. and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter and then cautioned correspondents not to "go out on a limb" and attach undue significance to the visit.

Frankfurter, an old friend and adviser of the President, has been talked of for the existing United States Supreme Court vacancy.

The President said he hoped soon to see Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, who is running for re-election. Observers were of the opinion that they would meet be-

Brazil Asked To Give Coffee For Spanish Relief

By the Associated Press.

The Brazilian Embassy cabled its government last night an American Red Cross request for 10,000 bags of surplus coffee for relief of war victims in both Loyalist and Insurgent Spain.

Maritime Commission officials, meanwhile, said this government's American Republics Line would transport the coffee to New York from Santos without charge. At the Red Cross, it was said the coffee would be forwarded from this country to France aboard other vessels of the Maritime Commission and delivered to the American Friends Society for distribution in Spain.

Southwest Africans Request Plebiscite on Joining Reich

By the Associated Press.

Windhoek, Southwest Africa, Oct. 7.—The administrator of Southwest Africa was urged by a political meeting today to take action looking toward a plebiscite to determine whether this former German colony should be restored to Germany or remain under British rule.

A resolution adopted by the Omaruru branch of the United Nationalist Southwest Africa Party asked the administrator to summon the Legislature to arrange for a vote on the question of ending the League of Nations mandate and either returning the territory to the Reich or annexing it to the Union of South Africa, the British dominion which holds the mandate.

Hitler Eyes Colonies

Reichsfuehrer Hitler has again turned his eyes toward the "lost" German colonies, return of which he demanded last year.

Political activity in Southwest Africa, having for its purpose a showdown on the question of return of the territory to Germany, is admittedly the result of Hitler's campaign for recovery of the colonies. This demand is a reversal of the position he assumed in "Mein Kampf," when he opposed the idea of a colonial empire.

Southwest Africa has an area of 317,725 square miles and a total population of 360,000, mostly natives. The region was annexed by Germany in 1884, but was surrendered to the forces of the Union of South Africa on July 9, 1915, in the early part of the World War.

In discussions relating to the return of Germany's colonies, Southwest Africa has been regarded as one of the most likely to be returned.

The population of the region includes 30,000 persons of European ancestry, including 21,000 South Africans (mixed Dutch and British

Court Upholds 'Penalty' on Tobacco Quota

Overselling Is Issue
Injunction Dissolved
Fees Are Impounded

By the Associated Press.

Macon, Ga., Oct. 7.—A three-judge Federal court ruled today that tobacco farmers who oversell their marketing quotas may be validly "penalized" under Federal crop marketing provisions.

Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of Atlanta, said in the opinion that if regulation of marketing of crops is needed, Congress has the authority, and not the States.

The tobacco marketing act, he ruled, deals only with planting and production.

The suit was brought in the Valdosta, Ga., Division of Federal Court by a group of producers against Nat Smith, Agricultural Adjustment Administration official. The United States was permitted to intervene because the 50 per cent penalty tax levied on tobacco sold in excess of quotas would go to the Secretary of Agriculture.

The court ruled that application of the act was not unconstitutional and dissolved an injunction obtained by growers at the beginning of the 1938 marketing season. It ordered impounded fees to go to the Government. The growers can appeal the case to the Supreme Court.

Md. Resort Mayor Defies Nice Over D. C. Auto Tags

Michael Lane, Washington attorney and mayor of North eBach, Md., yesterday defied Gov. Nice to have State policemen arrest cottage-owners who try to vote November 8 if their automobiles bear District of Columbia tags.

"Let him try and do it," said Lane. "I don't know of anything in Maryland's election laws that requires a Maryland voter to have Maryland license tags."

Gov. Nice made his threat while on a tour of Calvert County two days ago. He said he had been told that more than 500 summer cottage-dwellers at North Beach who live most of the time in Washington had been registered since the last election.

ADA Proposes Low-Rent Plan To Obtain Loan

Idea Offered to Straus
'Taxes' Would Pay U. S.
Insists on 100% Aid

By James D. Secrest.

A unique plan for providing new low-cost houses for the District's "lowest income group," including families on relief, was approved yesterday by the Alley Dwelling Authority and submitted to Nathan Straus, United States Housing Authority administrator, as an alternative to a Federal subsidy proposal.

Devised by John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, the plan will permit a low rent scale that drops below that demanded by the USHA for a fourth of the District's low-cost houses.

At the same time, ADA will keep its projects on a self-sustaining basis and adhere to its original application for a 100 per cent loan of $10,641,021 from the USHA instead of amending it to borrow only 90 per cent from the USHA and 10 per cent from the District of Columbia.

1,000 Homes For Poorest

Ihlder said the new plan will enable the ADA to provide homes for low income groups all along the line from families on relief to those with incomes of $1,654 a year.

Close to 1,000 homes of nearly 4,000 planned, or a fourth of all those to be built with the USHA loan will be rented to families whose average income is $500 or less. Eventually, this figure will grow to 5,000 as the total number of houses increases, as expected, to 20,000.

Alexandrian Hit By Trolley Is 67th Traffic Fatality

James P. Pugh, 60-year-old retired railroad worker, was fatally injured when struck yesterday by a street car at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Pugh, police said, was crossing the street and apparently failed to see the trolley. Motorman Thomas Byrd, 41, of 1244 D street northeast, was unable to stop the car in time to avoid the accident.

Pugh lived at Alexandria.

He is survived by seven children: Daisy, with whom he lived; Elizabeth, Mrs. Myrtle Smith, Mrs. Mernie Stone, Charles, Clarence and Edward Pugh.

Death of Pugh raised the traffic toll for the year to 67. The record at this time last year was 76.

Altoona, Pa., Oct. 7.—"The 'little New Deal' has gone off on a spree-e-e—"

A full-throated quartet of male huskies bears down on words and chorus. It is "Pennsylvania's Republican victory song" as sung by four immaculate miners from Judge Arthur H. James' home town of Plymouth.

Harmony Keynote

The swarthy singers are adorned in spotless blue overalls. Each wears a white miner's cap with lamp attached. And each headpiece is labeled "James." There is no accompaniment, but the words tumble out in a certain harmony—

"Work will come when James has won,
"Honest pay for everyone;—
"When our taxes come down,
"Then we'll all go to town
"In the true American way-ay-ay."

The scene is any county seat or village within a hundred-mile radius of this industrial community. The stunt was thought up by Judge James himself to add zest to a campaign already sizzling. And it strikes just the right tempo for the speech the former mine breaker boy is about to make, assailing the "little New Deal," roasting the Earle administration and promising jobs in private industry "when" Republicans return to power.

Republicans of Maine and other States may swing to the left of the New Deal, but not James. The party's hope in this Keystone gubernatorial handicap (and, who knows, for 1940?), rides the same old conservative elephant. But he rides it with the abandon of a circus trouper.

Faces of unemployed workers ripple as he opens with a jest at his own appearance. He tells the same jokes at every stop, but they usually get a laugh.

The red-haired homely superior court judge runs on about the woman who asked who he was, and when told, said, "He doesn't look so hot." And he tells about the man in the courtroom who said the judge "looks like a bad customer," and about the farmer "who saw my picture in the comics."

Finances Tangled, Minister Ends Life in Flames

Beaumont, Tex., Oct. 7 (AP).—Officers said tonight the Rev. O. J. Schmidt, 36-year-old Lutheran minister, whose body was found near his burned automobile today, had committed suicide by burning.

J. Howard Allen, deputy sheriff, signed the death certificate with "suicide by burning," and H. B. Ogden, justice of the peace, said he would make the same finding in his coroner's verdict.

The minister, who had been missing six days, was said to have been despondent over the financial affairs of his church.

Garbo Returns Un-Sphinxed—Yes, She Likes Babies!

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 7.—Greta Garbo came back from Europe today and in an atmosphere of high excitement and quiet bantering unexpectedly dropped the role of the Swedish sphinx to talk about babies, the blessings of privacy and the music of Leopold Stokowski, the orchestra conductor.

Gone was much of the old secrecy, the impatience. Garbo was speaking in well-nigh faultless English. But of that momentous matter of how she and Stokowski feel about each other, whether they are married or are going to be, she was as reticent as she always has been about her private life.

For those who had seen Garbo before, it was a highly transformed young woman who stepped lightly through the library doorway of the Kungsholm—a slender Garbo, pale of face, uncurled blond hair to her shoulders, a faint smile on her lips, innocent of rouge.

One of the women in tourist class had given birth to a baby on the voyage and Garbo, among others, had visited the mother and contributed to a fund for its clothing. Yes, she liked babies.

That prompted some one to ask her if she would like to have babies of her own. Perhaps, she said, but "the world seems too difficult now."

Later she amended this, explaining she meant the world was "difficult" because of the imminence of war. She had no wish to raise children to go to war, she said.

Were she and Stokowski married? "I'm afraid you'd all know if I were married," she said. P P

"If you were marrying what sort of a man would you select?"

"The right one," she smiled.

"A musician?" asked some one.

Bombshell for A. F. L.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 7.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, called today for a special session of his executive council after Daniel Tobin, head of the International Teamsters Union, appealed to the fifty-eighth annual convention for labor peace and a united labor movement.

Green's call for the council meeting immediately revived speculation the federation's high command may soon take decisive action, not only on the question of making peace with John L. Lewis' C. I. O., but also on the personal peace plea from President Roosevelt.

Last-Hour Appeal

Gaining the convention floor just as the federation leaders started their drive to win indorsement of their plans seeking amendments to the Wagner labor act, Tobin thundered an appeal to the delegates "not to leave this convention until "we make further efforts to come together with the contending parties in the labor movement."

The leader of 350,000 members of the Teamsters' Union, one of the biggest affiliated in the American Federation of Labor, told the delegates that amendments to the controversial Wagner act would not settle the Federation's complaints against the Labor Board.

"All the legislation they enact in Washington," he said, "cannot straighten out these misunderstandings until labor is reunited in one body, as it should be."

With 7,000,000 or 10,000,000 workers banded together in a united movement, he shouted, "we could tell the Administration, whether it be Republican or Democratic, what the American workers are entitled to and what they should have."

"That," he added with emphasis, "is the key to this whole situation.

"If you leave this convention without giving the executive council specific instructions (for peace) the responsibility is on you and not on the council," he said.

Sudden Anticlimax

Tobin's plea for unity was voiced in the same convention hall where only last Tuesday, President Green read a message from Mr. Roosevelt expressing hope that labor's strife could be terminated to save the workers from the reaction against the three-year-old split.

Tobin is a member of the powerful executive council, and his sudden injection of a peace plea into the convention presaged the possibility of a controversy within the council.

John Coffield, president of the Plumbers Union and a member of the council, remarked to newspapermen:

"It is utterly impossible. We have gone on record on this question. Why should we turn back now?"

But off the convention floor during the noon recess, Tobin said that if neither the convention nor the council acted, "they will hear from the membership."

During Tobin's speech, Green rose

Auto Workers Strike

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 7.—The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers' demand for a 32-hour week in the automobile industry today resulted in a shutdown of two large plants here, throwing approximately 15,000 men into idleness.

The main plant of the Plymouth Motor Corporation, a Chrysler division, closed when more than 3,000 men refused to report for the dayshift. The men massed around the plant gates, joining nearly 3,000 night shift workers in what police said was a peaceful demonstration against working more than 32 hours a week.

A few hours later the Briggs Manufacturing Co.'s Mack avenue plant, which supplies Plymouth with bodies, was closed until Plymouth resumes operations. It employs approximately 9,000 men.

Opposed to Short Week

The U. A. W. Briggs local telegraphed a protest of the shutdown to the union's international executive board, meeting at Washington.

Emil Mazey, president of the Briggs local, said its members were "unalterably opposed" to the short week unless they were given "40-hour wages."

In Flint, Mich., Jack Little, president of U. A. W. Local 156, said a strike vote probably would be taken Saturday in the Buick division of General Motors. The 32-hour week was one of several demands.

Richard T. Frankensteen, U. A. W. vice president, said at Washington the union's Chrysler committee would meet Monday with H. L. Weckler, Chrysler vice president, to discuss the Plymouth shutdown.

Not Called Strike

Weckler, in Detroit, charged the Plymouth stoppage was in violation of the company's contract with the union. C. G. Edelen, chief shop steward of the Plymouth U. A. W. unit, said the union's contract with the company provides a 32-hour week so long as employment remains below normal.

Edelen said the company had notified the union a 40-hour week would be put into effect today without increasing employment. Until today the 32-hour week has been in effect in most departments.

Union officials said the Plymouth demonstration was not a strike, and the men would return to work Monday. They said, however, the men would not work more than 32 hours in the week.

Rails Blame Congress for Pay Cut's Need

Aid Denied, Enochs Says 'Weasel Words' Charged Labor to State Case

By Sidney Olson.

The failure of Congress at its last session to enact legislation relieving railroad distress decided rail management on a 15 per cent wage reduction as another way out, H. A. Enochs, rail executive, told the President's emergency fact finding board yesterday.

Enochs, heavy-set former baggage hand, who is chairman of the carriers' joint conference committee, summed up the railroads' case as a plain matter of disappearance of the carriers' net earning power.

He said there were "weasel words" when the rail executives and workers sought Congressional aid for the roads, "even going to see President Roosevelt and Senator Wheeler, of Montana," the Democratic chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

Says They Won't Face Facts

He added pointedly:

"Ever since May our employes have refused to face the facts. We have held national conferences with them to no avail. We have invoked the services of the National Mediation Board to no avail. We have offered to submit the dispute to an arbitration board, whose decision, by law, is binding. The employes refused arbitration. Instead, they took a strike vote. That is why we are here today."

Railway labor begins presentation of its case today. Having consumed four hours of its allotted 30 in cross-examination, the labor executives will use about eight witnesses over the remaining 26 hours. The railroads then have a rebuttal period and labor a surrebuttal period.

Charles M. Hay, of the Railway Labor Executives Association, last night presented to the press a resolution which he suggested the railroads present to the board as the "most graceful way out."

The resolution states basically that "whereas" the railroads realize that a wage cut would "tend to encourage wage cuts in other industries and thereby greatly affect general business and react harmfully on the railroad business," and "might interfere with the present national recovery program," therefore:

"We deem it our duty as patriotic citizens to co-operate with other industrial leaders and leaders of Government in the encouragement of business improvement and general recovery, be it resolved, we withdraw the application of a 15 per cent wage cut."

Hay admitted smilingly that he thought there was little chance "the railroads will see the light and adopt my resolution"

Others Not Considered

When James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard Law School, and former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, now sitting as a board member, asked Enochs: "Have you considered the wage cut's effect on other industries?" the latter answered swiftly:

"We didn't give it a thought. That's an argument, but not a valid one. I don't think railroad wages have any effect on automobile or steel or any other wages. They never have."

Earlier, Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, slapped at the statement of rail labor spokesmen that the wage cut would cause a $250,000,000 reduction in purchasing power.

Wouldn't Horde Money

"I cannot follow their reasoning," he said. "That money is not going into a box. It will be paid out for interest on bonds, purchasing new equipment and other channels that actually create purchasing power."

Rail labor counsel differed emphatically, as Hay, counsel for 18 brotherhoods, said flatly:

"The wage cut would cause a general wage reduction in all industries. It would have a tragic effect upon the market for automobiles, steel and other industries that depend on national purchasing power. It would turn the country to a philosophy of lower wages and defeat the aims of the Administration and business leaders we term liberal."

Connelly had said present conditions made it impossible for a railroad company to expand or improve its property. He said the Northern Pacific needs to expand its equipment purchases and that this could be achieved with savings from the proposed wage cut.

Disputes Labor's Claim

He disputed the labor claim that over-capitalization was a cause of trouble for his line's ability to pay its way. He said:

"Instead of being over-capitalized as charged, the Northern Pacific is substantially under-capitalized. Properties are worth $145,000,000 more than the par value of outstanding stocks and bonds." He said these properties included half interests in the Burlington & Spokane Portland & Seattle railroads; coal properties in Montana and Washington and iron ore properties on the Mesabi and Cuyuna ranges.

Detroit, Oct. 7 (AP).—Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, told the opening session of the National Woman's Party biennial convention today that the world never would have been confronted by the crisis through which it just passed if woman had been granted an equal share in government.

Mrs. Jenckes blamed "the madness of men" for international friction and the "subjugation of nations.

American women, Mrs. Jenckes said, hate war and are "tired of providing 'cannon fodder.'"

The three-day convention is seeking crystallization of public opinion to establish equal rights for women by constitutional amendment.

Galen L. Tait, unsuccessful candidate for the Maryland Republican senatorial nomination, reported to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday he had received contributions of $1,196 and had spent $2,251 in his campaign since filing previous reports.

Tait's first report listed no contributions and expenditures of $789. His second listed no contributions and expenditures of $711. The last report showed contributions of $346 from Mrs. Galen Tait, $500 from Jacob France, Baltimore, $250 from John W. Garrett, Baltimore, and $100 from W. Bladen Lowndes, of Chevy Chase. In addition Tait gave $500.

Milwaukee, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Democratic State Central Committee today named State Senator Harry W. Bolens, of Port Washington, as the party's candidate for Governor in the November 8 election.

He fills the place on the ticket left vacant by the withdrawal of Robert K. Henry, of Jefferson, coalition candidate, who won the nomination.

The vacancy for lieutenant governor, left when Coalitionist Walter S. Goodland (Republican), of Racine, withdrew to run on the Republican ticket, was filled with the name of State Senator Max Galasinski, Milwaukee. M. J. Cepress, Wausau, was named to run for State treasurer in place of Coalitionist John M. Smith, of Shell Lake, who also turned to the Republican ticket.

dently, he shouts: "Can that far juror over there hear me?" That gets a laugh, too.

Now the Republican nominee to succeed "Big George" Earle as Governor is ready to talk serious campaign business. He speaks in soothing, sympathetic tones to those who are unemployed, or who have children in school with no jobs awaiting them. This, he tells his audience, is due in large measure to the tax policies of the Earle administration, which, he says, have forced plants to close down or move to other States.

He calls Earle's State government "the disaster express" and says the Governor is "reeling dizzily on the bridge as he frantically strives to steer the craft into 'White-Wash Bay!'"

James has four main issues and he always gets around to a few words on each of them—the "flight of industry" to other States for refuge from taxes; the "macing" of State and relief workers by the State Democratic organization; the new planning and social theories of Gov. Earle, and the "mock trial" of serious charges against Earle and other Democratic leaders at Harrisburg.

Sees Some Evil

"The men and women of this State have become painfully aware that the appearance of evil exists at Harrisburg," he will shout. "They would like to know the details."

Gov. Earle's short-circuiting of a grand jury investigation by special session action, the so-called legislative "white-wash" investigation launched in its stead, and the State Supreme Court's over-ruler of the grand jury ban, remain this campaign's big suestion mark in their effect on the November ballot.

Callous independents say Pennsylvania voters are case-hardened to that sort of thing and "don't care." Democratic zealots ask, "Well, when it is all added up, what have they got on Earle?"

But James insists it will register a telling protest against Earle and his Democratic running mate for the Governorship, Charles Alvin Jones, who has promised to carry on where Earle left off.

A working agreement between James and Senator Davis, Republican nominee for re-election to the Senate, presents an anomalous aspect to the Republican campaign. The veteran Davis, Secretary of Labor under three Republican regimes, always has bucked the organization and was cool to James in the primaries. Now the two are pulling together like farm horses, with the same wealthy organization backers, and generally appear on the same platform. Davis will tap a labor segment James cannot hope to reach. Nonpartisan analysts generally accord him the lead at present over other candidates in the race.

Rebuked by A. F. of L.

Davis' close work with James has cost him a pat on the back from the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor. This State labor unit bluntly defied national A. F. of L. President William Green's indorsement of the Senator to throw its support solely behind the Earle ticket. James L. McDevitt, president of the Pennsylvania A. F. of L., charged Davis "is keeping bad company." James slapped back in Davis' defense with a charge that McDevitt's action was prompted by the fact that he holds a State job under Earle as a member of the unemployment compensation board.

Labor campaign complications now find both the State A. F. of L. and the State C. I. O. organizations, (warriors to the death in jurisdictional disputes), now allied in surface peace behind the same candidate, the Democratic Governor. Despite their opposition, Davis is certain to poll a large vote from both camps—mine and mill workers and farmers who have voted before for "Puddler Jim" and may again.

Before every speaking tour, Davis and James hold a conference and decide what each is going to talk about. Friends of both say that Davis frequently "steals" some of Judge James' stuff. Davis usually goes on ahead of James and his speeches for the most part are the kind he has been winning with for many years, with some new wrinkles for him. He attacks both Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Secretary of State Hull as "dictators"—Wallace because of New Deal farm "scarcity" policies, and Hull because of reciprocal trade agreements that he says let competitive foreign farm products into the country.

Davis always puts in a plug for James. It was on Judge James' insistence, Davis tells voters, that a liberal relief plank was inserted in the Republican State platform.

While accusing the Democratic organization of packing WPA rolls for political purposes, and "macing employes for campaign contributions, Senator and judge both deny Democratic charges that James would cut off relief. James has added the "mother, home" appeal.

"I can still see my mother bending over her washboard on Monday morning while her eight children witnessed her suffering the hardships of the average mining family in my home community of Plymouth," the Superior Court judge puts in. "Does anyone think I would cut off relief?"

The James relief plank in the Republican State platform is an extremely liberal one for the G. O. P., but Democrats charge James won't stand by it. It reads:

"We pledge ample relief to the unemployed free from party favoritism and political macing, and we pledge co-operation with the WPA and other similar Government projects until private employment is restored. We believe in the principle of Government responsibility for the destitute unemployed. To the unemployed we say: 'We will not let you down; we will lift you up.'"

James says he wants to "humanize relief" and divorce politics from it.

James' answer to the Earle-Jones pilgrimage to Hyde Park yesterday was that "President Roosevelt dare not come into Pennsylvania.

"It would be political suicide for him to lend his name and prestige as a cloak for corruption at Harrisburg—for him to take a brush and join the white-wash brigade."

Guffey, Stern Sued for Libel By Philadelphia Publisher

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 7 (AP).—Six libel suits were filed today by M. L. Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, as an outgrowth of speeches in Pennsylvania's turbulent election campaign.

U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who made a radio speech last night, was the first sued.

Later today, civil actions were filed against:

The Philadelphia Record; J. David Stern, publisher of the Record; Albert M. Greenfield, Philadelphia real estate man and prominent Democrat; Philadelphia radio station WFIL over which Guffey spoke, and Samuel R. Rosenbaum, president of WFIL.

The Philadelphia Record, like the Inquirer a morning newspaper, published the Guffey speech. Greenfield was named in connection with a speech made September 21.

Attorneys made no statement of claim presenting the action against Guffey.

The Senator coupled criticism of Annenberg with an attack on the Republican State organization and ticket in a speech here last night. Guffey is chairman of the Democratic State campaign committee.

Before the speech attorneys for Annenberg advised the station they believed the speech libelous. Rosenbaum replied offering Annenberg "the facilities of this station and (Quaker) network on equal terms."

Pittsburgh, Oct. 7 (AP).—Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, said today:

"I am glad Mr. Annenberg had the courage to sue me . . . I'll go to Philadelphia the first of next week and accept service of that suit."

Lehman Gets Data From Geoghan

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 7.—A showdown on efforts of City Investigator William B. Herlands to supersede Brooklyn District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan with a special prosecutor empowered to inquire into general charges of official corruption among law enforcement agencies in that borough approached rapidly tonight.

Gov. Lehman asked Herlands to bring forward a "sworn petition" in support of his request that Geoghan be set aside.

At the same time, he called on Geoghan to submit to him the minutes of grand jury proceedings which had formed a basis, in part, for Herlands' move against the District attorney.

Geoghan, who twice before has been superseded, once at his own request, was re-elected in his last campaign with an overwhelming vote. He sent to Lehman today a ten-page defense of his official conduct, suggesting Herlands was motivated by politics.

Lehman asked both Herlands and Geoghan to turn in the data by noon tomorrow, but late today Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, Herlands' chief, appealed to the Governor to extend the deadline by 48 hours, saying it was "physically impossible" to comply sooner. This extension then was granted to both Herlands and Geoghan.

U. S. to Investigate Dumping of Oil by Mexico in Texas

The Treasury Department, it was learned yesterday, has ordered an investigation of reports that large quantities of Mexican crude oil are being dumped into Texas for refining and resale.

The North Texas Oil and Gas Association, in filing the complaint, asked that the Secretary of the Treasury invoke the provision of the anti-dumping act of 1921, which gives the Secretary authority to apply a rate of duty upon imports dumped into the United States to compensate between the price at which it is imported and the value of the product in the markets of the exporting country.

It is claimed that the cost of the oil to American purchasers represents around 65 cents a barrel, whereas the going price of oil in Mexico is approximately $1 a barrel. Even with the excise tax of about 21 cents a barrel, the Mexican product's cost is only 86 cents, as against the Mexican price of $1.

Bar Finds Some State Rules Void Federal Courts

Group Hears Tolman
Special Procedure Hit
Simplicity Cited

The effort of the United States Supreme Court, working through a special advisory committee, to eliminate the maze of technicalities in civil cases in Federal courts may be nullified in some States, at least in part, by district judges employing rules in effect in State courts in particular situations.

This was disclosed yesterday as the institute on the new rules of civil procedure in Federal courts conducted by the American Bar Association in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building concluded its second day.

Edgar B. Tolman, Chicago attorney and secretary of the Supreme Court advisory committee, brought to the attention of the institute the fact some district courts are making many special rules of their own to take care of situations which, in their judgment, are not covered by the new rules, made applicable by the Supreme Court to the entire country.

Effective September 16

The central purpose of the new rules, which became effective September 16, is to simplify pleading and trials, clear up congested civil dockets and remove obstructions to justice inherent in elaborate legal technicalities. A record gathering of nearly 1,000 lawyers are attending the institute to learn how to plead before Federal courts under the simplified rules.

Tolman urged district judges not to make rules in advance to apply to special situations but to take each matter as it arises and settle it then and there, giving counsel for both sides the privilege of being heard on the ruling.

This ought to be a rare occurence, he said, since the 86 new rules will cover almost everything that comes up. Once in a while, he explained, a question will arise to which the rules do not apply. The purpose of Rule 83, which gives district courts the right to regulate their practice in any way not inconsistent with the rules where the rules do not cover a particular matter, is to permit them to meet these situations, Mr. Tolman said.

Stresses Simplicity

"I have heard a rumor—yes, more than a rumor—" he declared, "that some district courts are making too many rules. I understand that in one great jurisdiction there is a rule providing that where anything is not dealt with by the new rules the pre-existing procedural rules of the State, which is governed by more than 1,100 statutory provisions and by as many rules of court, are to be examined to cover these gaps.

"That is going back to the thing that the committee and the rules have turned their backs on.

"Our idea is to forget this complicated system of the past, with all its multiplicity of unnecessary provisions, and to have a simple, elastic, manageable situation under which there will be as few rules as possible and that these may be lasting.

"Every command that you lay upon a lawyer or a litigant that he must do this or that is a potential cause of reversal of the just judgment for causes in no way connected with the merits of the case. The spirit of these rules is to put an end to that sort of thing and to let justice be administered according to justice and not according to the necessity of complying with any empty form."

Does Not Apply to Capital

Tolman explained his statement did not apply to the District of Columbia, since justices of the District Supreme Court are familiar with the purpose of the new rules. Some judges, however, have interpreted Rule 83 to mean that each Federal district court is to build up a body of its own rules to cover special matters.

The advisory committee's intention, Tolman said, is to have the new rules serve as standing rules and not to clog down procedure again by adding to them.

The new rules, he declared, do not alter the right of common law trial by jury as guaranteed by the Bill of Rights. Although demands were made for reforms in connection with jury trials in civil cases, he said, changes are blocked by the Constitution even if they had been deemed wise.

Juvenile Court Thieves Get Clock and Rosary

Jewish Festival Of Succoth Starts Here Tomorrow

Washington Jews tomorrow will launch an observance of the traditional festival of Succoth—Feast of Tabernacles—which will end eight days later with completion of the annual cycle of readings from the Torah, the scroll of the Pentateuch.

In Israel Succoth marked the last of three festivals on which the people made annual pilgrimages to the temple, presenting offerings of thanksgiving for the blessings of the year. It also was celebrated as the Feast of the Ingathering, and commemorates God's watchful care over the Israelites as they dwelt in their frail huts in their journey through the wilderness.

This festival also is destined to be a Feast of Nations, according to a prediction by the Prophet Zechariah (chapter 14) . . . "When all those who are left from among the nations of the earth after the great battles of destruction that ensue, they shall go up to Jerusalem year by year to celebrate the Feast of Succoth."

Colored Renting Restriction Questioned in District Court

Neighbors Bring Suit After Protest
Landlord and Tenant Named in Particulars
Says Agent Let Space Without Consultation

The validity of covenants which forbid colored persons to own or occupy property in the Parkview section was called in question yesterday by an action filed to enforce one of the covenants in District Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Fritter, 403 Columbia road northwest; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Currier, 3012 Park place northwest, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Clark, 442 Irving place northwest, sued Mr. and Mrs. David Cohen, 3400 P street northwest, and a man renting property from the Cohens. The plaintiffs claimed the tenant was colored.

The complaint, filed by Attorneys James A. Crooks and Henry Gilligan, cited a restrictive covenant signed by property owners in 1925 which barred the neighborhood to colored persons for 21 years. The complaint said that Cohen, who runs a grocery store, bought the property in 1928 and a few weeks ago rented it to a colored man. The complaint declared a written protest was ignored and that occupancy of the property by the tenant was "harmful, detrimental and subversive of the peace of mind, comfort and property rights" of the plaintiffs.

The court was asked to enjoin Cohen from renting or selling his property to colored persons while the covenant is in effect and to enjoin the tenant from occupying the premises while the case is being settled. The plaintiffs also asked for attorney fees and court costs.

Cohen said he rented the property through an agent and did not know the tenant. Morris Silberg, his attorney, said that "it appears the character of the neighborhood has changed since these covenants were signed, and I think there may be a question whether this change may not have the effect of causing these covenants to have lost their force."

Price Ban Sought In Liquor Ads

A proposed regulation to prohibit advertising of liquor prices by retailers is opposed by a relatively small group, spokesmen for the District Retail Liquor Dealers' Association declared yesterday.

Coupled with this statement was a report handed the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that an attempt would be made in Congress to foster a State monopoly system for the District.

William Stein, president of the association, in a prepared statement declared the movement for the regulation originated in the liquor business.

"We are confident that it represents the best thought of the majority of those engaged in the business," he said. "There are those in the industry who do not believe in the pending regulation. We are convinced they are a small number."

The proposed regulation, which the ABC board has already approved, will be the subject of a public hearing Tuesday at the District Building.

Members of the opposition group appeared at the District Building claiming the entire move was an attempt to "run the cut rate stores out of business."

Police Court Aides See Double as 2 Answer to 1 Name

When the clerk of Police Court yesterday called the case of Dominic Antonelli, two men stepped forward. The clerk stared at the two and they stared at each other.

"Which of you is Dominic Antonelli?" boomed the clerk.

"I am," both replied.

Court was thrown into confusion, until examination revealed that one of the defendants was Dominic Antonelli, the other Domenic Antonioli.

Dominic then was fined $25 by Judge Walter Casey after pleading guilty to selling misbranded olive oil. He operates a stand at Northeast Market, Fifth street and Florida avenue. The case of Domenic was continued until October 11. He is charged with violation of the meat-inspection act by bringing tainted meat into the District to be sold. A resident of Tuxedo, Md., Domenic operates a meat market at 417 Morse street northeast.

During the judicial proceedings Meyer Weinstein, who had previously bonded Dominic for $100, put up $200 bond for Domenic.

Colonies

stock), 6,000 Germans naturalized as South African citizens, and 3,000 German nationals.

The German colonial empire, surrendered to the Allies under the terms of Article 119 of the Versailles Treaty, comprised an area of approximately 1,127,000 square miles, which is about six times as large as the fatherland.

Other African colonies consist of German East Africa, a region of 370,000 miles under Belgian and British mandate; the African Cameroons, 305,000 square miles under French and British mandate, and African Togoland, an area of 34,439 square miles under French and British mandate.

The German propaganda machine started long ago to build up a demand in the colonies for restoration to Germany. Reports have come from New Guinea that children had been taught by missionaries to shout "Heil Hitler!" and to use the swastika emblem.

Islands in Pacific

New Guinea, part of a large island north of Australia, has 93,000 square miles and is under Australian mandate. Outside of the African colonies, the former German colonies consist of numerous islands in the Pacific.

Return of the African colonies, it has been contended in England and France, would endanger the security of those nations. The British and French military have argued that cession of the African territories to Germany would give the Reich power to cut communications between southern, eastern and central Africa and western Europe.

Belief is that, in any negotiations for return of the colonies, the British and French military would have a great deal to say. Abandonment to Germany of the Cameroons, it is contended, would increase the danger of war.

Air Bases Feared

Restoration of Tanganyika and Kenya, British military experts have maintained, would make it possible for Germany to establish air and submarine bases in this region. The areas could be formed into a bloc with Italian Somaliland, Eritrea and Ethiopia, threatening Anglo-Egyptian Sudan to the northwest and British Somaliland, French Somaliland and the Red Sea to the northeast.

Southwest Africa is regarded by the Union of South Africa and Rhodesia as a vital bulwark in their defense systems.

From the German viewpoint, the clamor for return of the colonies assumes a psychological turn. So far as a source of raw materials is concerned, the colonies concededly offer no great and certainly no immedite advantages. But but their restoration would be regarded as a great moral victory by the German people.

"Keep Up With Joneses"

The demand for recovery of the colonies has been described as essentially a desire to "keep up with the Joneses." Lack of colonies or mandates is looked upon by the German as a mark of inequality and inferior status as compared with other great powers.

Hitler's reversal of attitude on the question of a colonial empire is believed to have been actuated by the psychological considerations present in the situation.

Recovery of all or part of the Pacific islands would complicate the situation in the Far East. Germany would be a neighbor of the Philippines.

Japanese Warn French, Arming At Shanghai

Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, Oct. 7.—The Japanese press campaign against authorities of the French Concession as well as French diplomatic and consular officials in the Far East reached a climax today.

The Shanghai Mainichi, a Japanese newspaper published in the Hongkong area, under control of Japanese army and navy authorities, warned the French "to hold themselves responsible for any consequences arising from their alleged failure to grasp the situation here."

The serious animosities of the Japanese against the French date back to last July when the French occupied the Paracel Islands, in the China Sea, 150 miles east of Annam, French Indo-China, and joined with Great Britain in warning Japan against occupation of Hainan Island, which is part of China's Kwangtung Province.

Dewey Opens Campaign With Blast at Bossism

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 7.—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, in his first speech of the campaign today to Republican women over the radio, struck at corrupt political machines, and promised that eradication of boss-ridden governments would be a major issue in his battle to unseat Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, his Democratic opponent for re-election.

He mentioned Albany County, dominated for more years than Gov. Lehman has been in the Capitol by the Democratic brother bosses, Daniel P. and Edward J. O'Connell, and said the political machine there "has made a mockery of the election laws." The registration in Albany County, he charged, frequently almost equals the entire adult population of the county.

South Wind to Temper Frosty Morning Here

Frost in suburban Washington was forecast for this morning by the Weather Bureau, which predicted temperatures ranging to just above freezing before dawn. For today the forecast was fair and warmer with gentle winds from the South.

Yesterday's low was 43 degrees at 4:30 a. m. During the day the mercury climbed slowly, reaching a maximum of 53 before plunging downward again at nightfall.

of 900,000 Arabs and 400,000 Jews.

The British are to surrender their mandate over Palestine gradually and let it evolve into an "independent" state, under British domination as in the case of Irak. Palestine will become a military ally of Britain, as Irak and Egypt are, and will continue under its financial and economic influences.

Arabs and Jewish towns and villages in Palestine are to enjoy a local autonomy and full municipal rights subject to a strong, central government which will guarantee all religious, political and civil rights, regardless of race or creed.

Irak's foreign minister has discussed this plan with MacDonald, with War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha, the only Jew in the British Cabinet, and with Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Federation. Whitehall has neither rejected nor accepted it. The official Jewish agency for Palestine has flatly rejected any solution which would "condemn them to minority status in Palestine."

A few months ago, Zionists would have been confident that Whitehall would never consider acceptance of such a plan. Tonight, London Zionists are not so sure. They know the Chamberlain government is committed to a policy of making peace with Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini, even if it means sacrificing Czechoslovakia or Abyssinia.

They know Hitler and, to a lesser extent, Mussolini are driving the Jews from their countries. They suspect that both dictators have been lending moral aid and material assistance to the revolting Arabs. And they hear that in the recent crisis, when Britain appeared to be on the verge of war, she had to give certain pledges to line up her potential allies, the Arabs of Irak, Egypt and Saudi, Arabia.

Only a short time ago officials of the Egyptian government were in London and hinted at the plan which is now being sponsored in concrete shape by the Irak foreign minister. Among the backers of the new plan is the powerful King Ibn Saud. All the forces of Pan-Arabia are being brought to bear against Downing street.

Britain Embarrassed

The Zionists of the world, particularly in London and New York, doubtlessly will launch a counter-attack to preserve the ideal of a Jewish homeland.

The British find themselves caught in an embarrassing position between these two mighty forces, the Jews and the Arabs, because of conflicting promises they made during the World War to gain the active support of both races—the Balfour declaration which promised the Jews a home in Palestine and the McMahon declaration which promised the Arabs all sorts of territory in Palestine which they have been unable to lay hands on due to the presence of the British and the Jews.

British Legion Warned

London, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Instructions to "watch your step" were given tonight to 1,200 blue-uniformed World War veterans of the British Legion who assembled in barracks at Olympia Stadium, ready to leave Monday for Czechoslovakia to maintain order in the Sudetenland.

The British war veterans will act as a "cushion" force between German and Czechoslovak troops pending a final determination of the new Czech frontiers in accordance with the four-power Munich peace agreement.

In addition to the caution "watch your step," the volunteers received chocolates, some cigarettes and a message from Queen Elizabeth, president of the women's auxiliary of the Legion, saying "Good wishes from Her Majesty the Queen . . . May peace and friendship go with you."

Peru Ends 2-Year Ecuador Parleys

By the Associated Press.

Peru closed its boundary delegation offices here yesterday and informed Ecuador the two-year negotiations in Washington were definitely ended.

Dr. Francisco Tudela, chief Peruvian negotiator, delivered a note to Ecuador's chairman, Dr. Homero Viteri Lafronte, which stated Peru's decision to suspend the conferences here was final.

His communication was in reply to a request from Ecuador that the negotiations here be continued. Dr. Tudela said last night Peru had decided to accept an invitation made by Ecuador some time ago to continue negotiations in Lima if the conversations here remained deadlocked.

Roosevelt Urges Drive on Spying in U. S.

Roosevelt

fore the President leaves for the Capital.

The President said he has encouraged Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama to develop the idea of a big football game somewhere in the Deep South, the proceeds to be used for New England storm sufferers.

Mr. Roosevelt termed Graves' effort an act of neighborliness and an example of an unreconstructed rebel helping the 'damn' Yankee.

Conflict Revealed

President Roosevelt's anouncement that he is considering the creation of a special agency to combat foreign espionage brought to light in Washington a conflict of opinion among Army and Navy authorities as to the advisability of such a move.

High authorities in both branches of the service were disturbed by fears that a special counter espionage agency would attract spies and open up information not now easily obtainable. They were disposed to favor increased appropriations for their own intelligence services and increased facilities in the Federal Bureau of Investigation for co-operation with the service intelligence agencies.

Civilian opinion, however, fell in line with the President's suggestion. Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House committee investigating un-American activities, announced he would offer legislation to carry out the President's desire for a more effective curb on the activities of foreign agents. The President indicated he was more concerned about foreign prying in the country's military establishments than about foreign propaganda, but Dies expressed the hope Mr. Roosevelt would broaden his recommendations to include a proposed bill to outlaw organizations under control of foreign governments.

10,000 Soviet Agents

Dies said he has information that "Soviet Russia alone has 10,000 spies and agents in this country."

Some Army and Navy authorities were somewhat surprised by the concern expressed by the President at Hyde Park. Nevertheless, it was recalled that the adequacy of the intelligence divisions of the national defense services was called into question last winter during hearings before the House Naval Affairs Committee on the Navy supplemental appropriation bill.

Some members of Congress were irked by the Navy's lack of information concerning Japan's naval construction program. Naval authorities were unable to inform Congress whether reports that Japan was building battleships of a tonnage variously reported from 42,000 to 48,000 tons were true or false.

Lack of Funds Cited

Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, admitted he did not know much about Japan's construction plans. "But I do know," he added, "that the office of naval intelligence is handicapped by lack of funds."

A high Army source questioned yesterday whether foreign espionage had gotten out of hand. This source indicated there was a "spy racket" in this country, that many persons made a living supplying foreign governments and agents of foreign governments with so-called "military secrets" culled from Army professional journals which were available to anyone who could read.

It was true, this source said, that spies were numerous in the Panama Canal Zone, and that some were active on the West Coast and in New York.

But objections to the creation of a special counter-espionage agency mentioned in military quarters were two: That such an agency would attract spies, who, if they succeeded, as it was believed they would, in slipping into the service, would be in a position to get really valuable information; and, secondly, that a secret espionage police would run the danger of arousing the antipathy of the American people, who, it was argued, dislike the idea of an American Ogpu or Gestapo.

Reich Taking One-Fifth of Czechoslovakia

Bouquet Scratches Hitler Ban on Flowers Follows 150 Hostages Released

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—Germans estimated tonight by October 10 Germany will have annexed nearly one-fifth of Czechoslovakia.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler himself toured his new territory and was scratched on the face by rose thorns when struck by a bouquet thrown by an admirer.

Authorities immediately banned all flower-throwing in the future and even small bouquets in the hands of spectators along his line of march must be seized.

The army prepared to advance tomorrow into the Fifth Zone delimited by the international commission in Berlin. German troops today pushed to completion occupation of the last of the four Sudetenland zones delineated in the Munich four-power conference.

Area Equals Maryland's

When the Fifth Zone is occupied completely by October 10, the best available figures indicated Germany will have annexed 11,500 square miles—an area nearly the size of the State of Maryland. Post-war Czechoslovakia had an area of 54,244 square miles.

There were no official estimates but the Nazi press and, in particular, the economic section of the industrialist Deutsche All-Gemeine Zeitung compared the size of the territory to that of the Prussian Province of Saxony—11,500 square miles.

Germany released 150 Czechoslovak hostages who had been held before the Munich settlement. Czechoslovakia already had discharged political prisoners not under sentence. Two thousand Czechoslovak custom officials, frontier guards and others seized by the Sudeten German "Free Corps" still are held.

Hitler suffered the first mishap in his series of four triumphant tours of Sudetenland in the flower-throwing incident which occurred at Jaegerndorf, in the Fourth Zone of military occupation.

Although medical attention was not needed for the scratches on his face, the accident caused a stir in Nazi officialdom.

Responsibility Fixed

Nazi Party leaders will be held personally responsible for seeing that the ban on flowers in the future is carried out.

Hitler was treated to another day of ovation today in his tour. He was accompanied by his right-hand man, Field Marshal Goering.

Tomorrow the Fuehrer will end his first Sudetenland visit and on Sunday he will open a new theater in Saarbruecken, in the Saar Valley.

Government circles said he may make an "important pronouncement" on French-German relations then.

Autonomy Pledged

Prague, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Czechoslovak government assured Slovakia today of speedy legal action to make the territory an autonomous unit within the republic.

Premier Jan Syrovy told Dr. Joseph Tiso, prime minister of Slovakia, and a delegation from six Slovak parties that the Prague government would work out a plan of equality for them as well as Czechs and sub-Carpathian Russians (Ruthenians).

Completion of this program would fulfill the soldier-premier's aim to bind what was left of Czechoslovakia after the Munich accord into a smoothly working, unified nation.

The government, meanwhile, counselled inhabitants of German-occupied areas of Sudetenland to remain calm and refrain from sacrificing their properties at low prices. It assured them property rights would be regulated by international argeement.

U. S. Note Asks Italy to Modify Her Stand on American Jews

Freedom Accorded Aliens Here Is Stressed 'Inferential Warning' Seen in Some Quarters Ambassador Calls Twice at Foreign Office

By the United Press.

The State Department yesterday made public the text of a note to the Italian government pointing to the freedom accorded Italians temporarily residing in the United States and urging modification of Rome's stand regarding American Jews in Italy.

Some observers viewed the note as an inferential warning that discrimination against American Jews in Italy would call for retaliatory measures against Italian subjects in the United States, but there was no apparent confirmation of this in the text of the communication.

The note was delivered to the Italian foreign office on Wednesday by U. S. Ambassador William Phillips. Phillips called at the foreign office again Thursday, and last night the Italian Grand Council took the note under consideration.

After reciting details of the new Italian anti-Semitic laws, as published in the official Fascist Gazette, the note said:

"While the treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and Italy of 1871 which contained provisions for establishment of residences, has been abrogated, nevertheless Italians who have been properly admitted into the United States may reside wherever they like therein and are accorded the full protection of our laws with respect to their person and property. In general they may freely engage in private business, trade or occupation; they also enjoy religious freedom, and there is no discrimination on the ground of either race or creed.

"My government believes, therefore, that upon further consideration the Italian government will decide that American citizens lawfully residing in Italy will not be discriminated against on account of race or creed and that they will not be subjected to provisions of the nature embodied in the decree-laws in question."

No response had been received late yesterday.

Part of Hull's Program

It was recalled that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull took the lead in establishing an international refugee committee primarily to care for Jewish and political refugees from Germany and Austria, which is now part of the Reich.

Since formation of the committee the United States has been actively opposed to anti-Semitism abroad, and the communication to Italy is seen as a part of that program. Only recently the Italian government began a strong campaign to suppress, Jewish, Hamitic, colored and other non-Aryan races in the kingdom and Italian possessions. Similar notes were sent to Germany when she imposed more drastic anti-Semitic decrees and later when Austria was absorbed.

Rome, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—A new conflict between the Vatican and the Italian government appeared to be brewing tonight as a result of the Fascist Grand Council's sweeping anti-Jewish decrees, particularly its ban on mixed marriage.

Vatican prelates foresaw the possibility of a controversy, and the Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Holy See, protested editorially but with reserve against the marriage decrees which affect not only Jews but Italian Gentiles.

Meanwhile, it appeared the measures expelling Jews from Italy would apply, unless revised, to about 200 American Jews, most of whom represent foreign business firms in Italy.

Vatican officials were apprehensive lest the Grand Council decrees, which brought distress to Italy's 70,000 Jews when they were announced early today, affect the Italo-Vatican concordat.

Virginio Gayda, editor of the Giornale D'Italia, which often speaks for Premier Mussolini, said that several clauses of the concordat might require revision. There was uncertainty whether the church would consent to such changes, particularly in the existing church right to marry two Catholics in religious ceremony, no matter to what race they belong.

Chamber Abolished

Rome (Saturday), Oct. 8 (AP).—The Fascist Grand Council early today decreed abolition of the Italian Chamber of Deputies and establishment in its place of a new Chamber of Fasces and Guilds.

In a step long promised by Premier Mussolini, the Chamber of Deputies, already shorn of virtually all power, will cease to exist at the end of its present session.

Henceforth legislation will be enacted by the Italian Senate and a new lower house composed of representatives of Fascist Party units—each unit known as a Fascio—and of the guilds and corporations into which commerce, labor, industry and the professions have been united by the totalitarian regime.

The Fascist Party and guild representations are to be composed of the members of their two national councils.

Il Duce and the Fascist grand council, which ended a midnight meeting with announcement of the new legislative set-up, also are to be members of the chamber.

Minimum age limit for members is to be 25 years.

The grand council, fascism's supreme policy-making body, is to meet again tonight for consideration of international affairs.

Usually well informed sources said the council expected to hear a report on Anglo-Italian talks of the last five days concerned with Italian intervention in Spain and probable British recognition of Italy's Ethiopian conquest.

The council also was expected to study French-Italian relations in light of the French decision to send an ambassador to Rome after a lapse of over two years due to France's determination to withhold recognition of the Ethiopian regime.

Mexico Trades Oil For Italian Ships, German Planes

Mexico City, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Increased petroleum sales, some on a barter basis, to Germany and Italy, were reported tonight on the eve of the Supreme Court's expected decision on the foreign oil companies' appeal against the 1936 expropriation law and the March 18 decree seizing their properties.

The court will vote tomorrow on a draft ruling written by Justice Agustin Aguirre Garza, which upholds the government on all counts and denies the companies' appeal.

Meantime, the government was said to be negotiating with Italy whereby that country would construct three tankers for Mexico in exchange for expropriated oil. Among articles Germany would give this country for oil are airplanes, it was understood. There was no indication what the number might be.

New York, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—The National Civic Federation has formed a committee of 100 on American civil and property rights to investigate Mexican expropriation of American properties, Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the federation's executive council, announced tonight.

Czechs to Treat With Hungary Immediately

Talks Will Start Sunday
Occupation Held Likely Slovaks Are Consulted

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Oct. 7.—The Hungarian foreign office announced tonight that negotiations for settlement of Hungary's territorial and minority claims against Czechoslovakia would start Sunday at Komarom, on the Hungarian-Czechoslovak border.

Officials of the Czechoslovak legation said the Prague delegation would be headed by Dr. Joseph Tiso prime minister of newly autonomous Slovakia. Hungary's claims affect primarily the Slovak part of the diminished republic.

(At Zilana, Czechoslovakia, the new Slovak prime minister declared his administration, above all, would work to maintain territorial integrity. Slovaks were counseled to create no protest for foreign intervention.)

Troops May March In

It was believed in diplomatic circles that Prague already had granted certain concessions to Hungary wherey Hungarian forces would occupy two border towns "symbolically" before negotiations start at 7 p. m. (1 p. m., Eastern standard time) Sunday.

The Hungarian delegation will be headed by Foreign Minister Koloman von Kanya and Interior Minister Count Paul Teleky.

The word which opened the way for the conference was said to have come from Prague as the Hungarian cabinet council discussed ultimative measures to be taken if Prague delayed the talks further. The conversations were to have started yesterday after one postponement.

Demands Unconditional

Diplomatic quarters said the cabinet council would have demanded unconditional return of Hungarian minority districts by next Tuesday and might have asked for a plebiscite in Ruthenia with the expectation that Ruthenians would join Hungary, establishing a Polish-Hungarian frontier.

The foreign office announcement tended to quiet the public clamor that the government "do as the Poles and Germans did." Hungary had made military preparations for occupation. Troops had been waiting since Wednesday for orders to cross the border and occupy some 4,000 square miles and there was a consignment of 10,000 huge Hungarian flags on the border to be unfurled in Czechoslovakia.

The facts that Dr. Tiso, Slovak people's party leader and prime minister, was to head the Prague delegation and that Slovakia had been created an autonomous state within the framework of the Czechoslovak republic displeased Hungarians.

Postoffice Cashier Held in Kentucky For $15,000 Theft

Arrested at Louisville, Ky., on a warrant issued here by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, Charles S. Voigt, cashier and assistant agent in the Postoffice Department's philatelic agency, was charged with embezzlement last night.

The alleged embezzlement, said Postal Inspector John N. Collier, amounted to "about $15,000." Authorities here reported that the money was found in Voigt's possession and he admitted the charged fraud.

Voigt has been an employe of the Postoffice Department for 20 years. The reported shortage in his books was discovered when he failed to report for work last Monday.

Voigt has a wife and four children.

Dues Unpaid, Red Fights Deporting

By the Associated Press.

Joseph Strecker, whose fight against deportation affects the similar case of the labor leader, Harry Bridges, asked the Supreme Court yesterday to uphold a lower court ruling that he should not be banished from the country as a Communist.

Strecker, who came from Austria in 1912 and now lives in Hot Springs, Ark., argued that he had not paid membership dues to the Communist Party except for two months in 1933. The question before the court, he said, was whether past membership was a deportable offense. A 1918 law provides banishment for any member of an organization which advocates overthrow of the Government by force.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—The ministry of marine announced today a shipwreck found along the southern Argentine coast was believed to be that of the German sailing vessel Admiral Karpfanger, missing with a crew of 60 in Antarctic waters for six months.

The Admiral Karpfanger, formerly a cadet training ship of the Hamburg-American Line, left New Zealand for Chile last March. It has not been heard from since and on August 26 the Hamburg-American Line officially gave it up as lost.

Reich Grants Turkey Huge Loan for Arms

Economic Chain Forged
Push Toward Black Sea
Would Offset Blockade

By the United Press.

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 7.—German Economic Minister Walther Funk late today concluded an agreement with the Turkish government calling for a German loan of 150,000,000 reichsmarks ($65,150,000) for armaments and industral development.

The announcement of the German credits to Turkey, which would be in a position of great strategic importance in event of a general war, was believed to signal the beginning of a trade struggle, with Germany arrayed against Britain and France for economic domination of the Dardanelles and the entrance to the Black Sea.

It was assumed Funk, who came here from Yugoslavia, obtained economic concessions or a basis of economic colaboration from the Turkish government in exchange for the $65,105,000 in credits.

Germany is expected to exert great influence in Turkey's rearmament, for which a large part of the money will be spent.

Drive Toward Black Sea

Funk's visit here, coupled with the significance of his economic negotiations in Yugoslavia, indicated Germany is losing no time in pushing toward the Black Sea, now that Czechoslovakia has been dealt with successfully.

Germany believes commercial domination in southeastern Europe, eastward along the Danube, may prove to be life itself in event of another war, because it would offset the danger of a British or French naval blockade.

Funk's visit to Ankara was significant because Great Britain last January attempted to obtain a strong commercial footing in Turkey.

Arabs Held a Factor

Diplomats said German predominance in Turkey might have far-reaching political effects on the eastern Mediterranean and speculated the Turkish government's apparent shift toward the Nazi orbit might be due to Britain's handling of the Arab-Jew question in Palestine, which has aroused the anger of a large part of the Moslem world.

Before coming here Funk halted in Belgrade to set the stage for a pending commercial treaty between Yugoslavia and Germany.

Czech Nation Can Survive, Polish Educator Asserts Here

Czechoslovakia's survival as a nation is entirely possible, in the opinion of Dr. Oscar Halecki, visiting Polish educator, who said last night that his country's occupation of Teschen merely put the boundary back as it was in 1918, and was "by no means a seizure of territory."

"Unfortunately for Czechoslovakia and for all concerned, her concessions to minorities within her boundaries came somewhat too late.

"Teschen was conceded to be Poland's at the end of the war, but was seized by Czechoslovakia in 1920 at a time when our county was having trouble with the Bolsheviks and could not prevent it. We kept most of the city, even as it was, but had to go into Czech territory to board the train at the main railway station. Despite the trouble this was, however, I doubt that our claim would have been pushed if the Polish persons on the Czech side had been granted the privileges they were granted too late," he declared.

Common Bond Seen

Despite the large amount of territory now going to Germany, Dr. Halecki said he believed that if the boundaries are "in any way reasonably fixed," if the international guarantee of the boundaries holds, and if Czechoslovakia gets the economic assistance needed for the readjustment period the country can continue to live.

"I'm am sure everybody must have a compassion for Czechoslovakia and I know Poland desires only peaceful relationships with her. We are of common Slavonic orgin and have long had much in common," he said.

Dr. Halecki, who is professor of history at the University of Warsaw, arrived in America September 26 to lecture at American universities under auspices of the Kosciuszko Foundation.

Delivers Lecture Here

He lectured at the United States Office of Education at the Polish Embassy. He will remain here over the week-end, going to Vassar College Monday.

Explaining that the historic viewpoint is necessary for an understanding of central Europe, he said all the American universities were asking him to speak on contemporary politics.

"I don't like to do that, unless there is time to bring in the background. I like to go back to at least the fourteenth century when I am talking about Poland, and come up from there," he said.

Dr. Halecki was a member of the staff of the League of Nations for three years and expressed the hope that the idea behind the league "is not dead." He declared, "I still believe in it." He will return to Poland in December.

Prof. Halecki will speak on "The Educational System in Poland" before the Polish Club Sunday at 5 p. m. at the Wardman Park Hotel. The lecture will be preceded by a luncheon and musicale in his honor.

Quality Of Justice

The public has little concern over the technicalities of judicial procedure under discussion at the judges' and lawyers' institute here. But it will have a vital interest in the application of the new rules to specific cases in the Federal courts. For the methods by which the courts work have an intimate relationship to the quality of justice rendered.

In a democratic country the attainment of "equal justice under law" is too frequently taken for granted. Actually, of course, the quality of justice administered can be no higher than the character of the judge on the bench and the efficiency of the rules under which he operates. Cumbersome procedure which gives unscrupulous individuals an opportunity to delay and evade the trial of cases on their merits is today a far more common cause of injustice than is corruption of judges.

Some students of the uniform rules governing civil cases, which recently became effective in all the Federal courts, believe that they will reduce the time devoted to the average case by more than one-third. If that forecast proves to be correct congested dockets should be speedily brought up to date. With these new rules and three additional judges authorized by the last Congress, the United States District Court here should have no difficulty in ending the unreasonable 16-to-20-month lag in the trial of "Keen" cases.

No less important than the time factor is the simplification of procedure. Elaborate rules usually provide loopholes for the dissensions or decisions on technicalities. What is desired, of course, is the simplest approach to the truth and to the application of the law in each case, while safeguarding the rights of both parties.

If the new rules measure up to the optimistic hopes of their sponsors, the public will not be slow to note the results and acclaim the improvement. It should then be a relatively simple matter to induce the States to adopt the same procedure for their own courts.

Colorado's Experience

The American system of government provides 49 laboratories for social experimentation—the Federal Government and the 48 States. The advantages of this situation in letting a panacea be subjected to local experience were long ago pointed out by James Bryce. They remain very real today, as is borne out by Colorado's disastrous adventure with an unworkable old-age pensions scheme.

In comparison with the original Townsend scheme, or the "$30 every Thursday" proposal which has recently gained so many converts in California and elsewhere, the Colorado system is mild and moderate. It provides for the payment of only $45 a month, to those residents over 60 who do not already have a monthly income of $45.

Yet the system has broken down. The revenues from sales taxes and other imposts out of which pensions payments are supposed to be made have proved inadequate. The pensioners, far from getting $45 a month, are now getting only around $25. And as the sums required for the payment of the eligible aged have gone up, the relief funds available for the unemployed, the blind, necessitous children and others have diminished.

Unless the system is thoroughly overhauled, Colorado's future difficulties in meeting the provisions of the constitutional amendment that brought the old-age pensions scheme into effect will be even greater than they are today. It is estimated that the annual cost of the plan, on the basis of present payments, is $13,000,000. But if full payments are to be made to all able to qualify for them the cost will rise to $25,000,000 a year. To provide that sum there will have to be a steep increase in local taxes which are already drastic.

Thus arises the growing support for the proposal, to be voted on in Colorado next month, that the old-age pensions amendment approved in 1936 be rescinded and the problem of providing relief to the aged indigent be left to the Legislature. Like the even more ambitious schemes being advanced in various parts of the country, the Colorado system, well-intentioned though it was, took no account of the problem of meeting costs.

The lowering of the age-limit from 65, as in previous Colorado old-age pensions plans, played havoc with the State's finances. Since the Federal grants-in-aid for old-age pensions apply only to those 65 and over, Colorado had to pay the pensions of those in the 60 to 65-year group entirely out of its own pocket. Moreover the provisions of the present law are evidently subject to considerable abuse.

The old-age pensions craze sweeping certain sections of the country rests on the theory that wishes are horses. That was never true. Colorado's disastrous experiment merely proves again that those who try to ride on wishful thinking are headed for a fall.

A Timely Overhauling

Secretary Wallace appears to have accomplished for the Department of Agriculture what most other agencies of the Government urgently need—a general overhauling in the interests of unified planning and efficient administration. If President Roosevelt's reorganization bill had become law, some functions might possibly have been added to or taken away from this department. Within its present domain, however, it appears to have been completely modernized.

Sufficient justification for sweeping changes within the department may be found in the fact that it is administering 11 new programs authorized by Congress during the last five years. Planning for these various programs has been scattered through a number of bureaus. As a result policies outlined by one agency have not always been in harmony with the aims of other bureaus in the same department. Overlapping functions, also, have caused some waste of effort.

Under the new set-up the department should function as a co-ordinated unit, so far as planning is concerned, while administrative activities will be decentralized. Fortunately this will not mean concentration of program-building in Washington. Under an agreement between the department and the Association of Land Grant Colleges most of the States are forming community agricultural planning groups. The results of community planning will be integrated by county committees, and county plans will be brought together by State agricultural advisory councils.

At the same time the experts of the colleges and the department will continue to develop comprehensive plans on land use and other problems. Both the practical experience of farmers and the research of specialists will thus become available to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics which has been designated as the new unified planning and research agency of the department. This unit will be able to view the farm problem as a whole. Its planning, of course, will have to be confined within the framework of the law. Even so, it may become an important factor in clarifying some of the confusing current trends within the AAA.

Once plans have been formulated, they will be submitted to the scrutiny of an Agricultural Program Board which includes the heads of "action agencies." In other words, the actual administrators of each program will have an opportunity to study and criticize general plans before they are put into effect. From beginning to end this planning procedure seems to conform to the best modern practice.

On the administrative side an effort has been made to co-ordinate similar activities and eliminate duplication. For example, marketing work now distributed through seven different bureaus will be brought under one head. If other activities have been similarly diffused, this consolidation of administrative units should greatly enhance the efficiency of the department.

Reorganization has not been difficult for the Department of Agriculture because Congress has left the Secretary a wide margin of discretion in working out administrative technique. Some other departments may not be so fortunate. But most of them probably have sufficient authority to effect substantial improvements in their machinery whether or not the reorganization bill is revived.

Mr. de Valera's Timing

Adolf Hitler is not the only European leader with a sense of timing. There is also Eamon de Valera.

Not long ago Premier de Valera made a ten-strike by reaching a comprehensive accord with Great Britain. The new Anglo-Irish treaty wrote finis to a feud which had embittered relations between the two peoples for centuries. It made possible lasting friendship based on Britain's recognition of Ireland's completely sovereign status and on Ireland's recognition of the mutuality of her interests with those of Great Britain. But one problem was left unsolved—Mr. de Valera's demand that the provinces of Northern Ireland be incorporated in a united Ireland.

Now, on the morrow of the Munich pact which, with British consent, paved the way for the partition of Czechoslovakia on the basis of self-determination, Premier de Valera has indicated to the London government that he considers the time opportune for a plebiscite in certain areas of Northern Ireland. The suggestion is that the areas favoring incorporation with the 16 counties of Eire should then come under the rule of Dublin.

There would seem to be little doubt that the Belfast government, under Lord Craigavon, will resist this suggestion to the utmost. Not long ago an election was held in Northern Ireland in which the principal and practically the sole issue was opposition to union with Eire. The government was returned stronger than ever. At the some time there is no discounting the fact that there is a strong minority in Northern Ireland, whose population is one-third Catholic, which does favor a united Ireland.

Probably Premier de Valera will not press his demands too hard at this time. He is too wise a statesman to do that. Yet the Munich accord has given him a valuable talking point which Great Britain can neither dismiss nor easily controvert. At Munich, Premier Chamberlain gave hostages to fortune. One of these Mr. de Valera is now preparing to hold for ransom.

Repercussions In France

The cataclysmic developments of the past month are certain to have profound repercussions not only on the external relations of every European nation, great and small, but on their domestic affairs as well. That holds true with particular force in France, whose foreign policy of the past 20 years now lies irremediably in ruins.

It is yet too early to foresee what the long-range consequences of the partition of Czechoslovakia and the destruction of the French system of alliances will be with respect to France's internal situation. They may be far-reaching. But for the moment the effect of the Munich accord, and what has arisen out of it, has been to bring about a consolidation of moderate and conservative elements behind the Daladier government. Not only have the Chamber and the Senate by overwhelming majorities approved the premier's role as peacemaker; they have also voted his government new semidictatorial powers to enable him to proceed with the indispensable task of rahabilitating France's shattered finances and her badly disturbed economic system.

It is significant, however, that with respect to both issues on which M. Daladier demanded a vote of confidence, the Socialists abstained from voting while the Communists voted in the negative. As a result Paris correspondents are writing the obituary of the Popular Front which in one form or another has ruled France since 1936 and upon whose tacit or active support M. Daladier himself has depended. The Socialists and Communists between them constitute two-thirds of the Popular Front.

These obituaries may be premature. The probability is that M. Daladier's position would become precarious were he compelled to seek his support from a combination of Radical Socialists—his own party—the Center and the Right. Such a combination might have a destructive effect on the unity of the Radical Socialists who, generally speaking, would much rather be aligned with a Left coalition than one of the Right. That is why the government found it necessary to accept a November 15 limit on the exercise of the new semidictatorial powers in the field of finance and thus prevent the Socialists from joining the Communists in direct opposition.

Nevertheless, a new political alignment is practically inescapable in France, if only because without the restoration of business confidence there can be no permanent improvement in French governmental finance, no marked economic recovery. At the same time the restoration of confidence may prove impossible without overhauling of the social reforms put through by the first Popular Front government headed by Leon Blum.

The need of rehabilitation, always great, is greater now than ever. Unless an agreement for limitation of armaments can be achieved, an ever-larger portion of the national income will have to go to build up the republic's defenses. And the greater the sums needed for national defense the less the government and private industry will have left over for social reform.

Under the circumstances a drastic reorientation of the political balance of power in the republic would seem inevitable. But with the present Parliament constituted as it is and with the next election still more than a year and a half distant such a realignment will not prove easy.

Hollywood Diction

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The slovenly speech of the average motion picture actor is beginning to worry at least one distinguished Hollywood director. This is Fritz Lang, who, being a newcomer to the language of Shakespeare, is amazed at the frequency with which the most commonly used words are mispronounced on the screen.

"You," "why," "then" and "probably" are cited as examples. He might have included "perfume," which is invariably accented on the last syllable; "jewel," which is given as "jool," even by such old troupers as John Barrymore; "family," which generally is shortened to two syllables with the "i" omitted; "theatre," which becomes everything from "thittir" and "thutter" to "thee-yater" and many others. It's really too much to have a lovely lady such as Miss Barbara Stanwyck coming at you with "Amurrican and Cammembutt" cheese. Nor does Warner Baxter lend much authority to the role of a doctor by making references to "appendiceetis."

In England, the court is supposed to set up a standard of good usage in speech. In France, the stage is considered a criterion. The moving picture has an influence over American habits far beyond these two. Mr. Lang will deserve as many honorary degrees as he can carry home if he is successful in giving some distinction and some exactness to the speech of the screen.

Letters to the Editor

Under The Nazi Heel

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler's promise to keep out of Europe after he had acquired what he wanted of Czechoslovakia is, of course, pure fiction. When he feels that he is ready to go into the other countries of Europe which have German minorities he will do so without any hesitancy or regard for agreement.

Germany is gradually but effectively massing enough power eventually to be able to crush the world under the Nazi heel. Can't the leaders of Europe see what the outcome will inevitably be if they continue their present policy of conciliation and concession with a man who rules with armed might and forked tongue? Or do they think that everything will turn out all right if they leave it up to Hitler?

I think that war is inevitable if Hitler is allowed to continue his policies without stern and effective opposition. Even the present state of Hitler's Germany could cause enough of a catastrophe in a war, without any more aggression or annexation. War is hell; but so is Nazi rule. Choose between the two and I think that the majority of the people would be in favor of war.

I don't mean to say that the world should go to war immediately and wipe out Nazidom. But I think that stern opposition on the part of the European countries toward any of Hitler's contemplated annexations would serve to call his bluff. If it be war that he wants, he would get it. If there be concession on his part, then his position as head of the totalitarian state would be challenged and revolution in his own country would finish Nazism forever.

Pyrrhic Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Re-stated in contemporary terms, Dr. Johnson's memorable exclamation would probably read: "Peace is the last refuge of a scoundrel." Under the glamorous panoply of "Peace" the democracies of western Europe, France and England, have crushed Czechoslovakia, the last bulwark against Fascist barbarism in the Old World. Does one have to be skilled in the machinations of high politics to see that this is the essence of the Munich agreement?

Those cunning connivers of plunder politics, Chamberlain and Daladier, aided and abetted by the fireside philosopher of the White House and the eunuchoidal righteousness of the Comintern, have, they think, sold us a gold brick. But signs are not wanting to show that the victims are awakening to the enormity of the swindle. You can't fool all the people all the time.

The cannon fodder are getting vastly fed up with the phoney encomiums with which capitalist democracy and Fascism operate. The elemental hunger for peace among the democratic millions will not be satisfied with the Pyrrhic peace of Munich. DISILLUSIONED.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.

Political Jig-Saw

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is becoming more evident daily that Jeffersonian Democrats will have to regain control of the Democratic Party, now in the hands of the New Deal Party, or else they will certainly have to hold a separate nominating convention in 1940. Otherwise they will not be represented in the next Presidential election.

It was evident all through the Presidential campaign of 1936 that the Republic Party had adopted the theory that New Deal policies were popular throughout the Nation and that they would therefore provide the same favors to organized labor and subsidies to agriculture, but with far greater economy and efficiency than had been experienced under President Roosevelt.

And now the President has boldly announced that he would prefer the election of liberal Republicans who, like Senator Norris, of Nebraska, were favorable to New Deal policies in preference to the election of conservative Democrats, like Senator Glass of Virginia, who are opposed to New Deal policies. The latest sensation in this direction is the President's statement as reported in Business Week that the election as United States Senator of Clyde Reed, liberal Republican would "be all right" with him,—this in spite of the well know fact that Senator McGill, of Kansas has been second to none as a loyal 100 per cent New Dealer.

It should be understood that a "liberal" in Congress is one who is always liberal in spending the taxpayer's money.

Relief In Washington

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not interested in discussing the accuracy or inaccuracy of the Public Assistance Division reports. However, as a result of the recent attack on the Public Assistance Division, the public is given the impression that relief needs generally have been exaggerated. I am not saying that Mr. Burdette Lewis intended to give that impression, since I have no inside track on his intentions.

Why should Mr. Lewis have singled out the Public Assistance Division's statistics for criticism? I can think of the "statistics" of a well-known Congressman, who discussed the District relief situation of the floor of the House. The term "phony" about these figures would be a gross understatement. Why does Mr. Lewis not criticize the statistics of that Congressman on the District relief needs?

To illustrate, Mr. Lewis knows that as of today, 11,204 people who had never been certified for WPA. have been certified as in need of relief since December 15, 1937. The particular Congressman to whom I refer maintained that all people in need of relief are being adequately taken care of, and it is since he made that statement that most of these 11,204 people have been found to be in need of relief. It is true that the Board of Public Welfare's statistics also were inaccurate. They gave the impression that only 3,000 employable people needed relief and were not getting it; but the worthy Congressman and some of his District Building friends implied that everybody who needed relief was already receiving it.

Lest the public fall victim to illusions that relief needs are being adequately met, I feel it desirable to share the statistics which I have received from the Federal office of the WPA. In addition to the 11,204 persons who for the first time have been certified as in need of relief and eligible for a WPA job in the District, a total of 2,660 persons previously certified have been recertified as in need of relief. Of this total, 3,776 persons have never yet been assigned to a WPA job, even though they have been certified as in need, and 830 persons are awaiting reassignments to WPA jobs.

Nor is that all. A total of 2,388 persons have been rejected though otherwise qualified for certification to WPA because they were "occupationally unsuited" for the type of projects available in the District. The significance of these figures can be better grasped by recalling the fact that in drawing up the budget estimates for the current fiscal year for relief purposes, some people criticized the Board of Public Welfare for "overstating" the case because appropriations were requested to take care of 3,000 employable persons.

The Charleston Tornado

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your fine editorial entitled "The Charleston Tragedy" which appeared in The Post September 30 will be greatly appreciated by the people of that charming old city. You can scarcely underestimate the damage that this recent tornado has caused, not only in the loss of property, which might be replaced in time, but also in the permanent tragic injury to those old buildings and landmarks which have made that city a sort of repository of colonial history.

This city, in spite of storms and hurricanes and earthquakes, has stood as a fascinating reminder of the life of early America. With the atmosphere of dignity and culture, a somewhat quiet spot in the midst of a rapidly changing civilization it has furnished an opportunity to many to become acquainted with the spirit of our country in the early days.

As a native of Charleston, along with many others who reside in the National Capital, I mourn the tragic loss which has come to our beloved city. That my own family home, with its 16-inch brick walls and old iron fence, with an exquisite fountain in the front yard, still sending up its gentle spray after 85 years of service, and with old gnarled trees in the yard, was spared, is a matter of personal satisfaction. But every Charlestonian, who feels a sense of ownership in all the life and history of this city, is conscious of this loss not only to ourselves but also to the whole country.

Your estimate of the place of Charleston in the life and history of the country is well presented and breathes a fine spirit of interest and sympathy.

Save This Hemisphere

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The best interest of the United States will be served by our complete isolation from Europe except commercial intercourse and the most formal social relations. Our interests lie right here in the Western Hemisphere and we should put forth every effort to promote the most cordial and intimate social, cultural, business, financial and economic relations with the peoples and governments on this side of the oceans.

Every dictate of self-interest and prudence requires that we should maintain an impregnable national defense and that we should call a conference of all the nations of this hemisphere for the purpose of considering our common commercial and defensive interests and welfare, and to that end enter into treaties with them of a defensive and offensive alliance against the rest of the world.

This hemisphere is the last hope of humanity for the preservation of democracy and individual liberty, and let us not delude ourselves into the belief that greed and envy will not cause the totalitarian, dictatorship countries of Europe and Japan to attack the countries of this hemisphere in time. ALEXANDER S. LANIER.

Via Media

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every time that I read the letters addressed to you by readers of The Post, I notice that some of them are in favor and some are against the ever-growing menace of Fascism, Nazism and Communism and all kinds of 'isms except Americanism. I for my part am for Americanism.

Why, then, doesn't America wake up to this danger and follow the middle course advocated by our great and benevolent President F. D. Roosevelt by embracing the banner of liberalism?

FRANK REALISM.

The Post Impressionist

Daniel Vs. Bolshevism

REPRESENTATIVE Martin Dies and his Congressional committee of big Red hunters have stirred up a pother. The committee has ventured into unexpected cupboards and emerged in some cases with scarlet-draped skeletons, the existence of which we little had suspected.

Mr. Dies and his co-workers have flicked our national suspicions on the raw and many devout American citizens today, it is not too much to say, see the shadow of a Red menace falling longer and longer across the land. Miss Shirley Temple among others, it appears from the Dies revelations, has been abetting, however innocently, the missionaries of Moscow and the vanguard of Stalin's men who walk on slippered feet through the land.

Despite such corporeal proofs of political danger as the Dies tribunal has ferreted out, however, our household still dwells in a stolid complacence. We have no fears for the future of democracy in America. Though I cannot speak for Shirley Temple, we, and probably the Temples, too, have in our family a great bulwark against Communism. Our son Daniel is probably the greatest obstacle to Communism in America today. And I venture to say that he is not alone.

The fact that Daniel stands as a bulwark against Communism is not of our conscious contriving. Rather it is in spite of it. I mean to say that if any of the ideological preachments of his mother or me had ever found more than the most fleeting lodgment in Daniel's ears, he would be far better Communist material than he is today at 12 years old.

My perhaps imperfect understanding of Communism is that, among other things, it requires the most rigid adherence to a stern and strict discipline. It is my conception of this great political faith, for example, that if a young Communist were told by the commissars of his creche to go to bed, the young Communist would go there prontosky—or else! The else involving dire consequences in the way of party discipline.

Democratic parents have no such fine and ready-made political willow switch as this. Daniel at bedtime recognizes no inherent duty to the state—or, so far as one can determine, to anything else, unless it be, perhaps, the ineffable beauties of night.

Told to go to bed, Daniel, being a citizen of democracy, looks upon the instruction as nothing more important or urgent than a kindly suggestion from sometimes well-intentioned but certainly at the moment prejudiced sources. Conceivably he may go to bed, more or less then and there. In rare cases, his mind perhaps being more than ordinarily occupied in wool gathering, he will. But this is the unusual incident, the exception that establishes the rule governing his ordinary course of conduct.

Usually, in nine cases out of ten, say, he will embrace the course of Fabian, continuing in whatever occupation he may then be engaged, until the first normally mild parental suggestion is repeated in more peremptory tone.

At this point, it is still a suggestion, he feels, one which a free citizen can, and often does, disregard if he wishes. But he considers the source quite often. He feels kindly toward it. They are ordinarily kindly old folk, his parents, and if truth be told perhaps he is a little sleepy. Perhaps, he reasons, it would be just as well to placate them.

So his bedward odyssey begins. It resembles nothing so much as the journey of the toiling, devout pilgrim making his obeisance at numerous wayside shrines.

He will amble to the kitchen and leisurely pick up his alarm clock from the table on which it stands by day. Perhaps, if the experimental mood seizes him, he will button it in the top of his coat and return to chat for a few moments with the clock ticking just beneath his chin, his hands finding whatever more interesting occupation than carrying a clock offers. Sometimes the clock doesn't fall. Sometimes the talk turns upon an abstruse point of English grammar or arithmetic presumably encountered in the course of the day's study. Sometimes it is nothing more than a series of "Good-nights," delivered with choral and antiphonal effects.

One can have no doubt that there is a measure of guile in these tactics.

If Daniel has perfected the art of gentle sabotage—and candor compels the admission that he has, of course—it is an art which he practices deftly and with the utmost good humor. It is an art devoid of any affectation or defiance; there is no breath of surliness in it. Rather it is an art which almost invariably is successful in maneuvering its parental victims, against whom it is so gently practiced, into the trenches of surliness.

Now I know that adult guile is not a gift despised by the Communists. But even the passive resistance offered by pure wool gathering, is inconsistent with rigid adherence to stern and strict discipline, and I cannot conceive of a good Communist who would permit either guile or wool gathering to flourish in his children. It is a combination of forces which, when inherent in the young, offers a most effective united front to the exercise of authority.

What the Communists do about young Communists I don't pretend to know. But if any of them should ever care to whisper the secret to Daniel's mother and me, I am sure that we should be delighted to remove from the path of Communism's progress in America what justly seems to us a mighty bulwark.

Over Same Barrel

NOW THAT the Dies committee has placed our Hitler-true Nazis and naturalized Italian Fascists and the consuls of both nations over the same barrel where lately the Communist conspirators were getting their licks, there comes from the ranks of the Bolos and their "fellow travelers" no such strident protests as recently decried the committee's Red hunt.

The Bolos and their "fellow travelers" called that phase of the investigation of un-American activities a Red hunt, and I see no reason to pretend otherwise. Red hunting, like the hunting of Nazi and Fascist conspirators against the American form of government, is a legitimate duty of that Government. The investigation of Naziism and Fascism has followed the same general line as the investigation of Communistic activities and has been, unfortunately, superficial and unskilled. The assignment is one that deserved better talent and more serious intentions on the part of the House of Representatives. But as a result of the spade work of the Dies committee, Congress may now be encouraged to give these dangers the thorough attention that they deserve.

IT MAY BE REMEMBERED that when the Dies committee was revealing the Communist influence in the C.I.O., the WPA, the Workers' Alliance and the League for Peace and Democracy, and tracing the beam of inspiration from Moscow to the American Communist group, ridicule, insult and deliberate misrepresentation were the answer from the far left. Now it is the turn of the Nazi bund and the Italian conspirators to defend themselves, and it may be noted that, like the Communists, they rely on irrelevances rather than disproof.

If the Bolos had resented the investigation of Communism on the ground that Communism holds an exclusive franchise for un-American activities, having pioneered the field, they would have justified their approval of the current hunt for Nazis and Fascists. But they took the position that any such interference at all was of itself an un-American activity and thereby assumed a duty to deplore with equal passion the present intrusion into the impudent treacheries of their rivals.

THE COMMUNISTS have been advertising their Russian product as a twentieth century Americanism, forgetting that a Nazi or Fascist, having the same moral principles, might with equal truth—which is to say none at all—and probably with more effect, describe his ism as Jefferson and Lincoln in streamline version.

The Communists have taken to themselves the word "worker," forgetting, again, that the workers of Italy and Germany are now their enemies and that in this country millions of people who work will angrily resent the implication that because they detest all alien conspiracy and reptilian methods in their own country they must be loafers and drones.

IT IS TOO EASILY forgotten that Mussolini, the originator of Fascism, was himself once a radical Socialist, given to scurrilous writing about the Italian government, the church and God Almighty, and that Fascism, from which Hitler copied Naziism, is but a custom job mounted on the old standard Marxian chassis. The paint job and shape of the hood vary in Italy and Germany, compliant with local needs and lunacies, but Mussolini and his plagiarist playmate are driving the same jaloppy that Joseph Stalin rides in.

The method of penetration in this country is the same on both sides. The Communist Party, to remove the appearance of foreign control, organized under American laws as an American group. The Fascists and Nazis, never original and always faithful in essential matters to the master model in Moscow, work through anti-American groups of naturalized conspirators under verbal guidance from official emissaries stationed in our midst.

As it was in Eger, Czechoslovakia, so it is in Union City, N. J., today.

Katharsis

One ends by suspecting everything and every one. The innocent talk of children may be your ruin. One doesn't dare to speak in front of them. Everyone watches everyone else, watches his own words, is himself watched. No more ease, no more free speaking, except perhaps in bed with one's wife, if one is really sure of her. And X. amused himself by making out that this was the explanation of marriages having become so frequent . . . The longing to pour out one's heart on the pillow after this intolerable constraint of every day and all day long becomes continually more and more pressing.

The Final Struggle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The significance of these months and years is a thing of vast immensity. We are witnessing the final fearful struggle of the two great human—exceedingly human—forces of the ages.

The age-long growth of freedom, which began in men's hearts long before the Greeks had a name for it, has always been viewed by authoritarians as an unnatural thing, a thing of evil, which would eventually hang itself if given enough rope, making the way of the Caesars sure and certain.

It was only when the development of freedom reached the noteworthy stages marked by the American and French revolutions, showing there was both health and strength in the thing, that the champions of authority began to grow truly uneasy. Awakened at last to the desperate plight of authoritarianism by the last World War, and yet in no way convinced that authoritarianism has outlived its usefulness, the champions of authority naturally feel that for them it is a case of now or never. They must struggle desperately if they hope to survive. And most assuredly authoritarianism will never lay down its life in behalf of freedom!

The champions of freedom, on the other hands, are just where the champions of authority formerly were, in that they feel entirely too safe from destruction. They tolerate, even where their foundations are attacked. They compromise, even where compromise means virtual surrender. They say, "Give the dictators enough rope and they will hang themselves," only to see the dictators grow alarmingly in power and aggressiveness.

Why need we think the struggle will become desperate beyond anything yet known to history? Because one side is already desperate, even though still rather small, while the other side, even though still rather large, shows by its yielding that it will yield far more, until it finds itself in a position where it can win only by struggling with utmost desperation of body, mind and soul.

Benes And History

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In this dark and troubled world, governed by tenth-rate statesmen, there stands out one man, who by his conduct in one of the greatest trials that ever confronted a human being, is an inspiration to all the decent elements of mankind. His name is Eduard Benes, late President of Czechoslovakia.

Every speech he has made has been characterized by good taste, sound judgment, and the utmost restraint under the most trying provocations, in marked contrast to the blustering, vulgar billingsgate of Hitler and Mussolini. Finally he has made the supreme sacrifice by resigning his office for what he believes to be the best interest of his people and of mankind in general, after doing all that was humanly possible to protect and preserve his country.

Is it any wonder that a man of Hitler's character and origin should hate a man like Benes?

I predict that Benes will occupy a unique place in history. His memory and glorious example will receive the homage of all mankind when the actors in the present sordid and cowardly tragedy will have been forgotten, or remembered only to be despised.

More Dictatorships

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It has been clear to the writer for some time that British Tories have been secretly in favor of Nazi and Fascist dictatorships because that is just what is going to happen in Britain as it has already happened in France. It is true that the French dictatorship is "temporary" but we must remember that it has now been extended the second time. The failure of the French Socialists to actively oppose the extension of the power of Daladier as dictator may prove their undoing, and probably will. Had they had the courage of their convictions they would have voted solidly with the 78 Communist and Independent deputies against this proposal.

Socialists have always been noted for their devotion to real democratic principles, political and industrial, and it is with chagrin that lovers of real liberty note the recent action of the French Socialists when faced with an actual test. It looks as though the Communists only know what they want and how to get it. But they are not numerous enough yet to get it.

Homecomings

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Premier Neville Chamberlain's novel experiment to "defuriate" dictators by tete-a-tetes over the tea table seems to have the approval of four of the largest European capitals. The people are cheering wildly the peace and—which has come out of the first test of the new diplomacy.

London is applauding Chamberlain's return from Munich with peace and—honor. Berlin is heiling Hitler for bringing back peace and—Sudetenland. Daladier receives the bravos of Paris for bringing back peace and—his coat tails. Mussolini gets the thunderous salute of Rome for coming home with peace and—a wink in his eye.

On "Positive" Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"Peace must be positive," says your editorial in the issue of October 5. And this is correct. But the method of securing peace cannot be based on the theory that the democratic and peace-loving nations should get together with the fascist nations and build the "foundations" and the "superstructure" for permanent peace.

The past few years have fully demonstrated the fact that the fascist nations do not permit treaties or promises to stand in the way of aggression. The fascist states must secure new markets in order to maintain their present miserable standard of living for their peoples. The seizure of Czechoslovakia will never balance Hitler's budget. When the economic conditions become worse in Germany Hitler will have to seek new lands.

Hitler stated that Czechoslovakia was the last territorial demand in Europe. But he made the same promise when he seized Austria. How can the nations build "foundations" for peace when they are faced with future aggression in other parts of the world, if not in Europe?

The temporary peace of Chamberlain and Daladier merely permits the fascist aggressors to build larger armies for the future when they will feel that they are strong enough to challenge democracy.

Surely we want a positive program for peace. Such a program must be the uniting of all democratic nations in a stand against fascism. When fascism is stopped in its tracks it must fall. For fascism at a standstill is fascism in retreat.

A Comparison

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of October 2, Mark Sullivan seems to be much alarmed about communism in the United States. He says Naziism is not the great danger here, but communism.

Let's see: I have not heard of the communists drilling soldiers under a foreign banner in this country, as the Nazis are reported to have done. The Fascists blasted the life out of unarmed people in Ethiopia. The Nazis and Fascists both blasted their way through Spain in horrible brutality. Their dear friends the Japs are doing the same thing in China.

If Nazis, Fascists or Japs get a chance, or can make a chance, they will surely do the same in this country. They have broken all promises. They refuse to be bothered with brotherly love.

So much for them. Now let's see about the communists.

They have started no war anywhere. They steadfastly stood by their little neighbor, Czechoslovakia. They did not go crawling to the baby murderers, Hitler and Mussolini. They have stood by the League of Nations. They have consistently helped loyalist Spain, because they knew its cause was just; and this even at the risk of getting themselves into a great war. They took over a rotten government and made one of power in a few years. They took control of a population in which illiteracy was 80 per cent, and in these few years have a population in which literacy of the population is now 90 per cent, a record which is doubtful that any other nation can equal.

Mark Sullivan says that communism grows, not by war, but by ideas. Then the difference is this: Fascist-Naziism is forced on peoples by brute force, while communism, growing by ideas, comes in by way of reason, thinking, common sense.

Today And Tomorrow

Defeat For Britain, France

THE EFFECTS upon the United States of the Munich peace will not begin to be clear until we see what is now going to happen in France and Great Britain. We cannot know as yet. But we may be sure that the popular rejoicing which greeted Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier upon their return will be very short-lived indeed and that nothing they can say will for long disguise the fact that their countries have suffered a great defeat. Now if the only consequences of that defeat are the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia and the collapse of British and French influence in eastern Europe and the Balkans, they might be able to reconcile themselves to the accomplished fact.

But having been told by Hitler that the Sudeten land is the last territorial demand he has to make in Europe, they are on notice that he has territorial demands to make outside of Europe. And so has Mussolini. At some time in the fairly near future the question of the re-division of the British and French empires will be submitted to London and Paris by the Rome-Berlin axis. When this question is presented, it will not come in the form of an academic demand for some unimportant piece of African jungle. It will come in the form of demands for strategic areas in and about the Mediterranean which are as vital to the defense of the two imperial systems as Czechoslovakia is to the defense of central Europe.

THE BRITISH and the French will not be asked merely to concede a few colonies. They will be asked to concede the centers of military and naval power which are necessary to any nation which is to have empire in the Mediterranean and in Africa. For it would be a gross underestimate of the intelligence as well as of the ambition of Hitler and Mussolini to suppose that they can be satisfied by the cession of colonies from which they may be cut off at any time by British sea power. They will not have founded the empires they intend to found until they, rather then the British and the French, hold the strategic keys to empire.

One must expect this question to be raised rather soon and in an acute form, possibly as a result of insurrection provoked among the natives, possibly in some other way. For having shattered the European alliances of the British and French, and having brought about the internal demoralization which always follows defeat, the opportunity to found the new empires will in the near future be more favorable than it has ever been, or, conceivably, might ever be again.

UNLESS THERE is a miracle, Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier are, therefore, likely to find that what happened to Hitler's demands between Berchtesgaden and Godesburg, and again between Munich and the current application of the Munich agreement, will shortly happen once more, though on a progressively grander scale, in regard to what is politely called the colonial problem. I say "politely called the colonial problem" because it will no more be a colonial problem than the Sudetens were a problem in self-determination. It will be the problem of empire and the control of the seas just as the Sudetens were the problem of military supremacy on the continent of Europe and the disruption of the French and British military system.

Though this is the probable, perhaps the certain, prospect for the near future, it does not follow necessarily that Hitler and Mussolini will be able to dictate a surrender of empire. Though the British and French have sustained a great defeat in Europe, the essential sources of their power are still intact. Nations, Germany for example, have been much worse defeated than they are, and have lived on and have recovered their position in the world. The question, therefore, is how Britain and France will react, once the first elation of relief has worn off.

THE GREAT QUESTION is whether they are prepared to make promptly heroic sacrifices, to subject themselves to discipline, to pay the costs, to overcome internal disunion, and thus to prepare themselves for the crucial ordeal of their existence as great world powers. They will not be able to pass successfully through the ordeal that awaits them in the spirit of doing business as usual and carrying on party politics as usual.

And, so, the acid test will almost certainly be whether the British people adopt conscription and whether the French people take drastic measures to put their capital and their labor to work. For only conscription in England can make up for the military disaster of the Munich peace, and only an enormously enhanced production of airplanes and necessary goods can repair in some measure the French losses.

THIS IS A LONG introduction to our own problem here in the United States. But it is clear, I think, that it will make a vital difference in our own future policy whether or not the British and French imperial systems survive or collapse.

Our vital interests lie in this hemisphere and in the two oceans which separate the Americas from Asia and from Europe. The cardinal principle of our foreign policy has been to keep this hemisphere and the oceans which protect it invulnerable as against any European or Asiatic great power. If once we lost the security of the two oceans, if once South America were opened up as a field of imperial conquest, we should no longer have the independence which we alone among the great nations of the world enjoy. We should have anxieties that we have never known, and entanglements that Americans have hitherto escaped.

NOW THE SECURITY of the two oceans, and the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine, are not something guaranteed to us in the nature of things. For more than a hundred years we have been able to preserve a system of splendid isolation without large armaments and without serious diplomatic effort. Why?

That is the great question, and the answer to that question is that neither in Asia or in Europe has there been until recently any power strong enough and free enough to enter the Western Hemisphere and challenge our interests. On the European continent there was a balance of power between the British navy and whatever nation had the greatest army. Under these conditions no European state could think of invading the Western Hemisphere, because no European state could take the risk of weakening itself in Europe. That is why, even before we had any Navy to speak of, we could maintain the Monroe Doctrine as against all of Europe.

And, for a similar reason, we long maintained with inconsiderable armed force not only our position in the Pacific from Alaska to the Philippines but even an open door in China. For the balance of power in the Far East as between Russia, Great Britain and Japan was such that Japan could not invade the Pacific Ocean.

AS REGARDS the Far East the balance of power disappeared when Russia became enfeebled and Great Britain was pinned down in Europe. The immediate consequence was that we had to abandon our position in China, perhaps to abandon our position in the Philippines, and in addition to build a Navy in the Pacific capable of keeping Japan at arm's length beyond our vital strategic defenses from Alaska to Hawaii.

If now the European balance of power collapses, too, with the destruction or the surrender of the physical foundations of Franco-British sea power, then we cannot hope for long to maintain the Monroe Doctrine as against Europe without a very great increase of our naval and military power. The Navy we have and are building is probably adequate to hold the security of the Pacific Ocean. But it will not be adequate to maintain that security in two oceans at once.

FOR THESE REASONS we shall have to watch with the deepest concern the consequences of the Munich peace, waiting anxiously to see whether the defeat inflicted on Great Britain and France is or is not to become an epoch-making disaster.

Recovery Barriers

By Mark Sullivan

First, The Wagner Act

AT ONE OF President Roosevelt's recent press conferences, a semi-offical statement was made to the effect that business should cease complaining against the Administration. The statement went on to say that conditions point toward better business and that better business would be promoted if there were less recrimination.

Many persons speculate on why Mr. Roosevelt made this statement. It is true that in practically all statements by any person, public or private, there are two factors. One is the statement itself. The other is the motive for making the statement—what led the speaker to make it at the particular time, what was in his mind. But let us not use space in this sort of speculation. Without doubt Mr. Roosevelt would like to have better business, not only until the fall election, but afterward.

Turn, however, to the more fundamental question. Is it possible to have permanent business recovery under existing conditions? We can and almost certainly will have better business for a considerable time. But as to permanent recovery there is a barrier.

THE CONDITION which makes permanent recovery difficult is an attitude toward business that is maintained by some parts of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration. What is their motive is a matter of inference. The motive may be innocent and based on lack of knowledge. Or it may be not innocent and based on great sophistication. I do not undertake to say. An inference frequently made is that some parts of the Administration do not believe in the private ownership and operation of industry, that they want a new order of society and the changed form of government that would necessarily accompany it. For bringing about a new order, a good strategy would be to make the existing order unworkable.

But let us not attribute any motive to any individual. Let us consider just one of several conditions which, in their necessary outcome, if they continue, must be fatal to private ownership of business.

One such condition is a combination of three; C. I. O., the Wagner labor act, and the National Labor Relations Board. C. I. O. practices the sit-down strike. N. L. R. B. supports that type of strike and says that the Wagner labor act justifies it.

IN ONE CASE, that of the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation, strikers took possession of a plant and occupied it for nine days. They ignored a court order to leave the plant. With violence they resisted a sheriff and deputies. Their violation of law went so far that ultimately they were fined and imprisoned by an Illinois State court. After all that, N. L. R. B. ruled that the employer must reinstate the strikers and must dismiss employes who had been taken on in their places.

If the Wagner act permits seizure and possession of a plant for nine days, it must permit it for nine months or nine years. In principle there is no difference between temporary possession and permanent possession. The sit-down strike points straight toward the organization of industry on the Soviet basis, and toward the Communist order of society.

That this a direct and conscious objective of some who practice the sit-down strike is affirmed by a labor leader who does not approve it. Mr. John P. Frey, one of the heads of the American Federation of Labor, testifying before the Dies Congressional investigating committee, said:

"THE SIT-DOWN STRIKE and mass-picketing have been used by the Communists in our country as a training camp in which Communists can become familiar with the tactics they are to apply when their revolutionary program is put into action."

So far as the present improvement in business can include hope of permanent recovery, such hope must rest on belief that the Wagner labor act and its administration will be modified so as to outlaw the sit-down strike and in other respects permit the private ownership and operation of business to function freely.

Such modification may come. The largest body of organized labor, the A. F. of L., is demanding modification of the Wagner act. Comparatively few persons in the rank and file of labor believe in the sit-down strike. Few are Communists. In the A. F. of L. there is no Communism. In some divisions of C. I. O. there is none. The Communism in some important divisions of C. I. O. is in the leadership rather than among the rank and file. The heads of some divisions of C. I. O. are Communist—they dispute among themselves about two varieties of Communism, "Stalinism" and "Trotskyism." Without doubt it is these who use the sit-down strike for the purpose Mr. Frey describes. They are leading their organizations into Communism without the members realizing where they are being taken.

The Wagner labor act and its administration are not the only barrier to permanent business recovery. Modification of several policies of the Administration is requisite to the resumption of business on the basis of private ownership. That such modification may come is suggested by current developments. Failure of the "purge" indicates less power for the Administration over Congress. The November elections may give a sign in the same direction.

Chicagoan Named To Welfare Study

The District Commissioners yesterday announced appointment of Jacob Kepeca, executive director of the Jewish Children's Bureau of Chicago, to continue an investigation of child welfare institutions here.

The study was begun last summer by Miss Dorothy Henry, of Cleveland, who, because of time limit set on the study, was able to survey only two institutions.

Miss Henry studied the National Training School for Girls and the Receiving Home. It is expected the new survey director will devote much of his attention to the Industrial Home School for white and colored children and the District Training School for Feeble Minded at Laurel.

Arkansas Refunds Tax To Latvian Diplomat

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 7 (AP).—Alfred Blemanis, Latavian minister at Washington, today collected $1.63 from the State of Arkansas in settlement of his claim for gasoline tax paid during a cross-country tour this summer.

A voucher in that amount was issued to Belmanis by the State Revenue Department in response to request for a refund on account of diplomatic exemption from payment of such taxes. The tax was collected July 30, 1938, on purchases of 23.1 gallons of gasoline at Benton and West Memphis, Ark.

Japan's Hopes Rise

By Barnet Nover

Awaiting The Fall Of Hankow

FROM TIME to time during the last few months Japanese officials have warned the people that an early end to the undeclared war on China was not in sight. But it is doubtful if these warnings have been accepted at their face value. On the contrary, the feeling is widespread in Japan, and the government has done little to counteract it, that with the fall of Hankow China's resistance will collapse.

That is why the anticipated occupation of the Yangtze metropolis and temporary capital of China is being awaited with such intense interest in Japan. Every important newspaper in the island empire has made elaborate preparations to cover the event while the official cabinet information bureau of writers has commissioned a party of about 20 popular novelists to be present when the Rising Sun flag is hoisted over Hankow.

HANKOW hasn't fallen. Chinese armies in the zone of operations are resisting every inch of the way and their resistance may keep the anticipated prize out of Japanese hands for some time. But even should Hankow fall, it is by no means certain that the loss of this city will end Chinese resistance to the invaders any more than the fall of Shanghai, of Nanking, of Suchow did so.

Now there is no gainsaying the fact that, deprived of Hankow, which is at the junction of railroads connecting the north and south of China, the task of Chiang Kai-shek will be made harder.

In the first place it will cut off the central government's armies from the guerrilla forces operating in the northwest. In the second place it may give the Japanese a chance to consolidate the gains already made, provided, of course, that they find it possible to stay put and are not compelled by the force of circumstances to press still farther into the interior. And, thirdly, there is the possibility which the Japanese are banking on, to a very great extent, that after the fall of Hankow, the centrifugal elements long present in China will smash Chinese unity.

WITH RESPECT to the latter point, it is clear that there is a considerable element of wishful thinking in Japanese calculations. "When it leaves the city (Hankow)," says the Oriental Economist, "the Chiang government will lose virtually all of its remaining importance as the central government."

It happens that precisely the same point was made with regard to Nanking before that city came into Japanese hands many months ago. These anticipations were not realized. The present ones will not be, either. The puppet government which the Japanese established at that city has not been recognized by the Chinese. Nor will any government which the Japanese may erect at Hankow, following the capture of that center, meet with a different fate. On the other hand, there is every reason to anticipate that any place to which Chiang and his army may move will be in fact the Chinese capital.

It is apparent that in this, as in so many other particulars concerning the undeclared war, the Japanese are suffering from a complete lack of understanding of what has been happening in China. They still think in terms of China of the war lords. They refuse to admit that the nationalist movement has the whole nation in its grip. And because they fail to see this central fact in the present Chinese situation they place tremendous hope in the fall of Hankow, a hope all the greater because past hopes of victory have regularly been dashed to earth.

MONTHS HAVE passed since the drive on Hankow began. During all this time Chiang Kai-shek has had facing him the possibility that he would have to evacuate his temporary capital. He has thus had time to consider his line of retreat and make preparations for it. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that the fall of Hankow, if and when it occurs, will not mean the destruction of the Chinese army. And as long as that army remains in the field and under the leadership of Chiang, whose headship is recognized by all national elements, the war will not be over.

Indeed, reports indicate that in anticipation of a break in the Chinese lines of communication between north and south, Chiang has sent reinforcements to the former Red Army now operating in the northwest against the Japanese. Inured to isolation and with a striking capacity to fend for itself, this army will continue to remain a thorn in Japan's flesh for a long time. At the same time Chiang, by drawing into Yunnan, will actually be closer to his sources of supply of essential war materials than he was at Hankow.

EUROPEAN developments of the past fortnight have also given the Japanese a large measure of encouragement. The creation at Munich of something like a four-power group, two of whose members (Germany and Italy) are Japan's allies, has given rise to the rumor of new mediatory efforts to end the Sino-Japanese war, this time not by one power alone but by the four powers in concert, with Great Britain as the possible leader.

It is difficult to give serious credence to these rumors. No real basis for mediation exists. For while Chiang is certain to reject any deal confirming Japan in the possession or control of any region taken over during this war, Japan cannot accept any arrangement that restores the status quo. Yet, having won glory as a peacemaker in Europe (at the expense of Czechoslovakia), Chamberlain may like to try the role of peacemaker in Asia (at China's expense). In any event, developments in the Far East during the next weeks will be worth watching.

Railroad Board Denies 'Slow-up' In Clerical Work

The Railroad Retirement Board yesterday formally denied that its "routine clerical work" is "from three to six months in arrears," as stated in a story based on undercover discussion in some Government quarters of charges that what amounts to "slow-down" tactics were in progress or threatened in certain unionized Federal agencies.

The board has a personnel of about 1,200, more of whom, officials estimated informally, hold membership in the American Federation of Government Employes, affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, than in the United Federal Workers of America, the rival committee for industrial organization union.

"The railroad retirement board wishes to emphasize the fact," it said, "that its very large volume of work is progressing fully according to schedule. The board wishes to state also that it has found the organizations of its employes loyal and co-operative."

Navy Lets Contracts For 2 Tenders, Bullets

The Navy Department yesterday awarded contracts, totaling $23,196,000, to the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, Camden, N. J., for construction of a seaplane tender and a destroyer tender. The destroyer tender will be built at a cost of $11,947,000, and the price of the seaplane tender will be $11,249,000, officials said.

A $91,470 award for antiaircraft bullets also has been made to the Burgess Co., Inc., Beaver Falls, Pa., it was announced.

Traffic Sparklers Used to Keep Seaways Safe

Mariners have borrowed an idea from United States highways in devising aids to safety at sea and inland waterways.

Colored glass shields, similar to those now used on many traffic signs, have been devised for placement on life buoys, it was disclosed at a meeting of United States lighthouse superintendents yesterday in the Commerce Department. At night a mariner might locate danger or chart his course by turning a searchlight on these "traffic signals."

Among other new developments in the safety-at-sea devices is a sharp stem on lighted buoys. They are designed to keep sea gulls and other birds from parking on the lights to the detriment of their lighting effects.

Prize Comedy Packs Earle Second Week

Pulitzer Winner Held Laughter Still Reigns Stage Bill Retained

You can take "You Can't Take It With You" with you.

In fact, the Earle Theater is taking Y. C. T. I. W. Y. for a second week following the precedent set by "Robin Hood," the only other holdover at the Thirteenth street house in eight years. With Frank Capra's screen version of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman Pulitzer Prize play the Earle is also holding over its brief, but unusually fast-paced stage show.

By now much of America must have taken with them the happy philosophy of Granpa Vanderhof and daughter Penny's family. Grandpa with his distrist of income tax; Penny, with her troubles in getting Cynthia out of her typewriter-created monastery; Essie, with her love dream candy; Rheba, with her boy friend from the relief rolls, and Kolenkof, to whom everything "steenks" are all there.

Varies From Stage Hit

Theater addicts will note some new faces, grieve for some lost ones. New is Mr. Poppin, whom grandpa takes from his dreary adding machine because he likes to make things. There is no drunken actress for Penny's play, to be frightened at Grandpa's snakes, which, too, have slithered away. There is an uproarious night court scene and a heart-warming judge. There is a further emphasis on the futility of the Kirby family's fame and fortune, an emphasis more obvious than the subtler manner in which the stage version indicated the wealthy family's stuff-shirtedness.

On the stage it was the Grand Duchess Olga, another friend of the Sycamores, who could cook up, not only a tasty morsel, but also an awe from the haughty Kirbys. While Mr. Capra's film has replaced this character with an additional plot a little too full of coincidence for some, he has preserved the play's real humor and philosophy and for this we give thanks.

Stage Acts Continue.

Lionel Barrymore, looking distressingly frail, plays the lovable commencement attender and Spring Byington shines as his playwriting daughter. Edward Arnold is genuinely fine, as the rich Mr. Kirby, and Donald Meek has some excellent moments as Mr. Poppins. Jean Arthur and James Stewart give joyful life to the boy and girl romance. Mischa Auer, as Kolenkhov; H. B. Warner, Ann Miller and Halliwell Hobbes are also excellent among scores of other supporting players.

We like to think, too, that more people this week will have the chance to see M. Gaston Palmer get those spoons in the glasses in his refreshingly different juggling act. Lucy Monroe, one of the better light opera and radio sopranos, sings some Irving Berlin tunes, and last, but still among those you will want to take with you, is that dizzy blonde who rolls all over the place with 15 other Roxyettes in a bang-up finale.

Of course, you can take it with you—not money perhaps, but certainly an envy for those sensibly active Sycamores. R. L. C.

"Four Daughters" has been good enough to last three weeks downtown, so you might deem it worthy of seeing. Life magazine called it a "Picture of the Week," and practically all its new faces seem headed for stardom.

Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn and John Garfield have received rave notices for their makebelieving as a kid sister, a young musician and a disillusioned big-city boy who happens along. Among them, and with the flawless assistance of May Robson, Claude Rains, Rosemary and Lola Lane and Gale Page, is presented an engaging depiction of events in a family of four daughters.

Dark, tragic-destined John Garfield disrupts for awhile the smooth flow of time in the big house, but when he goes away, the usual rhythm is resumed.

Priscilla marries Jeffrey, the other girls get readjusted, Aunt May Robson bustles happily about and Papa Rains again has his family evening musicals, tootling esstatically on his flute.

This story, in showing how six people laugh, weep, love, marry, die, is appealing for any number of reasons, but principally because it is peopled by a young group who gaily fumble through life. Perhaps they are not fine actors, but merely healthy youngsters who have the good fortune to be cast in a play having surefire ingredients of audience appeal. We choose to think, however, that they would click in a far different type of story. John Garfield seems to us to be the pick of the crew, in spite of the preference for Miss Lane shown by the cadets at V. M. I.

A carload of films might be examined before finding one of the caliber of this, in so far as being able to recommend it for the whole family is concerned. S. S.

An opportunity to see and hear one of the great musical geniuses of our generation—a man who was world famous at the turn of the century, who turned from his profession to the attempt to deliver his country from turmoil, who, now in his old age has again turned to his music—this is the opportunity offered in "Moonlight Sonata," with Paderewski.

The picture and its slight romantic story are only a frame for the old maestro and his playing. How much of his early power is retained by Paderewski is not for this critic to say—but he has surely retained that magic lucidity of touch in all completeness.

Not only does the "Moonlight Sonata's" still flood of lucent tone pour from the piano. There is also Chopin's Polonaise in A flat major, Paderewski's own Minuet in G major. Also, that often maltreated Second Hungarian Rhapsody of Liszt's receives its proper benediction of beauty and precision via the Paderewski finger tips.

Charles Farrell (remember Gaynor and Farrell?) is the leading man in this British production. He looks as young as he did in the days when he sang "Diane." But Paderewski, patriarch of music in our age, is the good reason for "Moonlight Sonata."

'Straight, Place and Show' Cashes In at Capitol; At the Palace, Salmon Run in 'Spawn of the North'

Ritz Brothers' Best Steeplechase Comedy Support Is Able Excellent Stage Bill

"STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the play by Damon Runyon and Irving Caesar, starring the Ritz Brothers, with Phyllis Brooks, Ethel Merman, Richard Arlen, George Barbier, Willie Best, Paul Hurst and others. Directed by David Butler. Reviewed Friday afternoon at Loew's Capitol Theater.

BELL.

Any professional railbird clocking their performances in this daffy comedy of the race tracks probably would discover that the lunatic Ritz Brothers overplay as much, "mug" as much and burlesque as much as ever they did, but it nevertheless seemed less to me yesterday afternoon that "Straight, Place and Show" is the most legitimately funny starring vehicle they have had to date. They have been equipped with some genuinely funny lines, many ridiculous situations and a story that really starts to go some place and eventually gets there.

"Straight, Place and Show" is in the usual Damon Runyan-Irving Caesar manner, when they concern themselves with foolish fictions having any sort of travestied sport as background, and has been dressed up by some additional trimming by Lew Brown, a bit of a showman on his own account. There are some torchy tunes woven into the action for Ethel Merman to sing—perhaps "dragged into the action" would be better—and a thread of romance fully justifies the presence of Phyllis Brooks and Richard Arlen in the cast of principals.

Playboy Can Jump

Barbara Drake is a fabulously rich young woman—in her father's name—who falls more completely in love with a horse she owns than with the handsome young man to whom she is engaged. This plug, Playboy, is raced on the flat and, after winning one heat at a national-debt price, displays a fine enthusiasm for chasing the rest of the bangtails down the stretch. So Denny makes a bet with Barbara whereby he finally comes into possession of the nag to do with as he pleases. He pleases to give it away to three roustabouts operating a pony ring for the amusement of small children. They discover that Playboy is a steeplechaser, instead of a flat runner, and can out-jump anything this side of a leaping impalla.

There is the usual frameup, of course, whereby Playboy is ticketed to lose the $25,000 stake race, but the Ritz Brothers take care of that in their own crackpot way. The running of the race is the high point of hilarity in the film, but a close second is provided by the wrestling match in which Harry Ritz tackles the heavyweight champ to earn Playboy's nomination fee. The running of the steeplechase is reminiscent of the similar climax in Douglas MacLean's old silent picture of "The Hottentot" and the wrestling bout is akin to Joe E. Brown's with Man Mountain Dean in Columbia's recent "The Gladiator." In point of numbers, at least, the Ritz boys have a 3-to-1 edge on both Mr. MacLean and Mr. Brown.

Miss Merman's songs are sung with all of her accustomed skill, and, at times, represent what otherwise would have been a portion of her romantic dialogue. She and Phyllis Brooks and Mr. Arden play their roles in accordance with the first word of the title, as does George Barbier, cast as the rich Mr. Drake. The featured horse is as canny a fellow as the broken-down sprinter in "Stablemates," which will be coming along shortly. Perhaps he is the same one. Good actor, at any rate.

An Ace Stage Bill

The stage bill at the Capitol this week almost keeps abreast of the dizzy pace of the picture. Eddie Garr, versatile comedian and impersonator, didn't quite master the ceremonies at the first performance. They almost mastered him. But the stage goings-on offered a lively interval of entertainment, at that, and such lapses as there were could not be blamed on Mr. Garr as much as upon lack of adequate rehearsal of everyone concerned.

That superlative mute comedian, Fred Sanborn, dashed about during the entire proceedings and in time settled down to his xylophone act, which is far and away the best of its kind in existence. Sanborn is a complete musician as well as comedian. He virtually stopped the show, just as Eddie Garr did when he got around to doing his own individual turn in the spotlight. His song in the blended manners of Harry Richman, Maurice Chevalier, Edgar Bergen, Ned Sparks, Joe Penner and one or two others, as well as his "drunk" bit, which crowds Jim Barton's for top honors in vaudeville, both are classics.

Then there are Ethel Shepard, who proved a sterling vocalist in spite of ragged accompaniments, and Jean Tanner, a tap dancer who ranks with the best of them now before the public — not forgetting Chester Hale's 24 Capitol Dancers, in a series of routines a little more complex than usual.

The Fox Movietone News and a Jefferson Machamer artist-showgirl short subject supplement a bill that had yesterday's house rolling in the aisles.

Started as Birdie-Watcher

Alice Connor, young Warner Bros. stock campany actress, was signed when a talent scout noticed her picture in a bathing suit advertisement.

Too Cold for Him

Carl Esmond, Viennese actor featured in "Dawn Patrol," changed his name from Willy Eichberger because much of his fan mail came addressed to Willy Iceberg.

Their Bangtail Wins the Race!

PHYLLIS BROOKS, RICHARD ARLEN, ETHEL MERMAN cast in the principal roles in support of the Ritz Brothers in Damon Runyon's story of "Straight, Place and Show," a comedy of the race tracks, picturized by Twentieth Century-Fox. This wild extravaganza is chief screen feature for the current week at Loew's Capitol Theater.

Is Vivid Melodrama Has Stellar Cast Fights Are Vicious Varied Auxiliaries

"SPAWN OF THE NORTH." Paramount picturization of a story by Burgess Willoughby, adapted to the screen by Jules Furthman, featuring George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore and Akim Tamiroff, with Lynne Overman, Louise Platt, Fuzzy Knight, Vladimir Sokoloff, Duncan Rinaldo, Wade Boteler, Harvey Clark, Monte Blue, Arthur Aylesworth, John Wray, Frank Puglia, "Slicker," the trained seal, and scores more. Directed by Henry Hathaway. Previewed Tuesday, October 4, At Loew's Palace Theater.

The idyllic opening scenes, with the salmon leaping up rushing rapids and glistening waterfalls to reach their northern spawning grounds, offer no suggestion of the incidents of violence that are to follow in the unfolding of this turbulent melodrama of the Alaskan frontier. "Spawn of the North," as a matter of fact, is a trifle dilatory in getting to the gist of its furious story of honest fishermen and poachers, rival loves and shatered friendships, meddling fathers and muddling criminals. Once under way, however, it surges forward through intervals of manhandling and mayhem to the triumphant victory of law and order over primitive lust at the sacrificial cost of the life of a repentant renegade.

There is a little bit of everything that ever went into a frontier thriller in this new frame for an old theme. The incidents of physical combat are savagery in the raw; the romance has been done a thousand times on the plains and in the mountains of the West, instead of over the frigid waters of the Arctic fishing banks; the comedy relief and Indian embellishments are in the customary pattern. It is inevitable that there should be a tremendously solid impact upon the spectator's consciousness from all this, whether it is a pleasant one, or one of utter revulsion.

Split Over "The Law"

Tyler Dawson and Jim Kemerlee are old pals of the northern waters. Both have dreams of a golden future, a return to the States and a life of luxurious ease. Jim is perpetuating the work of his father in the fish cannery business; Tyler is intent on buying a larger boat and graduating from salmon to seals. The need of orderly Government and legal regulation of the salmon industry is just beginning to penetrate to the far outposts. One faction favors the law; the other advocates a continuance of existing conditions until their unbridled thievery has made them rich. Jim is of the first group, Tyler of the latter.

Into this potential civil war comes the girl both have known "back home." She is greeted as a threat by Nicky Duvall, former dance-hall girl, operating the one hotel where all must live. Diane's father is the verbose editor of the local paper, whose windy and repetitious stories of recurrent annual events are edited into a few short, crisp sentences by his one-man editorial and composing-room staff. On the edges of all this is Red Skain, Russian pirate, who motivates most of the evil in the settlement.

Such is the conglomerate arrangement of people and events out of which the picture compounds its festivals of minor carnage, its disruptions of long attachments and its eventual triumph of right. A lighter touch of refreshing comedy permeates the piece through the unbelievable precocity of "Slicker," the trained seal, which, at times, comes dangerously near "stealing the picture" from George Raft, Henry Fonda, Akim Tamiroff, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt and the hosts of others who contribute to its sanguinary content. "Slicker" is quite a chap, endowed with the talents of a composite Booth, Johnnie Weissmuller and Eddie Foy.

Is Handsomely Cast

But his human associates are not so bad, either. Henry Fonda and George Raft are the warring buddies and Miss Platt and Miss Lamour their respective lady loves. Mr. Barrymore is the editor and Lynne Overman his assistant. Mr. Tamiroff is the murderous Skain and Fuzzy Knight flits in and out of the early sequences as an ill-fated young clown who sings lusty songs at the piano.

There will be those, who like strong meat in their motion picture fare, who will insist that "Spawn of the North" is not to be condemned. There will be others who will contend that it is not to be condoned. It is a pretty good picture of its kind—if you like the kind.

The supplementary features of the program tone the new week's bill at the Palace down a bit. They consist of a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Miniature, "Forgotten Steps;" M-G-M's short historical mystery, "Bravest of the Brave," pertaining to the controversial memory of the French Napoleonic military expert, Marshal Ney, and the new issue of the "News of the Day."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 7.—Praise be! We've found a man who'd rather be a butler than be a hero. Hm-hm, they do exist. He's Albert Holmwood, who was offered the job of Gary Cooper's stand-in while Gary was visiting back East, because he looked like him. He said in a dulcet but firm tone: "Why should I step down? I've served Lady Nancy Astor and the Alexander Hamilton Rices and do my own standing-in."

HEDDA HOPPER

The day after Kay Francis moved out of her dressing room, which she occupied for seven years on Warners' lot, Humphrey Bogart took possession. Asked if he wanted it renovated, he replied, "No, I'm hoping for a bit of her luck."

Mickey Rooney must have seen Disney's cartoon, because in his rumpus room at new ranch house, he's going to have murals of his favorite stars. Spencer Tracy as bareback rider; Garbo, the dancer; Clark Gable, a matador; Paul Muni, acrobat, and Mae West as Little Eva. No wonder he's having a nervous breakdown at 17.

Director Arthur Lubin is building a guest ranch near Homestead and will fine anyone $5 for talking shop. He sure wants to be alone.

His pals laughed at Chief of Police Whitey Henry, on Metro lot, when he put on ice skates. Then he laughed, for he really knew what they were for.

Nothing happened to Jimmy Cagney's house in Martha's Vineyard during the storm, but his sail boat was picked up and put down 50 yards inland in the middle of a main road, stopping traffic.

Robert Preston, discovered in the Pasadena Playhouse by Paramount's lawyer, has just been signed by Cecil DeMille for "Union Pacific." Not an Adonis, but he has s. a., and I don't mean maybe.

Those kids, Donald O'Connor and Billy Cook, played hookey from "Tom Sawyer, Detective," at Arrowhead and went fishing. What do you think they used as bait? Spaghetti. They figured the fish wouldn't know the difference. Fish fooled 'em.

"No lace panties," say the Ritz Brothers in "The Three Musketeers."

Something new at Paul Flato's, when he spotlighted the gems instead of girls, who wore new gowns specially designed to show his jewels. Men turned out in droves—Charlie Chaplin, A. C. Blumenthal, Stan Gwen, among a dozen others. Music from a zither, comments by Constance Collier, cocktails—well, they were good. Grand time was had by all and jewels were brilliant.

The passing of Conway Tearle marks another movie milestone. Kids may doubt it, but he was as popular in his day as Valentino or Clarke Gable today.

Producer Phil Goldstone bought and remodeled the old Alexandria Hotel, which holds so many memories for all of us. It will open in a few weeks for another long lease of life. It was there Doug Fairbanks, sr., asked the poet, Tagore, what picture he was playing in. We were simple then—not ashamed to admit we didn't know much.

A salute to the pioneers. Gertrude Atherton, because she has a new book on the stands. And to Isobel Field, who at 80 is writing another story on the life of her step-father, Robert Louis Stevenson. She said: "You'd think I'd reached the age of discretion—I'm hoping I'll never get there."

An incident in her new book will tell about her meeting up with Author George Meredith, and a group of his cronies, who were anxious to know all about Stevenson's life. One long rangy man in the group kept interrupting her. She kept shushing him. Finally she turned to her host and said, "Who is that man leaning against the mantle?"

"Oh, that's only George Bernard Shaw," was the answer.

Columbia

Cut short by the unique invention of Dr. Guillotin, the career of Marie Antoinette again unfolds itself this week at the Columbia for its fourth week on F street.

From the first scene, in which the little Austrian archduchess finds herself the future Queen of France, to the final, realistic shot of the Widow Capet, a biography is encompassed which is a movie "natural."

It must be remembered first and foremost that this film makes no pretense to historical accuracy. It was made strictly to give entertainment to millions the world over who dote on a romantic story of love and life in real settings. That "Marie Antoinette" gives us a background of Louis XV and the deluge that followed his reign should not lead us to overemphasize this background of what is primarily a romance. Count Axel de Fersen may not have played the role in history which he does in this film, and Marie may not have been the American girl's ideal of regal integrity that Norma Shearer makes her, but it all makes for a big, lush film on an elegant Hollywood scale.

As the star, Miss Shearer plays all her many scenes to the traditional hilt. Charming, gay and beautiful in the first four-fifths of the film, she strikes out in a coldly realistic note in her latter scenes, providing a stark and vivid contrast to the earlier Marie. Robert Morley as Louis XVI makes his American debut something to be remembered, building sympathy for the weak King of the Place de la Concorde draws nearer. John Barrymore and Gladys George, as Louis XV and Mme. Dubarry, contribute such skillful playing in these artificial roles that one sympathizes with Director Van Dyke for having to limit their scenes for the sake of his story.

The extravagant production accorded by M. G. M. to this film deserves particular note, for the script by Claudine West, Donald Ogden Stewart and Ernest Vajda, based on Stefan Zweig's popular biography, is generally agreed as being one of the finest to appear on the Coast. That they have managed to include so many events within a single film is greatly to their credit, and the lines they have written are among the most excellent heard from the screen. That the film slows up on occasion is not due to their script, but to the insistence of custom on showing us every important movement and brain process of the star of any picture.

Joseph Schildkaut is superbly hateful as the King's treacherous and ambitious brother, and Anita Louise lends her familiar charm as Marie's faithful friend. As an aging Swedish count, Tyronne Power is a grinning American, class of '42, but as Miss Shearer's lover—well, she seemed satisfied.

Brief shorts and a newsreel accompany the vastly popular Toinett this week. R. L. C.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 7.

SEC. OF TREAS. MORGENTHAU: Montague Norman, head of the Bank of England, plans to visit this country within two weeks to confer secretly with New York banking firms . . . F. D. R.: Frank Capra, who directed "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," arrived here incognito yesterday, en route to Washington. He's collecting data for a new film, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Washington" . . . Rep. Dies: Isn't it true that Edwin P. Banta, who testified before your committee about Communism and the WPA, was scheduled to address the German-American Bund—until you called him and asked him not to do it?"

GABBY HARTNETT: Dizzy Dean is very optimistic about the series. He already has signed for vaudeville engagements . . . Roger Wolfe Kahn: Your sister, Mrs. John Marriott, and her husband—both of whom fled to America because of the war scare—now feel safe again, after a few days, and will return to Europe next week . . . Harold Ross: Peter Arno, who cartoons for your New Yorker magazine, is completing arrangements to build his own night club, and decorate it himself.

WILL HAYS: $250,000 soon will be spent to re-condition the old Biograph studios in the Bronx. The backers expect to produce at least 12 pictures there next year . . . Clarence Mackay: Dwight Fiske, the risque songsmith, tried to send Song-o-grams announcing his Savoy-Plaza engagement. Postal Telegraph refused to send the wires, explaining they were too risque . . . Don Budge: A photo of your tennis colleague, Frank Shields, adorns the "Celebrities Section" at El Morocco—but Shields won't be able to see it. As a result of his fight with Stetson Coleman, he's barred.

WALTER DURANTY: Poland has protested to Colonel McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, about the stories sent by Donald Day, the Tribune's correspondent in Latvia. Day who can't get into Russia, now can't get into Poland, either . . . Maxwell Anderson: Sam Behrman, a member of your Playwrights' Productions, went to Hartford to see your "Knickerbocker Holiday." At intermission, he asked one customer about the play, and got a very favorable reaction. He didn't know the customer was your son.

HARRY HOPKINS: Tommy Manville, who fired all his employes and went to live in his garage—as a protest against overtaxation and government spending—was swamped there when the gaage became flooded in 6 feet of water . . . Manville still lives in the garage—but to get it into habitable condition he had to hire 17 men!

GROVER WHALEN: Rudahigwa IV Mutare, King of the Watusi in the Belgian Congo, was invited last week to come to America during the World's Fair here, and preside at the proposed Belgian Congo Village exhibit. Yesterday he cabled: "Glad to preside—but I still think Grover Whalen is a myth" . . . Clare Boothe: Frank Wilson, the butler in your "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," is called upon to sigh, "WPA, here we come." Wilson, before being selected for this role, worked for the WPA.

JOHN L. LEWIS: In M-G-M's new film, "Ice Follies," the script requires prop men to scrape the ice, while wearing ice-skates. Because none of the prop men could skate, a union problem was presented, as no out-siders could be brought in. M-G-M is settling it all—by sending 15 prop men to the Polar Place to learn how to skate . . . Tommy Hitchcock: Winston Guest refused to be photographed in the cafes last night. "I'll pose," he insisted, "but only on a polo field."

GILDA GRAY: Billy Rose's representative phoned your house last night, to hire you for the new show next week. Your maid said, "Miss Gray is out, but I'll tell her your message when she comes in." Dosen't she know you're now in Bombay, India? . . . Gen. Pershing: Although 50,000 American Legionnaires visited the Warner studios in Hollywood in one day, there was only one casualty, someone swiped the "No Visitors" sign.

DARRYL ZANUCK: Tyrone Power is willing to settle his agent's suit by paying $35,00. The agent, though, wants $50,000.

Court Upholds 'Penalty' on Tobacco Quota

price-fixing at the next session of Congress, and with continuing reports of severe attacks on the program in the farm belts, Wallace devoted his broadcast to a straightforward exposition of the background for his sudden organization shake-up.

Meanwhile, through the Republican National Congressional Committee, Representative J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania, declared "the sweeping revolt of our American farmers against compulsory crop control and meddlesome bureaucratic domination from Washington, is the most significant fact in national politics today."

Sees Gain for G. O. P.

He estimated a gain of 70 Congressional seats for the G. O. P. in November, adding:

"The disastrous agricultural policies of the last five years cannot be ameliorated by a mere shuffling of the Wallace bureaucracy. Yesterday's departmental reorganization presents a last desperate attempt to make the quota system work. The new arrangement of offices and powers in the department merely seeks to force the rejected and repudiated Wallace schemes upon American agriculture."

While quietly observing his fiftieth birthday anniversary at his desk, the Secretary explained over the National Farm and Home program that Congress in the last five years had passed more than a dozen different pieces of farm legislation in an effort to assist the country's farmers.

Programs Overlapping

After enumerating the major changes and transfers which will bring together scattered and overlapping programs throughout the department, Wallace concluded his address with the remark

"I believe that we have now reshaped the machinery of the Department of Agriculture so as to bring the full range of our resources to bear on each of the major public problems with which we are commissioned to deal."

The Secretary will continue his efforts to rally farmers behind his program with a speech in the heart of the corn belt, at Springfield, Ill., on October 14, scene of the grass-roots "revolt" of last spring against the program.

Spoke in Texas, Kansas

He returned only this week from making other addresses in defense of the program at Fort Worth, Tex., and Hutchinson, Kans., in the cotton and wheat belts, respectively.

No address has yet been scheduled in tobacco-growing regions, it was said, despite repeated reports of dissatisfaction in Georgia.

He has recently contended that attacks on the present legislation are being directed by "reactionary interests," while conceding that the program has not yet achieved its goal of stabilized farm prices, and of security of farm tenure. He has suggested that Congress strengthen the present program by enacting processing taxes to finance greater subsidies to farmers when prices are under "fair" levels.

Last Flare Saves 4 on Foundering Bay Cruiser

Baltimore, Oct. 7 (AP).—Four Baltimoreans headed homeward back up Chesapeake Bay tonight, safe and sound because a passing Bay Liner's captain saw the flickering rays of their last SOS flare.

For four and a half hours last night the four men fired flare after flare from their disabled cruiser off Gibson Island and bailed frantically to keep their 32-foot craft from foundering. Then the Chesapeake Line Steamer Yorktown came alongside and took the dripping wet men aboard. The four, Dr. Roland Tressler, dentist and owner of the cruiser; John G. Connelly, William E. Richardson and John Stadler, went on to Norfolk, Va., aboard the Yorktown, and left there tonight on the vessel for the return trip.

Dewey Honse, dismissed Wednesday.

The factory began operations less than three months ago. Women were paid 20 cents an hour and men 25 cents for the first three-month training period, with increases to be granted at the end of that time, Mrs. Karp said.

Under the arrangement with the Government the first 20 per cent of the factory's net profits each year goes to the employes as a profit-sharing bonus. Eight women and ten men are involved in the walkout.

Takes Cutter to Operation

Emergency medical aid was rushed yesterday from Honolulu to tiny Jarvis Island in mid-Pacific by the Coast Guard cutter Roger B. Taney, a radio message to the Treasury Department announced. The wireless said ship's doctors performed an operation for appendicitis on Carl Kahlaewai, who was doing nicely.

from his chair and paced across the speakers' rostrum. As soon as Tobin finished, the American Federation of Labor president swung his gavel and announced the session would adjourn for lunch.

As the surprised delegates streamed from the coliseum, Daniel W. Tracy, president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, disclosed to newspapermen that he had approached President Roosevelt indirectly last March with a proposal the President try to effect mediation of labor's family quarrel by appointing a three-man commission.

Tracy said Mr. Roosevelt did not feel at liberty at the time to inject himself into the controversy, and the prospect of Presidential mediation vanished until it was revived here after receipt of the President's peace plea.

Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the federation, assailed the labor board in an address before the convention.

Denouncing the principles and policies of board decisions considered adverse to A. F. of L. craft unions, Padway charged that Board Member Edwin S. Smith was partial to the industrial unionism advocated by the rival C. I. O.

Federation officials already have declared their opposition to President Roosevelt's reappointment of Donald Wakefield Smith, another member of the three-man board.

The federation, Padway asserted, was still strong for the basic principles of the Wagner act, which provides for labor's right of self-organization and collective bargaining with employers.

Padway told the delegates that Edwin S. Smith had won his colleague, Donald W. Smith, over to his side in deciding questions involving bargaining disputes between the federation and the C. I. O.

Youth, Wanted Here, Sentenced In New Orleans

A youth booked as Richard Bennett Heck, 18, once thought to be the "rose bandit" who blazed a trail of bizarre burglaries here, was sentenced in New Orleans yesterday to serve 90 days in parish prison on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, according to the Associated Press. Another man has confessed he was the rose bandit.

Washington's rose bandit earned his title by leaving a rose at every place he robbed. Heck was arrested at New Orleans July 17 after he drew a pistol on Policeman Matt Nolan, who felled him with a blackjack. New Orleans police said he would be turned over to Washington authorities after he serves his term there. He is under indictment here for housebreaking.

Evidence Drunk, Liquor Case Suspect Freed

Because the evidence in a liquor case was drunk by a police informer, leaving nothing for a certified chemical analysis, Katherine Douglas, colored, was freed yesterday on a directed verdict in Police Court.

Judge Curran was requested by Defense Attorney Robert I. Miller to dismiss the charges on the ground that the warrant to search the premises in the 1600 block of Sixteenth street northeast, last June, was issued without probable cause.

Swiss Neutral Policy Stressed by Envoy

Elkins, W. Va., Oct. 7 (AP).—Marc Peter, Swiss Minister to the United States, said today the Swiss "have proved for centuries that people forming a nation of different speaking groups can get along together."

Addressing a throng at the ninth Mountain State Forest Festival, Peter said:

"The best way to be happy is to be neutral and not interfere with the quarrels of our neighbors. Switzerland has succeeded in keeping liberty and independence and has maintained the old traditional customs of self-government."

ADA Proposes Free Rent for Relief Families

Alley

explained, will be made possible by applying the money collected from three-fourths of the tenants for District taxes. As the low-cost housing projects are Federal in character, the ADA pays no local property taxes.

Thus, instead of paying an average monthly rent per room of $10.70 on one project, the selected fourth will pay an average of only $3.25 per room. This latter figure, however, will be adjusted in accordance with the family's financial needs. The first group will have an estimated average income of $1,654 and the second $503.

On another project three-fourths of the families, with average incomes of $1,253, will pay an average rent of $6.14 per room, whereas the fourth, with incomes of $137 or less, will pay an average rent of 67 cents per room or, in some instances, nothing.

Ihlder said that the practice of charging tenants for District taxes in the "cost" rents already is being followed on ADA projects in operation.

Next Move Up to Straus

Members of the Alley Dwelling Authority are Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman; Arno B. Cammerer, executive officer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol.

The next move will be up to Administrator Straus, who has been in dispute with Ihlder for several months over the issue of Federal subsidies vs. self-sustaining rents.

While preferring the 90 per cent loan, which includes the Federal subsidy, Straus has indicated he will approve the ADA 100 per cent grant providing Ihlder can convince him that "the lowest income" group would be cared for in the housing construction.

Ihlder, in a letter to Straus, said that the ADA had considered his suggestion that the District's application be amended to a 90-per-cent loan, supplemented by a 10-per-cent loan from the District, "both to be accompanied by subsidies in which the District's share will be 20 per cent of the subsidy paid by the USHA.

"This involves a contract between the ADA and the District government," Ihlder said, "binding the District government to make a 10 per cent loan if and when Congress appropriates the money.

"Consideration of this proposal necessarily took account of (1) time required to put the plan into operation, (2) effect upon costs as well as rents, (3) possible legal and financial complications.

"On all three counts the 100 per cent loan seems to the Alley Dwelling Authority more advanstageus.

"It can be put into effect at once without necessity of securing the concurrence of other governmental agencies as would be necessary under the 90 per cent proposal. It exercises a constant pressure to keep costs down and, under the plan proposed by the ADA, all rents will be within the range of low-income families while some rents will be so low that dwellings will be available even for families on relief, which is not possible under the subsidy plan.

Avoids Legal Questions

"It avoids legal complications, such as the question of the District contracting to pay money which Congress has not appropriated, and financial complications, such as, in case Congress should not appropriate the money, the Alley Dwelling Authority being left with an uncompleted project for the completion of which no means are available. The ADA has been advised by the District government that it has no legal right to enter into such a contract.

"Moreover, separate contracts for successive parts of a development—10 per cent being left until money becomes available—are likely to add to costs, and the ADA wishes to keep down costs. Therefore, it seems to the ADA that acceptance of the 90 per cent proposal would both cause delays and increase costs."

Ihlder said the ADA is "concerned over the possibility of assuming obligations in the form of developments for which only partial funds are provided" and asked Straus if the USHA would convert a 90 per cent loan into a 100 per cent loan in case the District appropriation did not materialize.

While pointing out the difficulty of estimating accurate rents on low-cost housing in advance, Ihlder said that the scale submitted listed "outside rents" rather than low figures which the ADA "hoped" to reach. Nevertheless, he added, they compare favorably with the "shelter rents" of other cities as published recently in The Post.

"Provision for the 'lowest group' cannot be made by a flat housing subsidy," Ihlder wrote, "applicable to all dwellings alike, even when the subsidy pays all interest and repays the total capital cost."

The District plan, however, he said, "will make the new dwellings available to all the economic levels among the low-income groups for whom private enterprise does not provide.

"By so making it possible for non-self-supporting families to live among self-supporting families, the ADA is following recognized sound social practice, while segregation of dependent families in communities by themselves is recognized as unsound."

Explaining the proposed rent scale of ADA, Ihlder said:

"Some of these rents, even on the sites having the highest costs, average less than the lowest estimates for subsidized dwellings in smaller cities. On the least expensive sites the average of 67 and 81 cents per room per month for assisted families is very far below the lowest quoted on subsidized houses anywhere.

"The income groups to be served range from those with no income up to an average of $1,657 on the most expensive sites. On the less expensive sites the income groups to be served average under $1,253 at 'cost' rents and under $170 where aid is extended.

"Data quoted in the ADA application of September 24 shows that the low-income group for whom private enterprise does not build an adequate supply of dwellings ranges down from approximately $2,000. It may be noted that the District Medical Society in its proposed new service to families of low income places the dividing line at $2,500. So $1,657 is well below the dividing line."

Proposed Rent Scale

Following is the proposed rent scale submitted to the United States Housing Authority by the Alley Dwelling Authority in justification of its application for a $10,641,021 loan:

Site No.	No. of living units	No. of rooms	District's monthly contribution (unpaid taxes)	No. of families aided	Average "cost" rent per room (a)	Average "reduced" rent per room (b)		Estimated average income groups served
1.	448	1,447	$2,687.67	112	$10.70	$3.25	(a)	$1,654.00

Dr. Holmes To Preach at National City

Dr. Arthur Holmes

Topic 'Perfect Church'

Dr. Arthur Holmes, to be guest preacher at National City Christian Church tomorrow morning, an Ohioan by birth, holds a bachelor's degree from one of his State's colleges, Hiram, where James A. Garfield was a student.

Garfield was associated with the National City congregation in its early days, and the building now used as its social hall was a memorial to the martyred President.

Dr. Holmes is also a graduate of Bethany College, which supplied Dr. Frederick Power and Dr. Earle Willey as ministers to the congregation. From the University of Pennsylvania Dr. Holmes took the master of arts and the doctor of philosophy degrees and has three degrees in theology from the Philadelphia Episcopal Seminary.

At present Dr. Holmes is professor of homiletics at Butler University. He was professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, dean of the general faculty at Pennsylvania State College and president of Drake University. His theme tomorrow is "The Perfect Church."

Takoma Church Tomorrow Marks Golden Jubilee

Continuing its golden jubilee celebration, launched last Sunday, the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church will hold a special anniversary service tomorrow, with the minister, the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, preaching at 11 a. m. on "The Church Through Half a Century."

Past and present scouts and scoutmasters of the church troop, formed in 1912, two years after the founding of the international movement, will be guests at the 8 o'clock service, when the pastor will address them on "The Troop and the Church."

Another highlight of the fiftieth anniversary observance will be the congregational dinner on Wednesday night at 6:30, when Dr. John Van Ness, of Philadelphia, first pastor of the church, will speak and Dr. J. Arthur Le Clerc will serve as master of ceremonies.

The church was founded in 1888, when Takoma Park had a population of 500. In 1893 the congregation was organized as the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. The present building was erected in 1923, six years prior to the coming of the Rev. Mr. Schearrer.

'Loyalty Month' Rally Held By Albright Memorial Youth

200 Attend Dinner
Girls' Choir in Fete
Mrs. MacConnell Directs

As a highlight of "Loyalty Month" the youth of Albright Memorial Evangelical congregation last night staged a rally dinner and stunt program in the recreation hall at Fourth and Rittenhouse streets northwest.

More than 200 took part, including members of the four Christian Endeavor Societies and several Sunday school classes, as well as the girls' A Capella Choir, a unit formed two years ago by Mrs. Martha MacConnell, present director. Mrs. Rea MacIntire is organist-accompanist of the group, which has given concerts in principal cities of the South and East. There are also adults' and children's choirs the latter conducted by Mrs. Clifford Reynolds.

Leaders of the Endeavorers are Dorothy Stewart, juniors, with Miss Evelyn Alberts as adult supervisor; Dorothy Brown, Intermediate-Crusaders' Society, and Mrs. Ada Brown, advisor; Mary Louise Bernheisel, Intermediate Challenge Society, and Miss Alberts, seniors.

"Reognition Day, for officers and teachers of the Sunday school is slated for October 16, when the following will be among those honored. Wilbur Snyder, general superintendent; Mrs. Wiliam McKenney, beginners; Mrs. Leroy Poole, kindergarden; Mrs. Dovey Titus, juniors; the Rev. George E. Schnabel, intermediate-seniors; Mrs. Wilbur Snyder, young peoples, and John Hughes, adults.

Men of the congregation also will have their inning during "Loyalty Month," which will be climaxed with a special program on November 6, marking the eleventh anniversary of the dedication of the present structure.

The Men's Brotherhood, led by Samuel W. Stewart, will conduct a program on October 23. This organization, which sponsors a men's Bible class, taught by the Rev. Mr. Schnabel, Albright minister, is now planning a community club for boys. Among the class members is George Corbin, president of the Manor Park Citizens Association.

All women's activities at Albright are centered around the guild, the president of which is Mrs. Samuel Stewart, who is assisted by Mrs. Schnabel and Mrs. Lewis Townsend. Missionary, child study, art, educational tours and other projects are sponsored. Miss Evelyn Ball, primary teacher and active Guild worker, will meet next week to organize a Girl Scout Troop, with Mrs. George Haverstock serving as chairman of the committee. Also co-operating will be Mesdames William Hollister, Henry Seachrist, Thomas Higgins and Kenneth Foote.

Rev. G. E. Schnabel

This Sunday having been designated as "Family Day," features of the services will be the ceremonies of blessing the home and the baptism of children.

Mr. Emmett Jester is president of the board of trustees of the church, which held its first services January 27, 1927, in a tent on the present site. Until the present edifice was finished, November 4, 1927, a storeroom on upper Third street northwest was used. When the twelfth anniversary rolls around the congregation expects to be worshiping in a new $85,000 auditorium which is now being planned. James Titsworth is board secretary and Russell Bortz, treasurer. Edward Turner serves as chairman of the board of stewards, with Harry Garner as secretary.

Bishop Freeman, Dean Powell to Talk

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of Washington, and the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of Washington Cathedral and warden of the College of Preachers, will deliver the sermons at the 4:30 p. m. and 11 a. m. services, respectively, in the cathedral tomorrow. Music will be furnished by the cathedral choir of men and boys.

Services for the day begin with celebrations of Holy Communion in the Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 a. m. and 9:30 a. m.

Following the 11 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. services, members of the congregations may participate in a pilgrimage through the cathedral.

Peoples Congregational

At the morning service the minister, the Rev. A. F. Elmes, will preach on "Can Any Good Thing Come Out of Nazareth?"

Christian Science Topic Announced

"Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Jeremiah 30:17: "I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert." (Isaiah 35:6).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let us banish sickness as an outlaw, and abide by the rule of perpetual harmony—God's law. It is man's moral right to annul an unjust sentence, a sentence never inflicted by divine authority."

Dr. F. W. Perkins To Give Sermon

"Living Religiously" will be the topic of Dr. Frederic W. Perkins' sermon at the Universalist Memorial Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. At the adult forum at 10 o'clock Dr. Paul Kaufman will discuss "The Formation of Public Opinion."

All Souls'. Dr. Paul Heyl, of the United States Bureau of Standards, who spent the summer abroad, will speak before the adult class in current problems at 10 a. m., taking for his subject, "A Scientist Looks at Europe."

In the comparative religion class Dr. Will Hutchins, of American University, will give an illustrated talk on "Symbolism in Art."

Continuing his sermons on "The Things We Live By," the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., will preach at the 11 o'clock service on "The Hopes That Make Us Men."

Potomac Heights

The installation of officers and teachers of the Sunday school, including the Randall Bible Class, will be a feature of the service tomorrow at 11 a. m., when the Rev. O. J. Crandall will preach on "The Teaching Ministry of the Church." Frances Wyatt and Adelle Chambers, delegates to the Fredericksburg Christian Endeavor conference, will report at 7 p. m.

Youth in Capital Churches

The Young People's Fellowship of Luther Place Memorial will celebrate at a banquet Tuesday at 7 p. m. its third anniversary, with Dr. Peter Marshall, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church pastor, speaking on "Forward Together With the Church."

Next Saturday the senior-intermediate Luther League also will hold a banquet at 6 p. m. in the church parlors. Dr. Carl Rasmussen will discuss "The Challenge of Youth."

Mr. G. M. Childs, missionary from Angola, Africa, will tell the youth group of Cleveland Park Congregational Church of his work at its meeting tomorrow at 6 p. m. Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Chandler are to serve as adult advisers to this group.

"Should the Federal Government Provide Either Jobs or Adequate Relief for All?" will be the topic before the 20-40 Club, following its supper at 6:40.

The Mount Vernon Players, dramatic group of the Southern Methodist Church, has elected as officers for the year Delma Smith, president; Martha Boyajian, vice president; V. V. Mills, secretary; Leonard Walters, treasurer, and Herbert Corley, jr., publicity manager. E. P. Mangum was renamed director and Walter A. Graham business manager.

The College Group of Chevy Chase Presbyterian is inviting as supper guests at 6 p. m. tomorrow Presbyterian students of Chevy Chase School and George Washington University. The dinner will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Knox, 3775 Oliver street.

At the meeting to follow Dean W. C. Johnstone, of George Washington, will speak on China.

Park Wittenberger, of the Covenant Fellowship of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, will address the society at 7 p. m. tomorrow on "The History of the United Lutheran Church." Tea and a social hour will precede the meeting.

Fellowship House, the old Massachusetts avenue chapel which was given to the society, is rapidly being enlarged, modernized and redecorated under the supervision of Mrs. Ethel Wakefield by a group of members who meet Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings to work on it.

Elbert Horton, chairman of the membership committee, announces that attendance so far has averaged nearly 100 each week.

George Cornell will lead the young people's society of St. Mark's Lutheran Church in discussing the topic, "How Can I Be Sure I Am a Christian?" at their meeting at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Following a fellowship tea at 6 p. m. in the parish hall the Christian Endeavor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church will hold a worship service in the lecture room. Winfred Fluharty will lead the service, and Maj. Withers will discuss "God's Help on Problems."

The Luther League of Atonement Church will hold a regular meeting tomorrow night at 7 p. m. The topic for the night will be "How Can I Be Sure I am a Christian?" It will be presented by different members of the league, among them Mary Umbaugh, Helen Redmond, Doris Hinsch, Thomas Phillips and Robert Nordby. The singing of our various hymns will be led by our newly appointed choir mistress, Miss Edith Fillmen, who is also a member of our choir.

Rev. Mr. Austin To Lead Church On Anniversary

At West Washington
Founded Oct. 11, 1868
Old Bible on Display

An old Bible and Sunday school record used in the first service at what is now West Washington Baptist Church, October 11, 1868, along with other relics of the original Gay Street Baptist Church, will be on display tomorrow as the Rev. Charles B. Austin leads his church in celebrating its seventieth anniversary Sunday.

All who were associated with the Gay Street Church are invited to be honor guests as the Rev. Mr. Austin preaches in the morning on "The Church in the World Today," and at the 8 p. m. service on "The Gospel of Christ."

Takoma Park. The Rev. William E. LaRue will speak in the morning on "Our Plain Duty." At the evening hour he will again speak on "Being Not Baptized."

First. "Separated under God" will be the subject on which Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden will speak in the morning. In the evening he will answer the question, "How Complete Is Your Religion?"

Swedish services will be resumed for the fall and winter, with Dr. K. E. Carlson preaching, at 3:30 p. m.

Calvary. The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, minister, will preach tomorrow morning on "Life's Compensations." At the evening hour he will speak on "Friends of God." He will be assisted at the latter service by Miss Bernice Crowell and Haley Scurlock.

Chevy Chase. The Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor, will begin a series of messages on the Book of Revelation at 11 a. m. with "Revelation: A Cosmic Drama of Two Worlds."

A drama-log sermon on "A Man Without a God" will be given by the pastor in the service at 8 p. m.

Metropolitan. Dr. John Compton Ball, pastor, will preach in the morning on "Living the Resurrection Life." At the evening hour Mr. Robert Savage, the assistant pastor, will bring the message on "Who and What Is a Christian?"

Fifth. The Stockton-Gould evangelistic meetings will start tomorrow and continue for two and a half weeks.

Miss Amy Lee Stockton is a Bible student of note and Miss Rita Gould is an inspiring song leader, soloist and vibra-harpist.

At the 11 a. m. service Miss Stockton will preach on "The Challenge of a World Crisis;" Miss Gould's solo will be "Jesus, Wonderful Lord." At 7:45 p. m. there will be a song service, and Miss Stockton will preach on, "The Last Conflict and the Last Conqueror."

First, Hyattsville. "Now Faith Is the Assurance of Things Hoped for, and a Conviction of Things Not Seen," will be the topic of the Rev. B. P. Robertson, pastor, at the 11 a. m. service. At 8 p. m. he will take as his text, "I Will Bless Them and Make Thy Name Great; and Be Thou a Blessing."

Bethesda. Dr. J. Raymond Nelson will speak at the service at 11 a. m. on "Under Divine Appointment." At 8 p. m. his subject will be "Three Pictures of Jesus."

Dr. H. S. Anderson Speaks Tomorrow

An incident from Anne Morrow Lindbergh's book, "North to the Orient," furnished the title—"Be a Plum Tree"—for Dr. Howard Stone Anderson's sermon tomorrow morning at First Congregational Church, at 11 o'clock.

A feature of the service at 7:45 p. m. will be presentation of the film-drama, "Ben Hur." The colored views and the accompanying narratives are especially prepared for church use. A screen song-service of old gospel favorites will also be conducted.

Mt. Pleasant. The Rev. Gladwyn M. Childs, Mount Pleasant's representative in Angola, Africa, since 1931, will occupy the pulpit at the 11 a. m. service. His topic tomorrow will be "African Security."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Exasperated by Constant Chatter of Girl Co-worker, Man Asks How to Put a Stop to It

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a clerk in a Government office. There are five girls (three of them married) and two men in the room. Four of the girls are silent, industrious typists. The fifth girl is a chatterbox. I do not know what effect this constant gabbing has on the others, but I find it most annoying. The man who is in nominal charge ignores the situation. I am a married man and this young magpie does not try to talk to me. Shall I ignore this garrulous gal; complain to the boss; oganize the othe listeners, or what? IRATE MALE.

DEAR IRATE MALE: You have my sympathy. Nothing in this is so exasperating and demoralizing to the industrious, conscientious worker of intense and sensitive temperament than to have to associate, day in and day out, with an office nuisance of the type described. Now and again in years past it has fallen to my lot to work in close proximity to such a witlessly disturbing element, and my strained reactions have run the gamut from trembling nervous exhaustion to a violent desire to throttle said person with my two bare hands.

Full guilt for the existence and persistence of such a nuisance rests with the office head, whose primary function has to do with maintaining staff morale and promoting group efficiency. It is his business to keep an alert eye out for distracting influences, and to weed them out as fast as they crop up. He is going soft on his job, failing of his duty to his subordinates, if and when he permits the staff to function on a laisse-faire basis. He himself is in line for rebuke when he tolerates the development of conditions which justify one worker in registering outraged protest, or submitting meek complaint, against the annoying antics of a fellow worker. And I maintain you have just reason for complaint in this instance.

Unfortunately, however, the nominal executive who sets no high standard for his department or its members is usually quickest to resent even implied criticism of his policy. He is hyper-sensitively defensive of his own administrative weaknesses, and is sometimes blusteringly obstinate in condoning conditions which, actually, he lacks the courage and initiative to correct. Not infrequently he insinuates that the baffled complainant is at fault.

It is possible if you were to complain to the office head in this instance that you would find yourself up against just such a stone wall. However, nothing ventured, nothing gained—so I suggest you make opportunity for registering your objection in a quiet aside; in a tactful, dispassionate but convincing manner. It is better office procedure to make the direct approach to the proper authority than to discuss the matter with those who are in no position to supply the remedy.

Advice for "Despondent"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to suggest to "Despondent" (your correspondent of October 4) that she develop compensatory qualities to offset her negative traits of personality. If there is any one thing in which she might excel, let her so perfect her talent along that line that she will compel recognition of her stellar performance. This will give her the encouragement and self esteem she needs so sorely at this time.

What all of us need in this world—the only thing, in the final analysis, which makes us truly happy—is achievement. Perhaps the greatest pictures were painted, and the greatest music composed, as the result of some person's urgent need to excel at just one thing. It is a laudable ambition—to excel. Choose something that is not done by everybody; something different, which doesn't offer so much competition; and devote yourself to mastering it. Personal happiness and general approval will be your reward.

The indifferent attitude of "Despondent's" mother, added to the fact that she went to school in inappropriate and unbecoming clothes, got in its deadly effects at a most impressionable age. She acted superior at school to pretend that she did not care, and the counter-reaction of her schoolmates was disconcerting to one of her sensitive disposition. The psychologist Adler has emphasized the small girl's position in the family as a particularly important factor in causing the inferiority feeling. Every mother should realize this; and our modern education is bringing the fact home to younger mothers.

What "Despondent" needs most of all is appreciation. The appreciation of just one person would make life seem so well worthwhile that she would want to go on living and proving her merit. It is up to her to compel the audience to stop before her platform and applaud her efforts because they deserve it. J. M.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 7.

ONE BY one the last of the famous residential and ecclesiastical landmarks of midtown Manhattan go the way of all stone and mortar—driven away by the march of business and taxes that run into astronomical figures. In two decades I've seen so many such places go—my own Murray Hill is being depleted little by little, even though Neighbor J. P. Morgan still clings to his ancient town-house at Thirty-seventh and Madison, with its sour-faced Pinkerton men in derby hats watching over the old dive.

ALICE HUGHES.

Within the past year or two Epiphany Church, on Lexington avenue, and the famed old Presbyterian Temple at Thirty-seventh and Fifth avenue have given up and moved farther uptown. And the dour old home of Mrs. Finley J. Shepherd, once the famous Helen Gould, heiress daughter of old Jay Gould, still stands disconsolately on Fifth avenue in the forties.

Even so, there was always the noted address of Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt—640 Fifth avenue—standing among the rising towers. The peaks of Rockefeller Center look arrogantly down on the Vanderbilt manor house, of a reddish brown stone, and usually tightly curtained except when a rare big party is hurled in the winter, and the Rollses roll up. And now it is rumored that 640 is for sale. It is said that the general no longer cares to pay some $190,000 a year in taxes on the old place. Blame him? And so it may well be that the historic house at Fifty-first and the Avenue will go in the next year or so, and Manhattan will really be delivered to the Philistines. And they can have it, too!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—As is to be expected, the past ten days saw enormous numbers of cancellations of trans-Atlantic sailings. Why walk knowingly into the gates of Hades? Know one of the commonest sayings along the Atlantic Coast these troublous days? "Thank God for the Atlantic Ocean!" And this is true, even though aviators have been hopping it like the old family duck pond this year. Even so, it is 3,000 miles of wet, deep water, and no soldier has yet swum the thing with a pack on his back and a 9-pound rifle in his hand. That helps.

Even though it is a well-known fact that theatrical blood pumps through many a family, even unto the third and fourth generation, it is always pleasant to meet a newcomer. In the little British comedy hit called "Bachelor Born," still playing here, is one Betty Moran, who is the little sister of the once-famous Lois Moran, star of many a film and several Broadway hits. Betty, who is only 18, does her best not to trade on sister's name and fame but admits that managers do see her more quickly on its account. "But the trouble is," says kid sis, "that they expect too much." Tough either way, it seems.

Did you notice that when the new "marriage course" at Syracuse University was recently opened, it was found that all 52 students registered were girls? Shocking and silly, but it merely goes to show what we have known all along—that great big men of 19 know all about marriage, and why bother? The dopes!

Checking the best-seller lists here, I find "My Son, My Son" topping the fiction group, and "The Horse and Buggy Doctor" leading the nonfiction tomes. Oh, to be able to write a good doctor book! Yet the trend and fad would change before we got two chapters done.

One of the big local stores pulled a show-window stunt that stopped sidewalk traffic and brought the cops a'running. Maybe it's in your town by now. Should be. It was a shoe display, and though the upper part of the mannequin was regular dumb window-dummy, the feet and legs which showed the footwear belonged to live models noted for their pretty tootsies. And it's the easiest job shoe models ever had—the girls lie on cots behind the scenes and read, with only their lower extremities on display. A great attention-getter, and a cinch job for any model with perfect feet and ankles.

Fresh Tomatoes Make Good Soup

Cream of Fresh Tomato Soup

5 medium tomatoes
1 small onion, stuck with a few cloves
½ teaspoon salt
Bit of bay leaf
Bit of red pepper pod
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 2-3 cups evaporated milk (1 tall can)

Cut tomatoes and cook with seasonings slowly until tender. Press through a sieve. There will be about two cups. Scald milk. Blend butter and flour. Stir into hot milk and cook over boiling water until slightly thickened. Add hot tomato pulp and serve at once. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Hostess Gowns Follow Hair Trends

Elegance Necessary at Home To Wear New Coiffures

Hostess Gowns Do Double Duty
Colors Match Facial Makeup

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE DAYS of scrawny necks, unkept hair and hasty snatches at clumsy bathrobes the first thing in the morning are apparently gone with the long bob, for regal hostess gowns and lounging robes have supplanted these abominations by the sheer necessity of living up to one's coiffure. High sweeping hair and ravishing warm make-ups must be complemented as much during the intimacy of the hearthside as when dining and dancing in public, it was brought out at the fashion showing yesterday at the Shoreham.

Evidences of the far-reaching influence of high hair-dos have been remarked in many phases of the fashion picture this fall, but it remained for Elizabeth Arden's Salon, which was style show hostess, to stress the importance of matching beauty of intimate apparel with beauty of face and form. Luncheon guests at the fashion show discovered that high hair and royal deep toned cosmetics have opened new avenues for the once humble dressing robe.

William Crago, radio announcer, who commented during the fashion show, indicated there was no excuse for women of income, or even those on budgets, to be forced to dash to front doors or telephones attired in wrappers or Mother Hubbards. He brought out that women have become so conscious of lovely skin, hair, nails, figure control and poise that these attributes are rapidly becoming part of their personality. It seemed obvious from the careful grooming, proud carriage, and neatly up-swept coiffures of the models that hair has had a great deal to do with this recent stickling for detail.

The patrician bearing and lush beauty which high hair and rich cosmetic tones have given to this season's woman were subtly echoed in hostess clothes displayed. Many of these robes intime were so adroitly styled as to permit double duty use. Several of sumptuous slipper satins and velvets were classic in cut and line, which fitted them for more public roles than for having demitasse before the fireplace.

One green crush-resistant velvet, the shade of Spanish olives, was cut full and sweeping for the dance floor, while its bodice was snug with shirring, ending in minute cap sleeves and squared neckline. This versatile "hostess gown," as it was termed by Mr. Crago, would have proved as much at home at a smart supper club as in the boudoir. Another shimmering gray satin, girdled in fuchsia, was adaptable as either lounging companion or for service over a guileless pale lemon or gray chiffon dinner dress, imparting in the role of evening cloak a new flavor to last year's frocks.

The woman plotting on greater allure this fall and winter might benefit by the following points brought out at the show. Colors are vintage tone, vibrant wines, plums, sage greens and Lorenzo browns, for lounging robes. Negligees are timeless in color appeal, and appear, like those of past decades, sweet shades of candy pink and baby blue. Quilting is tops in news interest for house coats, many of which billow out at the hem in bell shapes. Fabrics are as rich as those of Arabian Nights tales, comprising velours de noir, crease-resistant velvets, slipper satins and trapunta worked crepes and taffetas.

Your Figure

20 Minutes a Day Needed
Four Muscles Involved
Take Them Lying Down

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU DON'T look middle-aged until you lose your figure in the middle, but that is the place you are most likely to lose it. The whole trouble is that the change to a humpty dumpty silhouette is so gradual that you ignore it as long as you can. But one fine day, say about your 36th year, you wake up to the fact that you look years older than you feel. You wonder if ever again you can have a slim, young figure.

Well, you can. But it takes unrelenting exercise—20 minutes of exercise a day to put those muscles back into condition, and from then on 10 minutes a day to keep your slim lines.

Exercises for Stomach

When the four pairs of abdominal muscles are kept in perfect tone, the tummy is as flat as any fashion designer could expect it to be. Here are two of the best exercises I know for conditioning your muscles to hold a straight front line:

POSITION: Lying flat on the back, knees flexed and feet flat on the floor.

MOVEMENT: Take a deep breath and jerk the knees upward. At the same time pull the tummy up and in to touch the small of the back to the floor. Holding this position, expel all the air from the lungs. Continue to contract the muscles for a second, and relax gradually and repeat.

Gravity Helps Out

The foregoing exercise seems very simple, but it puts two very powerful forces to work for your figure. In the first place, emptying the lungs of air tends to create a vacuum and the internal organs naturally move up to correct position. Also, in this horizontal position the down-pull of gravity against the organs is helping to bring these organs into correct position.

POSITION: Lying on the back, arms flung out at the sides, shoulder-level. Have the legs straight down on the floor and together.

MOVEMENT: Bring the knees up to the chest and, keeping the tummy muscles pulled up and the shoulders on the floor, roll the hips over from this position until the leg underneath is resting on the floor. Then extend the legs straight down until you are in the starting position and repeat the exercice, rolling to the other side.

Four Costumes Enough to Carry Around World

New York. — Four carefully planned costumes will see you around the world. Schiaparelli, of Paris, says so. Sally Dickason, New York travel stylist who's circled the globe 12 times, agrees.

No need ever again to suppress the wanderlust just because you can't have trunkloads of new clothes. Miss Dickason has even worked out the four-costume plan in terms of clothes that will be smart for city wear right now as well as on the trip you take this winter.

Her four-costume plan calls for a three piece outfit (suit and topcoat)—for example, black tweed with beautiful natural lynx for the full-length tuxedo collar on the topcoat. Persian rust hat, bag, scarf, gloves. Black shoes with sensible heels. Blouse or sweater.

"After 4" dress, fur jacket, hat with veil, jewelry, dressy shoes. For example—Dress of black silk or rayon jersey (it doesn't wrinkle), mink saque.

Evening and dinner dress. Example—Formal gown of bluish green crepe with a matching fitted jacket; evening slippers and bag. (Fur jacket of No. 3 becomes the evening wrap.)

Learn Stunts For Halloween

MYSTERY, excitement, fun! That's the spirit of the Giddy Goblin's Cotillion—and it starts your party with a bang.

The Giddy Goblins are your men guests—masked. There must be one more of them than the number of girls. Tell the Goblins to join hands, form a line to be led by the Giddiest Goblin, the prankiest of the boys. The girls line up about 3 feet apart.

As you start the music, off go your Goblins, in and out among the girls. When you give a signal, each Goblin tries to grab a girl for dancing. The one who doesn't succeed must dance with a broomstick until you signal to line up again.

After that gay stunt your crowd's all agog for the Mystic Pumpkin Fortuneteller—which is just a plump pumpkin you've marked with intriguing symbols. Easy to paint on a heart for a wedding, a dollar sign for wealth, an anchor for a cruise, a wheel for a land trip.

Hang the pumpkin to a lighting fixture. Blindfold the fortune seeker, give her a pin and tell her to twirl the pumpkin—and jab. Where the pin lands is her fate.

Another thrilling—and oh, so eerie—stunt is the Goblin's Tale, which you must tell by candlelight. Give each guest a name, such as Wind, Black Cat, Little Fat Boy. Each must make an appropriate noise when his name pops up in the story. What hilarity at the scramble of sounds—"Whoo!" "Miaow!" "Oh ma!"

The tale itself—and dozens more rollicking stunts—you get from our 40-page booklet, "New Ideas for Party Fun." Party ideas for all occasions—decorations, games, menus. "Wild West Round Up," "Topsy-turvy Party," many more.

'Gran'ma's Baby'

"Of course he's just an ordinary baby—I'm really one grandmother who can admit that—but I WILL say this for him, he's got a perfect little body. Here—look at his back. Did you ever see anything as straight? Now wait and I'll turn him around so you can see him from the front. (Tch, Tch. . . . Yes he was Gran'ma's Tweetums, that's what he was!) Now look at his legs. Aren't they perfect?

"I'm not really silly about him though like his Grandmother Chipper. I wish you could see that woman. I think she's losing her mind. You see he's the first grandchild on the Chipper side—look at him wiggle his toes. Isn't he adorable?

"What? . . . No I haven't seen Lutie's baby—Look at him now! Quick! He sees something! . . . Yes, I heard Lutie had an awfully pretty baby. Well, I can't say that our baby's really pretty—he looks too much like the Chippers—but he's an awfully strong, well-built baby.

"Say, you know what the doctor said? . . . . He said he could easily win a prize at a baby show. Of course we wouldn't think of entering him—look at him now! He's showing off. You know I wonder if he doesn't understand a lot more than we realize.

"What? . . . . Yes, that was too bad about Bert's losing his home—say, look at him kick! Aren't his feet adorable? (Tch, Tch. . . Oochie, coochie . . . Oh, him's so sweet!) I wish you could see him in his bath.

"Hats? . . . No, I haven't looked at hats yet . . . Yes, they are perfectly terrible—say, I wish you'd look at those wrinkles of fat at the back of his neck. (Yes, yes, was him Grandma's fat baby! Tch—, Tch') He's not really fat though. He's solid. See, he's really big boned. You know he's been growing so fast we were afraid there was something wrong. But the doctor says he's just naturally husky. Anyway, all the men on our side of the family are big. Now the Chippers—Look at him smile! He sees you! ('Yes, he's Gran'ma's Snookems, that what him is! Oochie, coochie.')

"You know there was a girl in the hospital the same time my daughter was and her baby only weighs a little over half of what he does. Of course, it's a girl—('Tch, Tch, smile for Gran'ma.')

"What . . . The war? . . . Yes, wasn't it terrible? . . . What? . . . Oh, Hitler—('He's Gran'ma's baby')—well, I never had any use for him anyway. Say, look at his eyes! He's getting sleepy. I'll bring in the mattress in a minute and you can watch him go to sleep. The cutest thing though is to see him get his bottle

"What . . . Oh, no, he never cries—well, hardly ever. ('Yes, was Gran'ma's Tootems sleepy'?) He's got a wonderful disposition. He gets that from his mother. You know there are times when I can see a lot of our people in him ('Tch, tch, oochie, coochie') But, of course, I wouldn't tell his Grandmother Chipper that for the world.

Honestly, I wish you could see that woman with this baby—say, look at his dimples! Really, you never saw anything like the way she carries on. ('Yes, yes, him was Gran'ma's Dimplekins' Tch, Tch) Watch him smile. He says he sees you. ('Yes, now smile for Gran'ma. Oochie, coochie') Really, it'd be worth it to you to come over and watch her the next time she's here. ('Tch, Tch, oochie coochie') Really, she's a perfect scream!"

Start of Hunting Season Renews Tularemia Danger

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

With the advent of the hunting season, warning should be posted again of the danger of rabbit fever, as it has been nicknamed. It is technically called tularemia and that is a better term than rabbit fever because it can be caught from a number of wild animals—squirrels, muskrats, woodchucks, opossums and many game birds, including doves and quail. It can also spread through the bite of flies, ticks and mites. Still, most of the cases are traced to rabbits.

The germ of the disease lives in the bodies of one of these animals and is spread from one to another by the fly or tick. In man the infection is usually direct from contact with the animal.

It results mostly from dressing an infected animal. What happens is that a healthy looking and active rabbit is shot, and the hunter brings it home and proceeds to dress it with his bare hands. The rabbit, in spite of its healthy appearance, may be just saturated with the tularemia germ. It is in the muscles just under the skin and in the blood of those muscles and of the skin itself.

The rabbit skinner has a small scratch on his hand and the germs get into this. Then a few days later an ulcer develops on this spot, and a lymph node enlarges somewhere up the arm. Maybe it will affect two or three lymph nodes. There is fever and a general feeling of fatigue.

It can all be prevented by wearing rubber gloves while dressing rabbits for the table. The gloves form an effective barrier between the germs and the skin.

The condition usually wears itself out, and the patient recovers. But they are really sick and uncomfortable while it is going on.

The form in which it starts in the finger and runs up the arm is the usual form, but it may also appear on the eye, probably from rubbing the eye with the finger. It may also appear as a pneumonia.

It is easy to determine positively in the laboratory whether a suspected case is tularemia by a blood agglutination test.

There is also a good serum treatment, once the diagnosis has become established. With the serum, the duration of the disease and the severity are shortened 50 per cent. Of course, the ulcer on the finger and the enlargement of the lymph nodes should be treated with poultices and antiseptic applications.

City Breaks Out in Rash Of Cocktail Parties

Lady Marler Fetes 'Abe Lincoln' Massey
Actor Also Entertained by Harold Simses
Mrs. Sims Snow Is Hostess to Sra. Rosso

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

WINDING UP a week in which social circling revolved chiefly around "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," the town broke out in a rash of cocktail parties yesterday afternoon. Debutantes, dowagers—even "Abe" himself in the person of Raymond Massey—were here, there and everywhere at informal tea-time events arranged for youngsters and oldsters; for visitors and residents; for special reasons and just for instance.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, gathered in a small group to meet Mr. Massey, who as everyone knows by now, is a Canadian and the brother of Vincent Massey. The latter is widely remembered here, having served as Canadian Minister to the United States. He is now Canadian high commissioner to the Court of St. James'.

Mr. Massey, the actor, who has been extensively feted during his Washington appearance, also turned up late last evening at the party following the dinner given by the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold Sims. He arrived shortly after his performance at the National. The dinner, incidentally, was in compliment to Signora Rosso, wife of the Italian envoy to the Soviet Union, who has been continually entertained ever since she arrived in Washington on Tuesday.

Yesterday afternoon she too, was feted at a cocktail party. Mrs. Sims Snow was the hostess and the company included a number of friends who knew the dashing Signora Rosso when she was Mrs. F. Wilkinson Bunker, a Washington resident. Since Mrs. Snow recently gave up her apartment on Wyoming avenue, she entertained yesterday at the Hay-Adams House, where she is staying prior to her departure for Hollywood. Leaving in a few days, she plans to be in the film city until early in December and then go to Memphis to spend Christmas, returning to Washington in January.

WEARING A BROWN hostess gown, made on flowing lines and set off with an orchid corsage, Mrs. Snow received guests from 5 to 7 o'clock. Signora Rosso wore a trim black frock with a small black hat and a stunning silver fox jacket.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, Mrs. William Beale and her daughters, Miss Betty Beale and Mrs. William T. Mann; Vice Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Edmen, of the German Embassy, and Frau Witthoeft-Emden.

Signora Rosso's daughter, Miss Adele Bunker, was among the early arrivals, and with her was her hostess, Miss Barbara Bolling. Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray were there with the former's sister, Mrs. Macondray Lundborg, of California, who will be visiting in these parts until Christmas. Another attractive out-of-towner there was Mrs. Walter Nelson, whose husband is medical attache at our Embassy in Moscow. She is the house guest of her sister, Mrs. J. E. Hammond, and plans to visit friends and relatives in New York and Boston before sailing for home early in December. Still others at the party were Mr. and Mrs. William Sprague, Mannix Walker, the Marquis of Sant 'Orsola and Donna Bianca Cugia, of the Italian Embassy.

MISS HOUSTON NILLER, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Niller, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Murray Borden entertained at a small cocktail party for the younger set. From 5 to 7 o'clock her house on Porter street was the scene of one of the gayest gatherings of the week when a flock of buds who will blossom this season met for a pleasantly informal event.

Receiving her guests in the drawing room, Mrs. Borden wore a frock of red crepe made on simple lines. Miss Niller was trimly turned out in a dark green velveteen dress with a hat to match. Assisting the hostess were her sister, Miss Cheshire Cox, and her sister-in-law, Miss Hattie Lee Borden, who recently arrived from her home in Goldsboro, N. C.

Among the guests were a bevy of buds, including Miss Jane Eustis, Miss Doris Becker, Miss Peggy Townsend, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Nancy Hoskinson and Miss Elise Hill. Others there were Laurence Hume, William Sterrett, William, John and Henry Gwynn, Robert Niepold, Alexander Shield, William and Fred Mechlin, Robert Waggaman and Wentworth Linebarger. Still others there were Miss Mary Goff and Miss Pat Evans, the latter of whom arrived recently from California.

Miss Helen Trevor Williams, of London, Eng., who arrived in Washington yesterday, was feted at a still smaller cocktail party yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy at their home on Massachusetts avenue. Miss Williams will be here for a very brief visit, returning to New York soon and will sail from there for Egypt to spend some time.

Still another visitor from across the Atlantic was feted at still another cocktail party yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins entertained for Baroness von Blumenthal. The sister of Mrs. Matthew E. Hanna, Baroness von Blumenthal, arrived last week for an extended visit in this country.

Morrisons Fete Maryland Political Leaders

Maryland political leaders were in the majority at a party given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. James B. Morrison at their home in Kenwood.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. William C. Walsh and Mr. and Mrs. William Byron, of Williamsport, Md. Mr. Walsh is Democratic nominee for attorney general in Maryland and Mr. Byron is Democratic nominee for Representative.

State Senator Stedman Prescott, a brother of the hostess, and Mrs. Prescott were in the receiving line with Mr. and Mrs. Morrison.

Assisting were Mrs. Claude Dudley, Mrs. Benjamin Powell, Mrs. Cecil Allnutt, Mrs. Edmund Jones, Mrs. Gordon Daisley and Mrs. William Prescott.

Two hundred people, most of them neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, in Kenwood, attended the party.

Wallaces Hosts On His Birthday

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace entertained at a dinner for 12 guests at their home last evening.

Although it was the Secretary's birthday, the dinner had been planned without that celebration in mind, and without realizing that it fell on that date. Therefore, every precaution was taken to keep the guests from learning that they were really attending an unofficial birthday party.

Navy Hydrographers Entertained by Bryans

Capt. George S. Bryan, Assistant to the Hydrographer of the Navy, and Mrs. Bryan entertained at a buffet supper last evening for the officers of the Hydrograph Department and their wives.

The party was held at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Bryan on McKinley street.

Miss Stirewalt Becomes Bride

Wed to H. E. Hassler
Rites at St. Paul's
Honeymoon in Bermuda

St. Paul's Lutheran Church last evening was the scene of the wedding of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Stirewalt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Stirewalt, and Howard Edward Hassler, son of Mrs. Stella Hassler and the late Elmer Hassler. Dr. Henry Snyder, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Harry Dunlap officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony. Mrs. Alicegene Carver, soloist, sang before the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white cut velvet, fashioned princess style, with a long train. Her tulle veil, fingertip length, fell from a Juliet cap of pearls and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Helen D'Andelet was maid of honor and wore a Molyneux adaptation of taffeta faille, pervanche blue shade, made with a tight waist and full flowing skirt. On her hair was a tiny doll hat of flowers, and she carried yellow roses.

Miss Thelma Mount and Mrs. Hilda V. Burrowns, bridesmaids, wore similar gowns in May wine shade and carried Talisman roses. Mrs. Ethel Hassler Moler, and Mrs. Elizabeth Orth Steinko, the other two attendants, wore Clover rose shade and carried pink roses. Evelyn Louise Keenan was flower girl, wearing a floor length gown of baby blue taffeta, trimmed in pink.

Francis Hassler, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were John G. Loehler, Paul Loehler, Wayne Elgin and Robert Stirewalt, brother of the bride. A reception followed the ceremony, at the home of the bride's parents.

When the couple left for a wedding trip to Bermuda, the bride was wearing a slate blue jacket frock with Dubonnet accessories. On their return they will make their home at the Normandie Apartments.

The bride is a graduate of George Washington University. Mr. Hassler graduated from Maryland University and took his masters degree in civil engineering at George Washington University. He is connected with the War Department here.

Mexican Team Feted at Supper

Members of the Mexican army team who will take part in the Inter-American Show October 20 to 23 were guests of honor last evening at an informal buffet supper given by Miss Anita Cajigas and Miss Anna Walcott Archibald.

The party took place at the Roosevelt Hotel. Guests included the Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Gonzales Jasso; the Assistant Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Calderon, Senorita Erma Castillio Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador, and the latter's niece, Senorita Marta Guajardo, and Dr. and Senora Rafael Fuentes.

Others present were Miss Patricia Brewer, Mrs. Frederic Henney, Miss Lilian Swindlehurst, Mr. and Mrs. Sophocles Papas, and members of the team—Capt. Armando Villareal, Lieut. Jaime L. Zapot, Lieut. Joaquin S. Cgagoya, Lieut. Ramiro R. Palafox, Lieut. Miguel H. Montoya.

Mmes. Jarnefelt And Bostrom Back From Europe

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt returned to Washington last evening from New York where Mme. Jarnefelt arrived yesterday on the S. S. Kungsholm after a stay of several months in Finland.

Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Swedish Minister, also returned on the Kungsholm and was expected to come directly to Washington. She has been in Sweden since July.

Patrons Listed For Horse Show

Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen head the list of patrons for the National Capital Parks Autumn Horse Show to be held at the Equitation Field in Rock Creek Park tomorrow morning. Albert Clyde-Burton is chairman of arrangements.

Others who sponsor the event are Mr. and Mrs. Claude Owen, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Norton, Mr. and Mrs. James Powers, Mr. and Mrs. W. Kamp Charles, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Livingston, Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Wood, Miss Sibyl Baker, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, Fenton Fadeley, Dr. and Mrs. Roy Lyman Sexton, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Goldsmith and Dr. and Mrs. William C. Colliton.

Marion Ullmer Becomes Bride of Ernest File, Jr.

A wedding of interest to friends in Washington and nearby Arlington County was that yesterday of Miss Marion Helen Ullmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Raphael Ullmer, of Arlington, and Ernest Daniel File, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. File, of Alexandria.

The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the rectory of St. Rita's Church, at Mount Ida, Va., with the Rev. Leonard J. Koster officiating.

Miss Ullmer wore a dress of royal blue velvet with a small hat and matching accessories and she carried a bouquet of brides roses. Her only attendant was Miss Margaret Carroll, of Arlington, who was attired in cerise wool, and whose flowers were talisman roses. James Robert McCauley, of Alexandria, was best man.

The couple, who left on a trip to Florida immediately after the ceremony, will make their home at the Du Mar Apartments, Rosemont, Alexandria, on their return.

Dances in Sail Loft Will Be Continued

The popular dances held annually at the Sail Loft in the Navy Yard will be continued this year, much to the delight of Navy juniors and their friends in Washington.

Invitations have just been issued for the series, the first of which will take place Friday, November 18. The others, which will also take place on Fridays, are set for December 16, February 3 and April 21.

The Sail Loft, as its name implies, used to be a storehouse for marine equipment, but is now used mostly for social affairs.

Mrs. Swanson To See Game

Motoring to Academy
Browns Entertaining
Pettengills to Go

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, will motor to Annapolis today to attend the Navy-University of Virginia football game. Preceding the game, Mrs. Swanson will be a guest at luncheon of the Superintendent of the Naval Academy and Mrs. Wilson Brown.

Accompanying Mrs. Swanson to Annapolis will be Capt. John M. Beardall, aide to the Secretary, and Mrs. Beardall. Douglas Hall, son of Mrs. Swanson, who will accompany the party, will have a group of young people from Virginia with him.

Also going down to the game are Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, Commandant of the Navy Yard, and Mrs. Pettingill, who will go by auto.

They will be accompanied by their son, William Van Horn Pettengill, Edgar Orme, jr., and Mrs. Pearsons Rust. They plan to picnic along the way.

Martha Adams, R. B. Croson Wed

Following a motor trip to New York City and New England, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ball Croson will reside at 4585 Conduit road. They were married at 11 a. m. Thursday in the rectory of St. Matthew's Catholic Church. The Rev. William F. Stricker officiated. The bride is the former Miss Martha Marie Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Adams, and Mr. Croson is the son of Mrs. Maud Croson and the late Robert Everton Croson.

The bride was attired in a dress of rural autumn velvet and her hat, veil and accessories were of dark brown. She wore a corsage of talisman roses and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was Mrs. Herrmann, sister of the bridegroom. Mrs. Herrmann was in green rib crepe and had a corsage of yellow rosebuds. Arthur Herrman was best man.

At a wedding breakfast at the Admiral Club, Mrs. Adams, mother of the bride, wore dark blue velvet and a corsage of red rosebuds while Mrs. Croson, mother of the bridegroom, was in dubonnet crepe. Her corsage was of tea roses.

Peggy McNeale Sets Nov. 18 as Wedding Date

To Wed Lieut. Moffett
Reception Slated
Sister to Attend Her

Miss Peggy McNeale has selected Friday, November 18, as the date of her wedding to Lieut. William Moffett, son of Mrs. W. A. Moffett, of Washington, and the late Rear Admiral Moffett. The ceremony will take place at 4:30 o'clock, at St. Margaret's Church, and will be followed by a reception at the home of Miss McNeale's mother, Mrs. Donald McNeale.

Miss Sylvia McNeale, sister of the bride-to-be, will serve as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids are Miss Beverly Moffett, sister of Lieut. Moffett; Mrs. Tyner Dugdale and Miss Eleanor Hawley, of Washington, and Miss Margot Redmond, of Montreal.

Lieut. Moffett is at present attached to the U. S. S. Maryland, cruising off Long Beach, Calif. His engagement to Miss McNeale was announced last spring.

Miss McNeale is the daughter of the late Donald McNeale.

War Secretary Leaves Today

Will Visit in West
Wife Going to N. Y.
Children Now Home

The Woodring family, now united for a couple of days in Washington, will scatter to far points of the map this week-end and next week. The three young Woodring children returned to Washington last Wednesday evening with their nurse from a summer's stay in Fitchburg, Mass., with their grandparents, and Mrs. Woodring arrived from New York Thursday evening.

Today the Secretary will leave for the West, where he will make an inspection tour at Fort Sill, Okla. He will then go on to Lawton, Okla., where he will address a Democratic meeting. From there he will go to Cherokee, Okla., and make an address at the site of the new Great Salt Plains Dam, on which construction began last August.

Next Wednesday Mrs. Woodhing will go to New York, where she will be a house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lanham. With them she will attend the Ballet Russe at the Metropolitan Opera House Wednesday evening and will return to Washington a day or so later.

Mrs. Lanham, the former Miss Carol Stone, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. Woodring were classmates and roommates at school together and for two years shared a studio in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Lanham probably will come to Washington this fall as guests of Secretary and Mrs. Woodring.

Mrs. Absalom Waller Returns to Home After Trip Abroad

Mrs. Absalom Waller has returned to Washington for the winter, and has opened her home on Wyoming avenue. She spent the summer in Europe and visited Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Poland, Estonia and Denmark.

The last two months she spent in England, and visited Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Halford at their estate at Broughton, Hampshire, and at their home in London, 11 Bryanston court. She also spent several weeks at Wickham Court, Kent, and motoring in Devonshire.

Homer Cummingses Give Dinner Party

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings entertained at dinner last evening at Ruthven, their home on Tilden street.

Among their guests was Mrs. Raymond Hackett, of Stamford, Conn. Mrs. Hackett' husband was formerly a member of the Attorney General's law firm.

The dinner was the second the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings have given this week. On Wednesday they entertained in honor of Lord Wright, of Durley, noted British jurist, who has been in this country for several weeks.

At Ritz Carlton

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

YET ANOTHER Washington rumor—this one said Italian Ambassador Fulvio Suvich had seen the last of the Capital—has been exploded. The ambassador is expected to sail the middle of the month from Italy for this country. The fact that Donna Matilde de Suvich will accompany him may mean that they will be here for some time anyway, if not for the entire winter. Nobody seems to know whether he can combine his diplomatic post with his new job as head of Italy's largest insurance company.

DUDLEY HARMON.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY, which doesn't get much chance to be athletic during the winter, is quite excited about the new ice-skating rink which has been built on Connecticut avenue. Mrs. Arthur Clephane is reported toying with the idea of starting a skating club. An expert fancy performer herself, she was formerly a member of the New York Skating Club and last year made regular trips to Baltimore to practice on the rink there. Unfortunately, Washington's one and only ice palace has made no provision for professional hockey matches, which draw hordes of people every evening in Boston, New York and the Maryland city.

Mrs. Richard Sanger, another skating enthusiast, wonders if it wouldn't be a good idea to get a group of congenial people together and try to rent the rink for one or two nights a week. In the past year or so people here have shown themselves so enthusiastic about just plain roller skating that the new ice venture shoiud be a great success.

WILLA MAGEE, who served as secretary last year to Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, has been replaced by her sister, Nora Magee, who will have her turn at a Washington winter. Willa is remaining at her home in Montreal, but her sister already has arrived in the Capital to take up her new duties at the legation, where she will make her home.

THE TOWN is finally beginning to fill up again. Yesterday both the lobby and restaurant of one of our smartest hotels were positively teeming with people. We saw Mrs. Jouett Shouse with her father, Lincoln Filene, of Boston, and, in the cocktail lounge, Mrs. George Marye lunching with her son-in-law, Commander William Thomas, and Mrs. Sidney Cloman. Mrs. Higginson Rogers, in a becoming pale pink suit with a matching hat, feather-trimmed, was there, and nearby was George Abel, who will entertain at a cocktail party Monday afternoon for Signora Rosso. The hour is 5 to 7 and the place his apartment at 1606 Twentieth street, which in the past few years has been occupied by a succession of people, among them Ryn van der Wyck, formerly with the Netherlands Legation here, and Dolly Corbin and her mother.

SINCE THEIR MARRIAGE early last summer in Ireland, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes have traveled almost enough miles to have gone around the world and back again. They went to Alaska this summer; will leave for the West Coast Monday, and after their return early in November it is reported they may go to Cuba and Puerto Rico . . . Mrs. S. Kent Legare had originally planned to come back to Washington after the wedding of her sister, Julia Zimmerman, to Frank Meade, but has postponed her return another week. She now is at her summer home in Connecticut . . . Miss Elizabeth Leake arrived from Richmond yesterday to spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Weatherill, who will give a dinner for her tonight at the Chevy Chase Club.

Washingtonians to Attend Lee Memorial Celebration

Ceremony Planned at Stratford Hall Wednesday
Mrs. Hawes, Mrs. Long, Mrs. Vandeventer to Make Trip
Dr. Monaghan, of Yale, to Be Speaker

Among the Washingtonians who will motor to Stratford Hall, Westmoreland County, Virginia, on Wednesday for the annual celebration of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation are Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Horace Vandeventer and Mrs. Casenove Lee, directors of the foundation.

Dr. Frank Monaghan, of Yale University, the director of research for the New York World's Fair, will speak on the "World of Yesterday." Guests will be welcomed by Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, president of the foundation, and Maj. Gen. B. R. Cheatham, U. S. A., retired, resident superintendent of Stratford Hall. An interesting feature of the celebration will be the presentation of old Lee silver, originally at Stratford. This silver, marked with the Lee crest, was located in Natchez, Tenn., and is being returned to Stratford as a gift from the Society of Colonial Wars in memory of the late Herbert W. Jackson, of Richmond, Va.

During the past summer, the interior of the 200-year-old home of the Lee family has undergone minor changes to bring back the original design and color of the rooms. Visitors returning to Stratford follow with interest the progress of the restoration, not only of the buildings, but of the well-kept gardens and the 1,100-acre farm stretching to the Potomac.

The Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, owner of the estate, is making the restoration. It was organized in 1929 to purchase, restore and preserve Stratford as a national shrine in memory of Robert E. Lee. As the home of Thomas Lee and his six sons, famous for their service in the colonial and revolutionary period of the country, Stratford unites North and South, East and West, with the mother country, Great Britain, in a common bond of interest. Friends of Stratford and members of the foundation, who have made this national enterprise possible, will gather from many parts of the country to attend this celebration.

The guests included M. S. Szymczak, of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; Dr. Fred J. Kelly, of the Department of Education; James Abel and Prof. Jan Rosen, Polish artist.

Labor Board Aide Weds in New York

News has been received of the marriage in New York Thursday evening of Miss Ruth Rowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Rowe, of New York, to Jack Davis, of New York and Washington son of Mrs. George Davis and the late Mr. Davis. The ceremony took place in the Colonnades of Essex House, the Rev. Herbert S. Goldstein officiating.

The bride is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music. Mr. Davis, a graduate of the New York University Law School, is on the legal staff of the National Labor Relations Board.

Mr. and Mrs. Bean Plan Atlantic City Trip

Mr. and Mrs. George Bean will leave today for a week at Atlantic City, where they will attend the annual convention of the American Gas Association.

Following the convention they will spend several days in New York and Boston and later this month will go to Texas for a visit.

170 Attend Voteless League Fete

Skit Is Highlight
Mrs. Baldwin Talks
Work Is Explained
Chairmen Introduced

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters pronounced itself a method of reform for "Mrs. Apathetic Citizen" in a skit presented at the opening luncheon of the organization, yesterday. The meeting, held in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A., was attended by 170 members, the largest number ever present at one of its luncheon meetings.

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, the president, was responsible for the preparation of the program, which also included a talk on "The Legislative Gains of the Seventy-fifth Congress" by Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, national chairman of legislation.

The arraignment of "Mrs. Apathetic Citizen" for her lack of interest in community and world affairs, took place in a court scene, with Mrs. Harry Lee Parkinson presiding as judge. The various department chairmen questioned the defendant, played by Mrs. Donald Blaisdell, giving emphasis to problems studied as part of their department programs. Her answers in each case indicated lack of concern for anything which did not appear to affect her directly. Mrs. Lorraine Bradford had the role of the court crier.

Mrs. Charles Weston spoke as chairman of the department of government and its operation, under which suffrage for the District, extension of the merit system, study of the forthcoming report on plans for reorganization of the District government and of that on tax reform will be made.

Many Phases Of Work Explained

Mrs. Allen Moore, as chairman of education, pointed out the value of her department's study of the public school system in the District, resulting in recommendations for a comprehensive code of legislation, simplification of the budgetary and appropriation procedures and wide use of the school plant for community purposes, as well as special activities in education and protection of academic freedom.

Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, chairman of government and the legal status of women, showed the value of the study of property rights and marriage and divorce laws.

Mrs. Gordon Wagenet, former chairman of government and child welfare, and now a member of the staff at national headquarters of the league, substituted for Mrs. Charles Lee Hodge, present child welfare chairman. She explained the study of public health and welfare being made with relation to its effect on the children of the District and support of adequate provisions for maternal and infant care; participation in Federal projects affecting children and of revision of child labor laws to conform with provisions of the national wages and hours law.

Mrs. Max O. Lorenz, chairman of the department of government and foreign policy, explained its study of current world developments; Mrs. Philip W. Chappell, chairman of the department of government and economic welfare, presented its program of study of housing conditions, District regulations affecting women workers and the social security act in the District.

The final member of the group was Mrs. Henry Chalmers, orientation chairman, who recommended the league as a means of becoming informed on local and international affairs and finding a way to have a voice in them.

Volunteers to Serve At Headquarters

Following the skit, league members present signed cards, indicating in what branch of the organization's work they were most interested. A large number also volunteered to serve on the staff of the recently opened headquarters in the Star Building. The league members present ranged in age from 20 to 90 years, Miss Rose Swart, who is past 90, being among the guests.

Mrs. Baldwin, in her discussion of the legislative gains of the Seventy-fifth Congress, reviewed the history of the food and drug act, which the league had supported since 1933. She paid tribute to the efforts of the late Dr. Royal S. Copeland for its passage. Other gains she enumerated were the child labor amendment and, in the field of international affairs, the reciprocal trade treaties.

Mrs. Ruth Hopper as chairman of hospitality and Mrs. Wendall Lund were in charge of the luncheon.

Committee chairmen who were introduced were Mrs. Eugene Duffield, chairman of finance; Mrs. Albert H. Putney, publicity; Mrs. Josh McKenzie, membership; Mrs. J. C. McCaskill, college membership; Mrs. C. S. Duncan, bulletin editor; Mrs. Audley Smith, legislation, and Mrs. Henry Chalmers, training for new members.

Shakespeare Group to Meet

The Shakespeare Society of Washington will begin its twenty-second season on Monday evening, at Perkins Hall, Universalist Church, 1810 Sixteenth street. A lecture will be given by Prof. Elmer L. Kayser, of George Washington University, on "English Patriotism in the Elizabethan Period." This will be followed by a dramatic reading of "The Rape of Lucrece" by Esther Marshman.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Mrs. Digger Solves a Problem

When you've a problem never say "It can't be done." It can't that way."
—Mrs. Digger the Wasp.

Cicada the Harvest Fly had stopped singing. The song had ended in something like a screech. It had ended just after Mrs. Digger the Wasp had flown up the tree where the singer was. Peter Rabbit had seen her fly up there but had lost sight of her when she flew in among the leaves. He didn't know what it was all about. He was still looking up when he saw something fall and drop down near the foot of the tree. He hopped over to see better. Almost at once he discovered Mrs. Digger and with her was a stranger to him. The stranger looked like a huge fly. It was motionless. Not so much as a leg moved. Mrs. Digger was busy over it. Peter soon saw that she was trying to lift it and it was bigger than herself.

Of course it was the Cicada. Poor Cicada! That sharp sting of Mrs. Digger's had made the great Harvest Fly helpless but had not killed it. However her victim knew nothing about what was happening and never would know. It was as if killed yet alive.

Mrs. Digger paid no attention to Peter

Now this Cicada was extra big and Mrs. Digger had had quite a tussle before she used that sharp little lance of hers. In the struggle both had tumbled to the ground. Had the Cicada been small enough for Mrs. Digger to lift and fly with this wouldn't have mattered. But this Cicada was considerably bigger than Mrs. Digger and far too heavy to be lifted and flown with. So now Mrs. Digger had a problem to solve. How was she to get her prize to that new house Peter had watched her dig? She couldn't drag it along the ground, for the grass was too thick and there were too many other obstacles for her booty to catch on. She just couldn't do it.

But Mrs. Digger isn't one of the give-up kind. No, sir, she isn't one of that kind at all. If the problem of getting her prize home couldn't be solved one way it must be solved another way. She straddled her victim and then began to climb up that tree hauling and tugging and pulling the Cicada along with her. If she had worked hard digging that home of hers she was working harder now. But she wouldn't give up. She continued to haul and tug and pull, slowly but surely getting higher.

It looked very silly to Peter. He couldn't see any sense in it. "What is she doing that for?" said he, but there was no one there to give him the answer. "She's doing an awful lot of work for nothing if you ask me," he continued, talking to himself. "If she wants to eat that thing why doesn't she eat it on the ground instead of going to all that work to get it up in that tree?"

Mrs. Digger paid no attention to Peter. She kept right on climbing and taking the Cicada with her. Now and then she stopped to rest. At such times she seemed to be considering something. She was. She had a plan for getting her prize home and she was considering whether or not she was high enough to successfully do what she had planned to do. It would be just too bad to fall after all this hard work. So Mrs. Digger kept right on hauling, tugging and climbing until at last she was almost back to the place from which they had fallen.

This time she took a long rest. Then straddling the Cicada, and getting a firm hold, she launched into the air and flew to her home, which was some distance away in the ground as you know. She couldn't fly up with the heavy burden but she could fly down on a long slant. Her fast moving wings kept her from going too fast. Perhaps you see now why it was that she had persisted in climbing so high. If she had started from a lower point she wouldn't have been able to stay in the air long enough to reach home.

As it was she landed in the grass only about a foot from the entrance to her home and she was able to drag her prize that far. Peter got over there just in time to see her drag the Cicada inside. What happened then of course he couldn't see. He took it for granted that Mrs. Digger ate her prize, but in this he was mistaken. The Cicada was carefully stowed away in the little round chamber at the end of a long tunnel or hall. Under one middle leg a small white egg was carefully placed. That Cicada was for the baby Wasp which as a tiny grub would hatch from that egg, not for Mrs. Digger.

W. Va. State Society Plans Halloween Dance

The Board of Governors of the West Virginia State Society, headed by David S. Davidson, has announced plans for the regular meetings to be held during the coming season in the main ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel.

The first meeting is arranged for Thursday evening, October 20, and will be a Halloween dance with special entertainment. The November meeting will be a Thanksgiving festival and dance and the December meeting the occasion of the annual apple cider party and dance.

Sorority Unit Will Install

Beta Psi Chapter of Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority will install its new officers at a chapter meeting October 10. Mrs. Mildred Bishop, its president, has just been elected treasurer of the Washington council of the sorority which includes five chapters.

Miss Margaret Daumer, president of Alpha Gamma Chapter, is the new chairman of the council, and Miss Maurine Hecht, president of Gamma Epsilon, the secretary. New presidents of the other chapters are Mrs. Dorothy Devlin, Beta Upsilon, Mrs. Florence Darnell, Beta Chi.

Tentative plans have been made for a Christmas dance in which all of the chapters will join but the date was not set for it.

Delta Gammas To Honor Members At American U.

Guests of honor will be members of the graduating class of 1938 at American University, Misses Kathryn Taylor, Genevieve Coan, Phylis Davis, Frances Garrett, Drusilla Gottshall, Kathryn Ingberg, Lucille Maris, Frances Williams and Bernice Wyman.

The report of the biennial convention held in June at Colorado Springs will be given by Mrs. Gerald Flood, who was the delegate.

Assistant hostesses will be Miss Ida Mae Orr, president; Mrs. Arthur C. Perry, Miss Kathryn Heath, Miss Esther Young, Miss Ellen Hopkins, secretary; Miss Maurine Gatewood, Miss Olive Adams and Mrs. Flood.

Girl Reserves Dance at Camp

The Girl Reserve Officers' Training Course is being held at Vacation Lodge near Cherrydale, Va., this week-end, with delegates from senior high schools of the District, Virginia and Maryland.

Last night Mrs. Greta Biddle Kaylor, who is experienced in square dancing in the mountains, directed the dancing.

This morning at 10:30 the Girl Reserve staff, with Miss Mabel Cook, Miss Margaret Graves, Miss Mildred Chapin and Mrs. Van Smith, will present "Our Purpose," to be followed by "Social Service in Washington," discussed by Mrs. Olive Swinney, assistant secretary of the Council of Social Agencies.

In the afternoon at 3:30, "Discovery a la Modern" will be led by the social chairman and at 8:30 Miss Erva Barger, a former Girl Reserve, now a student at American University, will talk on "Two Months in a Homesteaders' Camp."

Tomorrow a breakfast hike has been planned for 8 o'clock and morning worship at 11. After dinner Capt. Dick Mansfield, of the Ninth Precinct Police, who is famous for his cartoons, will give a chalk talk on "Stop, Look and Listen."

At 5 o'clock Dr. and Mrs. Dwight Wilson will present "Music of the Negro." Dr. Wilson will talk, and Mrs. Wilson, of the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., will play the piano. Later supper will be served, followed by a sing and the closing ceremonial under the direction of the senior council, Miss Anne Davis, chairman.

The Council of Churches and Christian Education of Maryland and Delaware, whose object is to form a State youth council, will also meet this week-end, with Kamp Kahlert its headquarters. The Rev. John W. Harms, executive secretary of the council, will speak this afternoon. A panel discussion is planned at 4:45 on the United Youth Movement, Christian Youth Building a New World," led by the Rev. W. W. Delaplain, adviser of the Baltimore Youth Council.

Study Group Honors Its Founder

Philo-Classics Meets
Mrs. Pitcher Presides
40 Years Celebrated
New Officers There

Mrs. E. H. Pitcher, who founded the Philo-Classics Club 40 years ago, presided yesterday afternoon at a luncheon given at the Columbia Country Club in celebration of its anniversary. The affair was also the occasion for installation of officers, Mrs. A. H. Williams, new president, receiving the gavel from Mrs. T. A. Hutton, who has served for two years.

The club has adhered to the purpose for which it was organized, devoting itself through all the years to the study of the classics. Mrs. Pitcher, who came here from Effingham, Ill., as a bride, started it as the Lincoln Park Reading Club. When members moved to other sections of the city the name was changed to the present one, meaning "lovers of classics."

Members read books and plays together, discuss them and write papers related to them. For eight years they have been studying Shakespeare, and, in addition to reading the plays, vary their programs by presenting scenes in costume.

Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, a former member and a past president of the National League of American Pen Women, was a guest of honor yesterday. She recalled the silver anniversary, held at the Men's City Club in the presidency of the late Mrs. Augustus Knight, when the members presented Shakespearean scenes with Mrs. Pitcher in the character of Macbeth. She also recalled some of the entertaining programs given in observance of Twelfth Night.

Costumes Are Kept For Club Programs

This is an annual custom of the club, an occasion for use of the costume wardrobe which has been assembled over a period of years and now is in charge of Miss Julia McMillan. The costumes have been made for special programs and then contributed to the wardrobe for future use.

The club has had four members who have served as presidents of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs. One of these, Mrs. John W. Frizzell, was present and made a short talk. The others have been Mrs. Ellis Logan, who was unable to attend because of another engagement, and the late Mrs. Jessie Engle and Mrs. Court Wood.

Past presidents of the club were among the guests, with the exception of Mrs. F. C. Brinley, who was ill. The others were Mrs. R. B. Bare, who has been a member of the club for 38 years; Mrs. G. L. Peckham, who has belonged for 20 years, and Mrs. M. H. Fohrman.

Dr. William Allen Wilbur, of George Washington University, was guest speaker, addressing the club on "The Women of Shakespeare." Other honor guests were Miss Vella A. Winner, director of publicity for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, editor of the Clubwomen GFWC and author of a new book on club publicity, "What Makes You Think So?" and Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, new president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs. Both spoke briefly.

Mrs. Pitcher also had as her guests Mrs. Jason Waterman, whom she introduced as a friend she had known long before the club was organized, and Mrs. Ella M. Doggett Hostetler, author of "Sketches Here and There Along the Way," published last year.

Mrs. Ruth Mayberry Presents Sonnets

Music for the program was provided by Mrs. Ruth Mayberry, who sang a group of Shakespeare sonnets, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Glenn Edgington. There also was general singing of amusing jingles about the club, set to familiar tunes by Mrs. Stevenson.

The club colors, red and white, were carried out in the flowers on the luncheon table and the insignia, a little brown owl, was used on the birthday cake instead of candles. The cake was made of three angel foods placed together forming a triangle, with a fourth on top, in the center. The 40 little owls, made by Mrs. Ira Shantz, an artist member, looked down from all sides. The place cards, also decorated with owl designs, were painted by Mrs. Bard.

New officers, besides Mrs. Williams, are Mrs. Lou P. Woodruff, vice president; Mrs. N. B. Williams, recording secretary; Mrs. F. R. Merrifield, corresponding secretary; Mrs. I. S. Shantz, treasurer; Mrs. G. L. Peckham, director to the District of Columbia Federation.

Scout Mariners Will Sail Today

The Girl Scout Mariners, under the leadership of their skipper, Mrs. Rebecca Spitler, are sailing this morning on the yacht Tech for an all-day excursion down the river. In the party will be the mariners who made the week's cruise last summer, and guests from among the older Girl Scouts, who are joining the group this year.

Mariners who will go are: Ruth Billington, Helen Dawson, June Brown, Marion Donne, Millicent Carow, Doris Howard, Phyllis Howard, Enid Julihn, Shirley Karns, Mabel Klebold, Mary Ellen O'Connell, Betty Marshall, Ann McDermott, Betty Lee Plummer, Vivian Yeager, Marion Pauls.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB OF BETHESDA will open its season with a luncheon at its clubhouse on Old Georgetown road Tuesday afternoon at 12:30. Mrs. William Garlock and Mrs. Thomas Cassey, hospitality chairmen, will be in charge.

The luncheon will be preceded by a business meeting at 11 o'clock and followed, in the afternoon, at 1:30, by a news forum conducted by Mrs. J. Reed Bradley, chairman of press and publicity, in which members of the club will participate.

THE NEWCOMB CLUB OF BETHESDA held its first meeting yesterday afternoon—a luncheon at the Brooke Farm Tea House with 36 members present. Mrs. John W. Mann, Mrs. Percy H. Royster, Mrs. George Myers and Mrs. Eugene Stevens, jr., were the hostesses and Mrs. William N. Morell, the president, conducted the business meeting.

ANOTHER community club which has started its season's activities is the Woman's Club of Lyon Village, which met Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Barnard Joy, 1718 North Hartford street. Mrs. Louis Carl, Mrs. Clarence Croft and Mrs. I. C. Buchanan were co-hostesses and the guest speaker was Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, who told of her world tour.

THE ENTRE NOUS CLUB is preparing for a "white elephant" card party, to be given at the Girls' Hospice, 1525 Sixteenth street, next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The "white elephants" will be contributed by members as prizes for high score.

The party is one of a series planned by the financial chairman, Mrs. R. L. Spire, for the benefit of the philanthropic work of the club.

THE WASHINGTON ALUMNAE CHAPTER of Alpha Delta Theta Sorority will entertain with a supper tomorrow night for members of the graduating class of Lambda Chapter, at George Washington University. Janet MacDonald is in charge of arrangements for the supper, which will be given in the chapter rooms at 2129 G street.

Deborah Daniel heads the newly-elected officers as president of the chapter with Charlotte Womack, vice president; Mrs. Watson Monroe, recording secretary; Judith Wood, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Irvin Menikheim, treasurer.

Mrs. Leighton Johnston, who has been Alpha Delta Theta representative on the Washington Panhellenic Board for several years, is now president of the Panhellenic Association, and Miss Wood is the sorority's delegate.

THE PRO BONATA CLUB, founded in 1935 by Mrs. Harry Wendal, will begin its fourth season on Monday night, meeting at the home of its new president, Mrs. J. Edwin Reid, 1637 Harvard terrace.

The club, whose object is "literary, civic and social advancement of its members as well as philanthropic work," made application last June for membership in the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Its past presidents have been Mrs. Wendal, Mrs. Alfred L. Fleming and Mrs. Raymond L. Keith. Mrs. Reid, in addition to her interest in the Pro Bonata Club, served three years as president of the Sunshine and Community Society; is a member of the Political Study Club; the Woman's Bible Class of Central Presbyterian Church, a charter member and life member of the Women's City Club; past president of the Wallsholm Women's Club of New Jersey, an officer in the Daughters of the Nile, the Eastern Star and the Washingtonians.

Serving with her as officers this year are Mrs. Thomas F. Callahan, first vice president; Mrs. Bert L. Williams, second vice president; Mrs. Joseph F. Randall, treasurer; Mrs. Edgar F. McIntire, recording secretary; Mrs. Lee D. Ritter, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Wendal, custodian and director to the D. C. Federation; Mrs. Raymond L. Keith, alternate.

Mrs. Reid has announced her chairmen: Mrs. Randall, civics;; Mrs. J. W. Dunham, devotional; Mrs. Ennis A. Almond, domestic; Mrs. Joseph L. Miller, dramatic; Mrs. Ritter, entertainment; Mrs. Keith, hostesses; Mrs. Thomas F. Callahan, membership; Mrs. Bert L. Williams, philanthropic; Mrs. Fleming, publicity; Mrs. Albert L. Butler, sunshine; Mrs. Wendal, ways and means; Mrs. Fleming, year book.

Zeta Tau Alpha Banquet Is Monday

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha, International Women's Panhellenic Fraternity, has completed plans for its Founders' Day banquet celebrating the fortieth anniversary of the fraternity, which will be held at Congressional Country Club Monday night, at 7:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Franklin Steinko is to be toastmistress. The committee is headed by Mrs. Edgar Withrow, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter, and Miss Gretchen Hill, president of Beta Alpha Chapter at George Washington University. Other members of the committee are Mrs. John Warlick and Miss Beatrice Clephane.

During the banquet a Founders' Day service will be held in honor of the fortieth birthday of the founding and in honor of the nine founders, eight of whom are alive. The service will be conducted by seven founders of Beta Alpha Chapter at George Washington. These are Miss Beatrice Clephane, Mrs. Anthony Danis, of Annapolis; Mrs. Irving Dow, Mrs. Olive Geiger Faircloth, Mrs. Laurie Hess, Miss Virginia Ronsaville and Mrs. Catherine Silcox. Assisting them will be Miss Dorothy Rock, secretary of Alpha Province of the fraternity, and Miss Gretchen Hill.

He was in Villa's army at the age of 15.

"—the trend toward museums"

There seems to be an irresistible tendency for some offices of high Government officials to become museums. Each incumbent leaves some pet exhibit, some curio or knicknack, until the casual caller thinks he has wandered into a wing of the Smithsonian. Occasionally some strong-minded occupant sends a batch of the stuff to the attic or the basement, but soon he's inundated again.

Even Tommy Corcoran is ready to call Gillette a genuine liberal, if not a precipitate one . . . The inside story now is that the anti-Gillette putsch was a private excursion by Harry Hopkins, a gesture to frighten lawmakers who wanted to earmark his relief funds. Nothing personal intended, bless you.

U. S. Legal Staff Against Merit Plan

Committee Reports Sees Quality Reduced Decries Examinations Urges Flexible System

By Scott Hart.

Attorneys in the Federal departments and agencies have gone on record for exclusion from the competitive classified civil service because "the high average quality of the Government legal staff would be lowered by new appointments" under the merit plan.

Their attitude is set forth in a report of a committee headed by Huntington Cairns, assistant general counsel of the Treasury Department, which was commissioned by the attorneys to study the executive orders of June 24 and report on the effect of immediate merit status for lawyers.

Recommendations Made

The recommendations clauses of the 12-page report stated:

"Each department or agency affected by the executive order should recommend that legal positions be excepted. The exception should not be a permanent one. There is general agreement with the civil service objectives and belief that legal positions should ultimately be placed under the civil service, but that should not be done until more satisfactory methods of selection are evolved.

"Until that time comes, the high quality of legal personnel can best be maintained by continuing present methods of selection," it was stated.

The report was signed by Charles W. Boyle, acting solicitor, Agriculture Department; Claude Hamilton, general counsel, Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Frederick L. Kirgis, first assistant solicitor, Interior; Vincent D. Nicholson, general counsel, Rural Electrification Administration; Robert H. O'Brien, acting general counsel, SEC; Gerard D. Reilly, and Mrs. Cairns.

The statement "by continuing present methods of selection," means that the attorneys prefer to recruit their own personnel. This, very generally, is done from the graduating classes of "recognized" law colleges and from among attorneys who are showing particular promise in the private fields.

Reason for Stand

The bases for the recommendation, which comes when thousands of Federal employes are jumping at the opportunity of merit status as will be afforded next February 1 by the recent executive orders, were stated as follows in the report:

The necessity for legal personnel of high caliber in the Government is obvious; present methods of selection in those departments and agencies where the civil service procedure is not used make the procurement of such personnel possible; present civil service methods of selection are unsatisfactory.

Written 'examinations' are of little value. The applicant's technical proficiency has been demonstrated by law school and bar examinations. Many other factors must be considered—training, adaptability to the type of position involved, opinions of associates, professional experience, personality, temperament, etc. The appointing officer is best qualified to weigh those factors.

Applicants are not classified to meet special requirements of various attorney positions.

Long intervals between the making up of new registers create a period during which top-ranking young lawyers entering the profession cannot get on registers and hence will not be available for Federal selection.

Various arbitrary standards governing the position of eligibles on registers militate against selection of the best men.

"The committee will be glad to co-operate with the commission in developing satisfactory methods of selection under the civil service," the report stated, adding that a "satisfactory basis of selection should meet certain minimum needs," such as:

Using comparative analyses of training and experience to supplement technical examinations, written or oral; more adequate arrangements for scrutiny by the appointing officer of the personal traits of the applicant; greater opportunities for selecting officers to consider training, experience and personality factors of applicants and to secure the services of persons who are specifically qualified for particular positions, it was stated.

Ask Full Discretion

A satisfactory basis "would seem to be one which gave the department or agency the fullest possible range in selecting legal personnel on the basis of carefully applied competitive estimates of candidates and the detailed requirements of particular positions, but gave the Civil Service Commission adequate power to review appointments and to determine that the minimum qualifications for job classifications were met," the report stated.

In oral discussions of the report, which, incidentally, was unanimously adopted by representatives from more than 30 departments and agencies, the question of veterans' preferences in obtaining legal jobs was touched. While the attorneys made it clear that they had no feeling concerning the preferential status of veterans, the situation would place many veterans in positions on registers which were not warranted by examination grades.

The viewpoint of the attorneys is not binding in any way on the Civil Service Commission in its final determination of who gets status and who doesn't under the executive orders.

4 Settlement Houses Ask More of Chest

Desire Larger Staffs Cite Work Increase Budgets of All Up

Representatives of four settlement houses presented their 1939 budgets to the Community Chest budget committee yesterday.

Mrs. R. F. Whitehead, chairman of the Georgetown Children's House at 3224 N street northwest, pointed out that the largest single item in the increase requested was for an adequate salary for an experienced recreation director. The home provides a day nursery for children under 6 and a small day home giving part time to older children whose mothers are employed during the day. Total budget requested was $7,150, an increase of $1,105 over 1938.

Northwest House Asks More

Members of the board of directors of the Northwest Settlement House, 515 M street, requested an increased appropriation of $2,421 over the 1938 budget of $8,708, to carry on the activities of its various departments. This settlement, an organized recreation center in a neighborhood where there are almost no recreational facilities for colored, had an enrollment of more than 500 children last year, from more than 400 families. It operates a nursery school with 20 beds for children of working parents.

Because of an increase of 40 per cent in the work the last year, officials of Barney Neighborhood House requested $21,447 for 1939, an increase of $1,739 over 1938. Margaret Bell Merrill, head resident, pointed out that their 35 volunteer workers cannot adequately fill the present need for additional staff workers. Among the various activities of this community settlement in Southwest Washington are a day nursery for children of working mothers, music school, arts and crafts for boys and girls, and a summer vacation school for 175 to 200 children.

Friendship Budget Raised

Henry P. Blair, president of the board of Friendship House, Southeast Washington's social and educational settlement, requested $31,869 for 1939, an increase of $3,928 over last year's budget.

In presenting this estimate, Blair pointed out the ways in which the settlement helps families and individuals to keep up their morale and to preserve their self-dependence, and frequently prevents them becoming applicants for relief.

Lewin Heads U.S. Forces in A.M.A. Action

Trust Case Mapped Hart to Act as Aide Jury Called Oct. 17 Moor Files Appeal

The Department of Justice yesterday organized its forces for its antitrust fight against the American Medical Association when John Henry Lewin, who has been working on the case since its inception, was appointed to outline the Government's charges to a Federal grand jury October 17. He will be assisted by Allan Hart, former assistant United States attorney.

Lewin joined the Justice Department's staff October 22, 1935, after serving with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration since September, 1933. He represented the Government at Madison, Wis., last January when 12 major oil companies and five individuals were prosecuted successfully on gasoline price-fixing charges.

The medical case will hinge on whether the association and its member, the District of Columbia Medical Society, acted in restraint of trade during its recent controversy with Group Health Association, Inc., an organized of Government employes paying monthly fees for medical care. The Justice Department charges that efforts by the A. M. A. and the local society to prevent group health doctors from using Washington hospitals constitute a violation of the Sherman antitrust act.

To Appeal Ruling

J. Balch Moor, District insurance superintendent, carried to the Court of Appeals yesterday a challenge of Group Health Association's claim that it neither practices medicine nor sells insurance.

The record of the case won by GHA before Justice Bailey was filed and will be followed shortly by briefs questioning his application of the law. The case will thus be at issue in the Appellate Court while another phase of the socialized medicine battle is being fought out before the special grand jury summoned to investigate antitrust law violations by the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society.

Ruling Favors GHA

Justice Bailey on June 25 ruled for GHA on all points of the action is brought January 25 against Moor and District Attorney Pine, which was designed to clarify its legal status. The court said the Healing Arts Practices act was designed to protect the public from quacks rather than to limit the practice or control of the relations of physicians and patients.

One person, Justice Bailey said, might contract with a physician for treatment over a period of time. Similarly several persons might contract with several persons. And the patients in such a case might incorporate if they wished to. None of these transactions appeared to be a violation of the law, the opinion continued, and the court was constrained to find that this was what the GHA operations amounted to.

Accordingly, Justice Bailey ruled that GHA was not 'practicing medicine" in violation of the law and that it was not in the insurance business.

Sec. Ickes Urges Colored Backing For Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 7.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes urged colored people tonight to support "our humanitarian President," asserting that they "have had their own bitter experience with false friends."

In an address prepared for delivery to the Eastern Regional Conference of the National Negro Congress, Ickes said that for many years after the Civil War, colored people "gave their loyal support to a party that was as exacting in its political demands upon them as their former masters had been in their physical

NLRB Holds Orders Above Courts Here

Result May Be Appealed But Not Decision Hits Sea Case Plea

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the District Circuit Court of Appeals and claimed that courts have no power to review any of its proceedings except orders affecting unfair labor practices by employers.

The board asserted its immunity in a special appearance for the "sole purpose of objecting to the jurisdiction of the court" over its finding that the Committee for Industrial Organization unions were the proper representatives of Pacific Coast shipping employes.

A. F. L. Took Initative

The American Federation of Labor and several longshoremen's unions on September 29 asked the court to set aside this finding. The labor board's special appearance recited the proceedings which ended in its ruling for the C. I. O. and then directed attention to provisions of the Wagner act which provide for resort to the courts.

The board quoted the act as allowing its actions to be appealed when unfair labor practices are involved, but not as to other matters. The special appearance was made by Robert Watts, assistant general counsel of the Labor Board, and Malcolm Halliday, of its legal staff.

Halliday explained that a finding that a union was entitled to represent employes was not an "order" which might be appealed, and that of itself it had no effect. Accordingly, the A. F. of L. could not point to any injury done, and there was nothing for the court of appeals to rule on.

Basis for Decision Later

Legal authorities suggested that if the board wins its point the matter would come before the courts later on, if the West Coast employers obeyed the board's finding. Then, it was said, the A. F. of L. unions could complain that this obedience constituted an "unfair labor practice," and, if the board's ruling on their complaint did not satisfy them, could appeal to the courts.

Awaiting decision in the District court, meanwhile, was another challenge of judicial power, filed by the board when two Chicago firms asked judges here to forbid the board to hold hearings on complaints against them.

'Gypsy' Smith Plans Revival Here With 26-Year-Old Bride

Last One in Capital Held 20 Years Ago Evangelist, 78, Takes Pride in Youthfulness Wife 'Crazy About' Church Work

Evangelist Rodney (Gypsy) Smith, 78, and his 26-year-old bride dropped into Washington for a brief visit yesterday and then whisked back to Baltimore, where the world-traveling preacher is conducting a revival.

While here, "Gypsy" made arrangements to conduct a two-week revival meeting at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, beginning October 23. The former mission worker, who was born in a gypsy tent in England, last held a revival here 20 years ago at the time of the World War.

The Smiths were married last July in California, with his son, the Rev. Albany Rodney Smith, performing the ceremony.

"I'm crazy about the work," pretty Mrs. Smith declared yesterday, referring to the evangelistic activities.

"Gypsy," who has spent 61 of his 78 years spreading the gospel, takes pride in his ability to cope with age.

"I don't work or think like a man my age," he said yesterday. "I preached twice yesterday and sang at the conclusion of the service, and you know, my voice was just as true as a youth's."

As to world problems, he felt that there was no hope of solution in diplomacy, education, or reform. "Christ and his gospel are the only cure," he declared.

Gravelly Point Airport Plans Nearly Ready

Last Touches Made May Start Next Week Highway to Be Moved

Actual construction work at the new Gravelly Point Airport probably will begin next week, officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority said yesterday.

Explaining that last minute touches are being given to the plans for the terminal, they declared that operations will be possible at the landing field within 12 months after construction begins.

Among engineers considerable doubt has been expressed that the necessary fill would be suitable for use within the year maximum set by the authority, but officials of agency emphasized yesterday that the dredging and filling work will be carried on at controlled speed to permit the sand, gravel and clay to settle.

It also was pointed out that objections to the location of the airport on the ground that it will be too near the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard are without foundation. The highway is to be moved to a new right of way which will be approximately 500 feet from the edge of the landing field, officials said.

Dredging and filling for the new airport will be carried on under direction of the Army engineers while the later work of grading the field and laying the runways will be done by labor provided by the Works Progress Administration.

Funds for the terminal, it is understood, will be provided from rivers and harbors appropriations and money controlled by the Public Works Administration and the Works Progress Administration.

Seal to Ask Tightening of Small Loan Act

Plans Plea to Congress Condemns Extra Fees Aiming at 'Sharks'

A renewed effort to drive unscrupulous money lenders from the District and enable honest concerns to do business here will be made in the forthcoming Congress, it was disclosed yesterday.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal said yesterday he would ask Congressional sanction of a revision of the antiquated 1913 "loan shark" act so that legitimate money lenders and fresh capital might be invited to the District.

Seal critized the present law as inadequate and said his office had been unsuccessful in prosecuting cases under it.

The corporation counsel would limit the amount of interest charged borrowers to 1 per cent per month, as is allowed by the present law, but allow no further charge. Other charges now include costs of procuring a loan by the company for the borrower from the lender, charges for investigation, clerical work and other services.

At present small loan companies charge for insurance, investigations and other services, which sometimes results in "an unreasonable rate of interest," Seal said.

"It is my intention to have a law which would permit a reasonable rate of interest," he declared.

The amendment proposed by Seal would prohibit the company from paying money for procuring money for a borrower from a lender.

Lutheran Women Get Office Right

Vote Lifts Barrier May Become Delegates M. E. Prelate Heard Bishop Hughes Talks

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 7.—Without a dissenting vote or protest, the conference of the United Lutheran Church in America adopted today a report preventing any objection on scriptural grounds to election of women to church offices.

Sharp debate had been expected on the report, which was prepared by the commission of adjudication on the constitutionality and scriptural authority for the right of women to sit as delegates to conventions of the church and its synods.

The report pointed out its action did not prevent synods from making proper constitutional provision to prevent the choice of women delegates, but adds that the president of the united church would "be bound to seat women delegates" presenting the proper credentials.

There are no women delegates at at this convention, the eleventh biennial meeting of the church.

Bishop Hughes Preaches

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 7 (AP).—Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Washington, senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church North, delivered the sermon tonight at a special preaching service of the annual session of the Baltimore Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Bishop Hughes' address was one of the highlights of the conference. During the afternoon session Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman, of Rockville, Md., a former United States Senate chaplain, compared the unification of the three branches of Methodism with the exodus of the Israelites from captivity through the wilderness to the promised land.

George W. Crabbe, superintendent and attorney for the Maryland Anti-saloon League, this morning called on his listeners to "do something" about liquor traffic, which he said was corrupting the boys and girls of the teen age.

As alternate delegates to the unifying conference to be held in April, four clerical and four lay alternates will be selected. Alternates named thus far include the Rev. C. E. Brandt, Romney, W. Va., and the Rev. J. C. Copenhaver, of Staunton, and Lay Alternates Albert H. Dudley, of Baltimore; John H. Ray, of Washington, and Mrs. W. H. Ballang[illegible], of Edinburg.

Italian Princess From D. C. Seeks Repatriation

Driven from Europe by gathering was clouds, the Princess Boncompagni, former Washington girl, will seek repatriation, it was learned yesterday.

The Italian princess, once Miss Margaret Preston Draper, has asked her bank here to search the files of the District Building to ascertain the exact date of her marriage to Prince Andrea Boncompagni.

One of the most brilliant weddings in Washington, it took place October 25, 1916, at the Draper home, at Connecticut avenue and K street northwest. The late Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, performed the service.

She was the youngest daughter of the late Gen. William Franklin Draper, once member of Congress from Massachusetts and later Ambassador to Italy. It was during her father's ambassadorship that she met Prince Boncompagni, whose ancestral home was next door to the American Embassy in Rome.

Advertising Man Dies As Car Plunges in River

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—A man who carried a 1938 press card issued by the National Republic, a monthly magazine published in Washington, D. C., to Harrie R. Winsatt, 63, of New York, was drowned tonight when his automobile plunged into the East River.

An official of National Republic Magazine, 511 Eleventh street northwest, last night said that Richard H. Winsatt had been an advertising salesman for the publication for the past three years. He had his headquarters in New York, where he also made his home.

Colonials Defeat Bulldogs, 26 to 0, at Stadium

The Washington Post Sports

16 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Oct. 7.—Wheeling along with the World Series are 400 gents of the press, catering to public interest and constituting something of a World Series sideshow in themselves.

POVICH.

It is at this time every year that big league baseball makes a show of paying its debt to the press of the country, which ballyhoos its spring training, prints its box scores daily, publishes meaty littls facts and figures about the players and helps to whoop up the big gates. Newspaper lineage that would run into millions of dollars if bought at advertising rates, is dumped gratis on the baseball industry.

So the big leagues every year give a World Series party to the press. Press buttons, issued by the owners of the two contending series teams, are magic charm. They open wide the gates to dining rooms of the best hotels, which are always selected as press headquarters. They admit to sumptuous bars, weighted down with liquors and liqueurs. They are open sesame for direct bus service to the parks, behind police escorts.

And the club owners pick up the tab. In 1933, it cost Clark Griffith $13,000 to entertain the press in the three games of the World Series at Griffith Stadium against the Giants. Griffith has always been known as a lavish entertainer and is proud of the general acknowledgment that his 1924 entertainment of the World Series press was the finest in all Series history.

Will Cost $20,000

This year, at the lowest figure, it will probably cost Col. Jake Ruppert and Phil Wrigley $10,000 each to entertain the press. But never has the club owner picked up the tab grudglingly. They know the value of the press, and the press sideshow has come to be as integral and seemingly vital a part of the World Series as the four umpires themselves.

Naturally, under such auspicious conditions as obtain at press headquarters where an incline of the head will bring a bartender running, there should be some tippling. Because it is not true that baseball writers as a class are teetotalers.

And naturally, too, there would an occasion when a baseball writer might not feel up to his daily stint. He may even be the equivalent of hors-de-combat. But there is a fine and magnificent camaraderie among baseball writers. Some of the finest descriptive stuff, some of the best experting and some of the prize human interest angles of the World Series have been writen under the by-line of a baseball writer who at the moment of the writing job was utterly unable to hit a typewriter key, but safe in the knowledge that he had friends who could and would.

There was, for example, the lovable old guy who used to make his way to the bar on World Series' eve and let the rest of the world go by for the next week. The boys never viewed him very harshly, even though the old fellow's work for his paper devolved on them with great regularity.

Press Is Clannish

They simply ascertained for themselves the state of the old fellow's mind and body, confirmed the fact that he was in no condition to do a story that day, stuck a carbon in their own typewriter and dispatched a piece to his paper under his by-line.

He knew what was going on, took it as a matter of course. He never thanked anybody at the time and they didn't care about that because they knew that deep, heartfelt thanks would come later. Because, 51 weeks a year he was a grand guy, as I was saying.

And if nobody had thought, until the last minute, to file a story for our hero, there would be no wast of time. The Western Union or Postal Telegraph operators would simply be told to pick out a story that had already been filed to a paper of another city, and dispatch it under our hero's by-line. In fact, that was the most common procedure for World Series' week.

But of a sudden, one night after a World Series game, our friend registered a few compunctions. Having done not a lick of work himself, he began to wonder what sort of a story had been filed under his name. Arousing himself, he walked uncertainly to the chief telegraph operator and demanded:

"Lemme sh-ee that sh-tory you sh-ent my paper. I wann know what's goin' on around here, hic."

The operator dug a story out from among the stories already dispatched and said, "Here's the one I picked out for your paper, mister."

Grabbing the story, our hero scanned it as he rolled unsteadily on legs that needed support. Then he fumed.

"Hey, what's goin' on around here. So thass the sh-tory for my paper, hugh? Well, if I can't write better stuff 'n' that, I'm gonna change telegraph companies.

Crosetti Outstanding

As the series moves into the third game, the outstanding hero thus far has been little Frankie Crosetti, who has wrecked the Cubs with his spectacular fielding and his hitting.

Crosetti cut off three Cub rallies with his fielding around shortstop in the first game and on Thursday he broke the spell of Dizzy Dean with his home run that lifted the Yankees into a 3-2 lead.

Paradoxically, the Cubs have outhit the Yankees thus far, .303 to .279, but the fewer Yankee wallops have carried more authority. For involved in the 20 Cub hits of the first two games were only one triple and one two-bagger. Four of the Yankees' 19 hits have been doubles, and two have been two-run home runs.

Cardinals Outplayed By Detroit

Palumbo Game's Star Hurls Great Passes Figure in All Scores 20,000 Watch Battle

By Jack Munhall.

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 7.—Catholic University's undefeated football season ended on a distinctly sour note here tonight when the Cardinals were outplayed, outsmarted and thoroughly outclassed by a powerful Detroit University eleven which won the fourth renewal of their intersectional rivalry by 27-0.

Before a crowd of 20,000 fans the Cardinals, 13-0 victor over St. Bonaventure's in their opener last Sunday, were given a convincing licking by a Titan team which had been completely misleading in its first two starts of the campaign. When Detroit lost to Purdue, 19-6, and barely defeated Western State Teachers' College, 7-0, showing little or no offensive power, no one, especially not Catholic University, anticipated the barrage of touchdowns which descended here tonight.

The Cardinals were never in the running and seriously threatened to score only in the third period when Burke Vidnovic's passing, interspersed with an occasional line gain by Joe Guyon, carried the ball to the 16 before Vin Barritt intercepted a pass for the Titans.

Whistle Stops Threats

In the waning minutes of the game the Cards were dangerous with the tobacco-chewing Vidnovic enjoying an amazingly successful series of completions, but the final whistle stopped their dying threats.

The Cards were caught off balance at the very start and never recovered from the shock of the Titans' 90-yard march to a touchdown off the opening kickoff. Eddie Palumbo and Jack Halpin, a pair of triple-threat halfbacks who led every Titan scoring drive, were the sparks of this devastating attack. Halpin carried Carme Pirro's kickoff from the Detroit 10 to the 30 and then the Titans started to move and they didn't stop until Palumbo passed 20 yards to Halpin in the end zone for the first 6 points. Capt. Alex Chesney converted from placement.

Scarcely five minutes later Detroit had its second touchdown. A "coffin corner" kick by Palumbo which rolled out of Catholic's two-yard line set up the score. Vidnovic kicked out to Halpin who took the ball on the C. U. 14, and on one of his typical twisting runs, went down the sidelines all the way to the 8 before Quarterback Johnny Fiorellino knocked him out of bounds. After two line plunges had gained only two yards, Palumbo passed to John Charbeneau for the score. Chesney's placement was no good.

Titans Score Again

In the third quarter the Titans scored again. Midway of the period Palumbo, as said before, intercepted Vidnovic's forward pass on the 24, and returned to the 42. The Titans quickly ate up the remaining distance to their third touchdown. Palumbo capped the 58-yard drive by passing to McMillan, who caught the ball in full stride on the C. U. 20 and outdistanced the Cardinal secondary.

Detroit's fourth touchdown was made by Al Ghesquire, a substitute halfback, who cracked over from the 5-yard line to climax a sustained drive of 53 yards. Ghesquire, a promising sophomore who had disappointed thus far this season, was the leader in this drive. He smashed the Cardinal line for gain after gain, receiving able assistance from Clint Barritt, a demoted regular fullback.

The statistics plainly showed Catholic's ineptitude. For the running efforts with the ball the Capital squad showed a net loss of 2 yards. The heavier Detroit line outplayed the Cardinals' forward wall all the way, and with McMillan and John McDermott proving a source of continual discomfort to the Cardinal ball carriers, bottled them at every turn.

Thanks to Vidnovic, the Cardinals gained 158 yards by forward passing, completing 17 of 30. The Titans' Palumbo, himself a fair leather pitcher, had a better average than Vidnovic, but he also had better blocking.

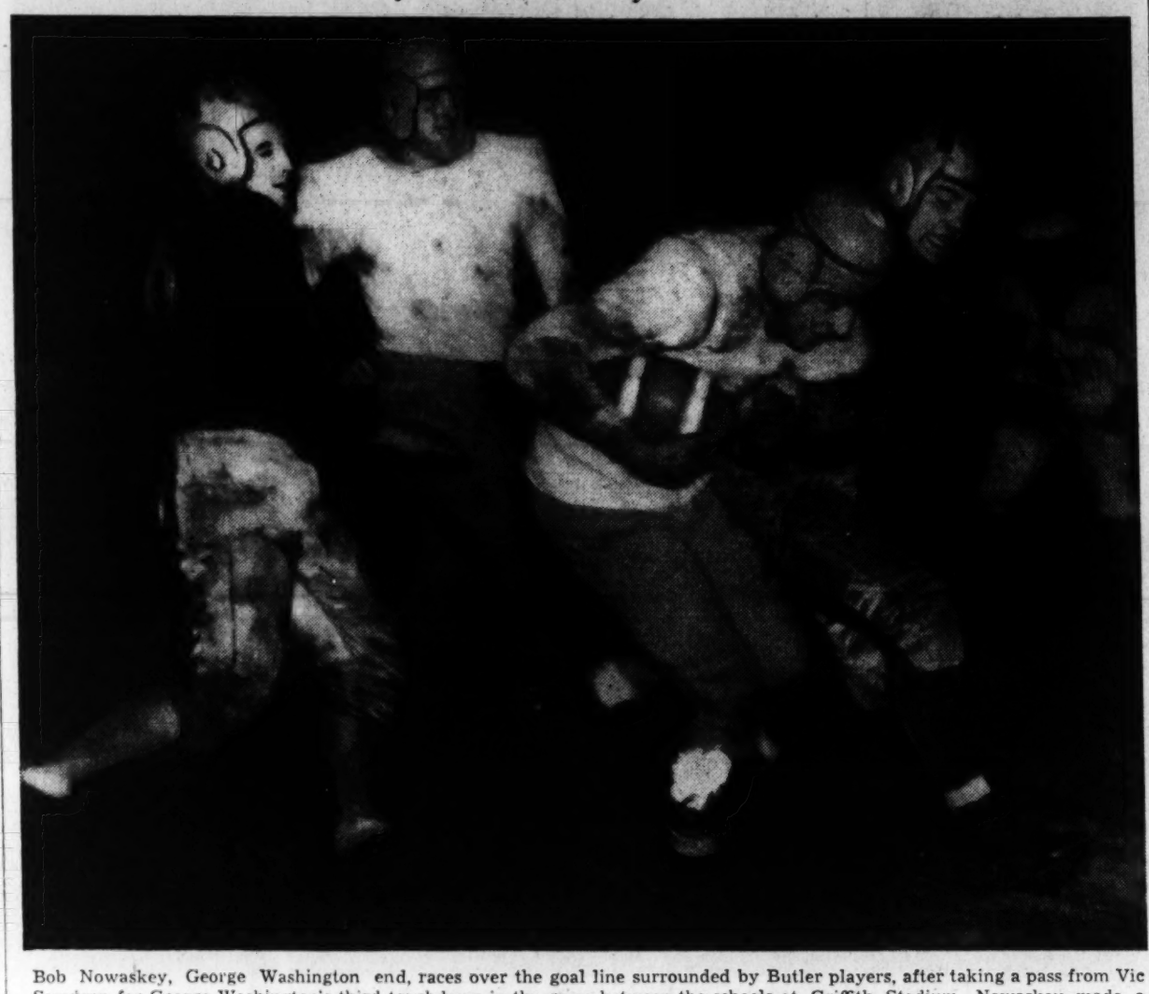
A Colonial Player Reaches Pay Dirt in Butler Game



Bob Nowaskey, George Washington end, races over the goal line surrounded by Butler players, after taking a pass from Vic Sampson for George Washington's third touchdown in the game between the schools at Griffith Stadium. Nowaskey made a nice catch under trying circumstances. The colonials won the game, 26-0

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Some 10,000 fans saw the Colonials down Butler's stout-hearted but impotent defense early in the second period for their initial touchdown, and then romp away with the laurels with two additional touchdowns in the third period and another in the fourth.

Transformed as if by magic from the bungling, uncertain and unskilled team of the previous week into a smooth, well-knit machine, the Colonials rolled over Butler like a high-powered motor car. And when Bill Reinhart's men swung into high gear in the third period they looked like the best football team ever developed at the downtown school.

Sampson Outstanding

Willowy-hipped Vic Sampson was the outstanding player on the field from an offensive viewpoint. He literally ran wild, accumulating 166 yards from scrimmage in eight trips with the cowhide. He put the ball in scoring position for his team's first score early in the second period with two runs totaling 58 yards, then smashed through the line for the touchdown after his own pass to Nowaskey for 9 yards, and Tonkavitch advanced the ball to the 3-yard mark.

Again in the third period his 21-yard gallop, coupled with another of 25 yards by Lud Urick, bull-necked fullback, drove Butler back within the shadow of its goalposts and arranged the trappings for the second score. His pass to Sam Babich, who took the ball in the end zone, culminated a march of 69 yards.

Hurls Touchdown Pass

Sampson also was responsible for the Colonials' third touchdown, pegging a pass to Bob Nowaskey, who reached up among a trio of blue-jerseyed Butler boys and made a beautiful catch in the end zone. This second grenade followed two of the lithe youngster's most spectacular runs of the evening. The first was a mad dash of 61 yards that ended with Welton, Butler's triple-threat halfback, finally driving him out of bounds on the Bulldogs' 19-yard line. On the very next play he skirted right end for three more yards, putting the ball on the 3-yard stripe. Then, after a 15-yard penalty for holding had set them back, Sampson brought his mates back over the goal-line with his pass to Nowaskey.

Bob Faris and Billy Richardson joined forces in coining the last score in the final minute of play, Richardson tossing a 31-yard pass to Bob Faris, who caught the ball on the 2-yard line and fell into the end zone. George Washington's line, Jones, Renzeglia, Weinberg, Rebholz, well, all of them, looked great, and ill-deserve to be overlooked in the distribution of glory.

Virginia Alumni Hold Rally Here On Eve of Game

Two of Virginia's assistant coaches, "Butch" Slaughter and Art Guepe, told of the progress of the Cavalier squad as it tied V. M. I. in its opening game and defeated Washington and Lee last week.

Dr. W. C. Marbury, president of the Washington chapter of Virginia Alumni, introduced those who spoke. Among them were Charles R. Fenwick, of Washington, national president of the Virginia Alumni Association; J. Malcolm Luck, alumni secretary, and Thomas Carruthers, graduate manager of athletics.

'Skins, Giants To Be Feted

Texans to Honor Boys Gala Day Planned Is Set for Tomorrow

"Texas Day" will be celebrated tomorrow at Griffith Stadium with appropriate ceremonies just before the Redskins and New York Giants line up for the kick-off of a battle that is expected to lure more than 30,000 rabid football fans through the turnstiles.

It will be "Texas Day" on the field and in the stands with no less than eight players culled from the two squads hailing from the Lone Star territory, and a galaxy of distinguished officials watching from the comparative comfort of 50-yard line box seats.

Clifford G. Beckham, president of the Texas State Society; Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram; Nastin White, of the Department of Agriculture; Fred B. Lyon, of the State Department; Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; W. B. Yeager, of the same organization, and Bascom N. Timmons, nationally known Texas journalist, head the delegation of folks from the Pan-Handle section who will be on hand to honor players from that State.

Three members of the Redskins, headed by the redoubtable "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh, are Texans. Charley Malone who, like Baugh, attended Texas Christian University, and Roy Young, an alumnus of Texas A. and M., complete the District group.

New York has no less than five from different alma maters. Will Walls, of T. C. U.; Pete Cole, from Trinity; Ox Parry, of Baylor; Hugh wolfe, from Texas U., and Jack Hayden, who was born and raised in Texas but learned his football at Arkansas, are the giants to be honored.

Both teams will complete preparations for the game this morning with light workouts at the stadium. The Redskins will be on the field from 9 until 10:30 o'clock, and New York will take over from 10:30 o'clock until noon. Neither Ray Flaherty, of Washington, or Steve Owen, the rival coaches, have decided on starting line-ups, and will not announce them until after today's workouts.

Sammy Baugh will play for Washington, although he will not appear in the starting line-up. Riley Smith also will be available for emergency duty.

Fairfax Horse Show Is Scheduled Today

With the Mexican Army team and mounts featured prominently on the program, the annual Fairfax Horse Show will get under way this morning at 10 o'clock at the Fairfax show grounds.

A crowd of record-breaking proportions is expected to jam the colorful grounds for the afternoon program, which will feature jumping events. A last minute rush of entries brought the list far above the anticipated mark and also assured the exhibitors of strong competition.

Late entries were received from Mrs. D. N. Lee, of Middleburg; Peach Brothers, Messrs. Ratlor, Aubrey Fishback and E. L. Redmon.

Navy Slight Favorite Over Virginia Today

Lem Cooke Slated to Start for Middies 22,000 Fans Expected to See Game Kick-Off Set for 2:30 o'Clock at Annapolis

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Oct. 7.—A football rivalry inaugurated back in the golden era of flying wedges and broken noses will be resumed tomorrow on Farragutt Field, where Navy's undefeated Middies line-up against the flying Cavaliers of the University of Virginia. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Victorious in their first two games by identical scores of 26-0 over William and Mary and Virginia Military Institute, the sea-going pigskin toters are slight favorites to stop Virginia's vaunted passing attack, but the Cavaliers will not lack support. It promises to be a dog fight from the opening whistle to the last, with most of the play centered in the teams' aerial games.

A capacity audience of 22,000 fans is expected to see the sixth annual game in the modern series between the schools. All reserved seats were disposed of earlier in the week, necessitating the erection of temporary bleachers at either end of the field. Accommodations have thus been provided for several thousand additional fans.

Cooke Due to Start

Navy's hopes were buoyed up by the announcement that Lem Cooke, the Hernando Hurricane and closest approach to a triple-threater in Navy's backfield, will be ready for heavy duty. Head Coach Hank Hardwick was undecided last night whether to start Cooke or hold him for a crucial spot, but assured Navy supporters that Lem would play. Cooke aggravated an old knee injury in last week's game, and it was feared he might be incapacitated this week-end.

In the event that he fails to start George (Sloppy) McDaniel will fill his berth at quarterback. McDaniel is rated a comer, but lacks the polish and finesse of an experienced man. Cooke is the key man behind the line, and is the hub of Navy's deception.

Ed (Jeep) Gillette, "Bullet" Wood and Monty Whitehead will round out the starting backfield, while the line will be the same that opened against V. M. I. last week.

Potent Aerial Game

Virginia, which spent the night in Washington and plans to complete its trek to Annapolis tomorrow morning, is putting its hopes in its potent aerial game. The Cavaliers tied V. M. I., 12-all, in their first game of the season, but evidenced vast improvement last week in winning over Washington and Lee by a 13-0 count. Navy scouts who watched both games report that Frank Murray's outfit is easily the most dangerous of the Admirals' early season opponents.

Navy has won all five of the modern series games, started in 1932, but in the last few years has found Virginia to be anything but a push-over.

Beveridge, Gillette, Cardoza and Frerette probably will compose Virgima's starting backfield, and of these Beveridge is the most dangerous. He is a triple-threater in every sense of the word.

W.-L. High Ties Central

Passes Net Scores French Gets Away Central Rallies

Central's powerful football machine ran into the forces of Washington-Lee High yesterday at Central Stadium, and the result was a 13-to-13 stalemate. Central scored the first points in the first quarter when Dick Farr, the wingman, who scored one of Central's winning touchdowns against Western Tuesday, grabbed Ben Steiner's heave from the 12-yard stripe and went over standing up.

Washington-Lee quickly tied the count in the second period, another pass telling the tale. One halfback to another, French to Arnaud, gave the Little Generals 6 points, and Anderson converted to tie the score.

W. and L. took a temporary lead in the third period. Halfback French took a Central punt from behind the goal on the Central 43 and raced to a touchdown. The placement went wide.

Central kept the 4,000 spectators thrilled in the closing minutes by bringing the score back to even. A long end-around play with End Jimmy Clark lugging the leather picked up 17 yards to W. and L.'s 15, and, after two tries, Harry Martin plunged over for the second touchdown. The placement by Steiner, which might have won the game, sailed off at an angle.

Baugh Finds Eagles Have Perfect Defense for Passer

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh

Forward Passing Champion National Football League.

I am the sort of fellow who would appreciate it, I suppose, but I saw something new and effective as protection for the passer when the Redskins played the Philadelphia Eagles.

SAMMY BAUGH.

I saw big Dave Smukler, the Eagles, triple threat, get the best protection any passer ever had. He was rarely bothered despite the fact that the Redskins have a pair of fast-charging ends in Wayne Millner and Charley Malone, and a line that has a habit of breaking through.

Smukler's protection consisted of a variation of the mousetrap play in which the Eagles' blockers deliberately let the Redskins' ends through and then knocked them off.

Two blockers were usually in the backfield with Smukler on his passes and he would take the ball about 10 yards behind the line of scrimmage. The blockers didn't attempt to meet the ends head on. What they did do was wait until the ends drew even with them and then they threw a block from the side, carrying the Redskin out of the play.

The ends, of course, were knocked in opposite directions and Smukler, to get completely out of range, merely had to step forward. Sometimes he could stride almost to the line of scrimmage before turning his pass loose. He had more time than any passer I've ever seen.

Smart Stuff by Bell

It was smart stuff by Bert Bell, the Eagles' coach. Texas college teams invented the mousetrap protection for the passer, I understand, but Bell was the first to apply it in the East.

The play doesn't seem to have any flaws. There is always a possibility that a man protecting the passer will miss a head-on block. But when he lets an end through and blocks from the side he gets the benefit of the end's own momentum. He may not knock the end off his feet but he knocks him far enough out of the passer's path to remove him as a threat. By the time the end recovers he is too far in back of the passer, who has stepped forward.

There isn't much doubt in my mind that forward-passing generally is getting better. The passers are getting smarter. You'll see them doing things in games now that were rarely attempted a few years ago.

White Knows Tricks

One of the things they are doing is balking and feinting. A balk may be against the rules in baseball but it's a handy asset in football. A false motion by the passer can throw the defense off plenty. It opens 'em up and helps to get a receiver in the clear. Within a few years we're certain to see every smart passer making those helpful little balks and feints.

Whizzer White is the kind of passer who knows the value of those little tricks. And, incidentally, I feel I'm entitled to take a bow in connection with White.

Two weeks ago when the Whizzer was being described as a flop by football experts throughout the country because he wasn't doing anything sensational for the Pittsburgh pros, I checked in with the opinion that White was being prematurely judged.

The other day aginst the New York Giants he showed what he could do. In two plays he carried the ball 35 yards to set the stage for the winning touchdown and his run-backs of kicks were a feature of the game.

Whizzer White was under a terrific handicap when he missed early training with the Pirates. He's just begun to find himself in pro football. From here on, I believe we're going to read a lot of favorable comment about the Whizzer. He's too good a football player to flop.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Football Follies of 1938

Columbia-Army at West Point—The Cubs won't be able to offer the loss of Augie Galan as an excuse for their failure in the World Series, for even the spectacular Augie couldn't be expected to do any better than the two men who have been serving as understudies in the outfield. Cavaretta and Marty each have made three hits in the two games and are batting .600 and .750 respectively . . . Columbia.

VIDMER.

Harvard-Cornell at Cambridge—There seems to be a unanimous agreement as to the hero of the series up to date. The palm has been awarded to Frankie Crosetti whose brilliant fielding was mainly responsible for the Yankees' victory in the first contest and whose home run with one on sent the Yankees ahead in the second. He has handled 18 chances without an error and several others that don't show in the box score . . . Cornell.

Pennsylvania-Yale at Philadelphia—Blame for the Yankees' first pair of runs off Dizzy Dean, which pattered over the plate when both Hack and Jurges went after Joe Gordon's dribbling grounder and neither got it, couldn't be definitely placed. It was just one of those things where two minds worked as one—each decided to take it and at the same instant each decided to let the other handle the ball . . . Yale.

Dartmouth-Princeton at Princeton—Instead of being elated over receiving credit for the second victory, thereby establishing a record of having won six and lost none in World Series competition, Lefty Gomez was downcast. He felt he had done an unsatisfactory job and wanted to know if in some way Johnny Murphy couldn't be credited with the game . . . Dartmouth.

No Weak Links

Pitt-Duquesne at Pittsburgh—It isn't surprising that the Yankees dominate the baseball situation to such an extent. All you have to do is look them over when they take the field, one by one. In discussing any other team there are always suggestions for improvements—they need a second baseman and an outfielder, or a first baseman and a catcher—but the Yankees need no improvement in any position. And still they intend to improve on one spot next year . . . Pitt.

Colgate-Duke at Buffalo—Bill Dickey was held hitless in the second game and is still batting .500 for the series, due to four straight hits in the opening contest. Asked if he had got any laughs out of the games, Bill said that he had to laugh when he fell on his face fielding a bunt. But while he was thinking it funny, the crowd was applauding a great play . . . Duke.

Navy-Virginia at Annapolis—Lou Gehrig's wife is wearing a beautiful gold and diamond bracelet the size of a mastiff's collar. It is made up of medals, rings, scarfpins and watch charms Lou has received for service in various Worlds Series and All-Star games and for being voted the most valuable player in the league . . . Navy.

Pleasure Jaunt

Brown-Lafayette at Providence—The Yankee Special that rolled to Chicago and back looked more like an excursion train with so many wives and mothers aboard. And needless to say a good time was had by all. Among the fair followers of the victorious Yankees were Mrs. Lou Gehrig, Mrs. Bill Dickey, Mrs. Lefty Gomez, Mrs. Red Ruffing and Joe Gordon's mother who came all the way from Portland, Oreg., to see her son in first World's Series . . . Brown.

Holy Cross-Manhattan at Worcester—If the Yankees win this series, and there's no visible means of stopping them, Joe McCarthy will establish a record as the only manager to lead a team to three successive series triumphs. But there seems small prospects of the record lasting very long. In fact, it is likely to be broken next year, when Joe makes it four straight . . . Holy Cross.

Rutgers-N. Y. U. at New Brunswick—Gabby Hartnett was presented with a giant horseshoe before the first game and Joe DiMaggio watching the ceremonies wanted to know what that was for. "For luck," he was told. "I don't think it will be big enough," he replied and went on with his hitting . . . N. Y. U.

Georgetown-Roanoke at Washington—The wind that blew in from the outfield toward home plate on Thursday looked terrific as the Cubs took their batting practice but Bucky Harris, Washington manager, watching the futile attempts to reach the walls and bleachers observed that it probably wouldn't seem to be blowing so hard when the Yankees took their turn. It didn't. Twice around the batting order and the Yankees had parked a dozen balls outside the limits of the field . . . Georgetown.

Inside Stuff

Syracuse-Maryland at Syracuse—Tony Lazzeri was unofficially credited with a strikeout in the first game when, with the count two and three on Gehrig, he suddenly emerged from the Cubs' dugout and whispered something to Hack which was relayed to Bill Lee and then to Hartnett. It was all very mysterious but when Gehrig fanned on the next pitch, it was considered very important. An investigation revealed that what Tony actually said was: "Watch that son of a gun Combs, he's stealing all our signs." From such incidents masterminds are made . . . Syracuse.

Best bet of the day—Yankees over the Cubs.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 7.—Between Chicago's twice-beaten Cubs and the spector of utter rout in this 1938 World Series stood tonight the bulky figure of Claiborne Henry Bryant, of the Virginia Bryants, suh.

On the morrow, with 55,000 New York fans getting their first glimpse of the series battleground, Manager Gabby Hartnett of the Cubs will send Bryant to the mound against the Yankees in the third game. It will be a gesture of confidence toward Bryant but it will be, also, an appeal.

It will be an appeal to Bryant to checkmate the Yankee power which already has claimed two of his more illustrious colleagues, Bill Lee and Dizzy Dean.

Still the Underdog

A six-foot-two-inch 195-pounder from Lynchburg, Va., Bryant was a potent factor in the Cubs' mad pennant surge with his 19 victories against 11 defeats this season. Dotting his record are low-hit shutouts in profusion, notably a 2-hit affair against the Giants.

There were earlier reports that Hartnett would not entrust a series pitching job to Bryant inasmuch as the Yankees dote on fast-ball pitching, but the Cubs' manager, with Lee and Dean licked, is now desperate.

Manager Joe McCarthy tonight indicated that his pitching choice for tomorrow would be Monte Pearson and therein lies a tremendous influence on the odds. For Pearson has been hailed as the pitcher "with more stuff than anybody in the American League," and last July he was the author of the league's only no-hit game of the year.

McCarthy's selection of Pearson, however, is not definite. The Yankee right-hander has been complaining of a soreness in his shoulder and if, before game time, he does not pronounce himself fit, McCarthy will send Spurgeon Chandler to the mound.

The but in Pearson's complaint of a sore shoulder is hardly any encouragement for the Cubs. In the 1936 series against the Giants, Pearson complained loudly of a wrenched back which kept him out of the lineup in the final weeks of the season. Yet, despite his miseries, imaginary or real, Pearson turned in the best pitched game of the entire series.

Gabby Switches Outfield

Desperate now for some means of adding more power to the Cubs' attack which in two games has scored only four runs, Hartnett tonight announced a change in his outfield line-up. Frank Demaree, maker of only one hit in the two games, has been benched and Phil Cavaretta sent to rightfield. Joe Marty, producer of all three Chicago runs with his three hits in the second game, has been given the centerfield job for the remainder of the series.

Hartnett, however, has made no move to bench Carl Reynolds, former Nat, who has gone hitless in seven times at bat in the two games.

With the series now on their home lot at Yankee Stadium where the convenient fences invite more Yankee home runs, McCarthy's club is now being quoted as 1 to 8 shots to win the series and become the first team in all baseball history to accomplish that feat in three consecutive years.

The Cubs, in their New York hotel tonight, were a sober outfit, but still bristling with the hope that they could come from behind and win the series even as they won the National League championship in a last, gallant surge.

"We've just begun to fight," said Hartnett. "We came from behind in that second and were in front until Dean's arm gave out on him. Young Joe Marty had provided the spark for my team with those hits he made against Gomez. He'll be in there for the rest of the series and we'll be a better hitting club. The Cubs aren't licked, yet, and we don't think they will be. They are a come-from-behind club."

In striking contrast to the hysteria of the first two games in Chicago, New York is taking its World Series in stride and with traditional calm. Here there is a feeling that no club can stop the booming shots of DiMaggio and Dickey and Gehrig. And if, perchance, it does, there are always Crosetti and Selkirk and Rolfe to take up the cudgel.

As far as New York fans are concerned, the outcome of the 1938 World Series was a foregone conclusion from the moment the American League pennant was clinched by the Yankees.

Wiffy Cox Wins Open With 286

Houghton Second Posts a 288 Card Ed Oliver Third Play at Washington

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Wilfred H. (Wiffy) Cox, tournament veteran from Congressional, again proved his class against a local field yesterday as he defended his District Open Championship at Washington with a 286 total, after trailing at the fifty-seventh hole of the 72-hole event.

Playing the final 27 holes in one under perfect figures, Cox assumed the lead on the fifty-eighth hole, where he dropped an 8-foot for an eagle three, and from that point he played his best golf of the two-day tourney to repeat his last year's victory at Indian Spring with a score five strokes lower.

The second spot was occupied by the half-way mark leader, Al Houghton, Old Point Comfort, Va., pro, who, in finishing second, set an odd record for play in the Virginia, Maryland and District Opens. In each tournament Houghton led at the mid-way point, and in each finished two strokes behind the winner, second yesterday and in the Virginia tournament, and third in the Maryland play at Congressional. He scored 75-71.

Ed Oliver, the 200-pound clouter from Wilmington, belted his tee shots to points seldom before reached on the Washington course, as expected, but on the greens it was a different story and he finished third with a 291 total, carding a three-over-par 72-71 performance in the final rounds.

Leo Walper coupled two good nines and two bad ones for a 145 total and a grand count of 294 to tie for fourth money, with Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase, who tied Cox for the best score of the final day, 142. Barnett was 35—36 in the morning and after taking 37 going out in the afternoon was back with a subpar 34.

Barnett's assistant at Chevy Chase, Lewis Worsham, won sixth and last money with a 295 total, scoring 73—74 for the last two rounds. Worsham had more 2 over par holes than any of the leaders, finishing with a 6 on the seventy-first hole, after starting with a 6 on the thirty-seventh. He and Oliver, playing partners, each threatened Cox for the lead as they started their afternoon rounds 3 under par for five holes, but they hit an over-par streak and by the last nine were out of contention.

Jerry Hart, Government champion from Indian Spring, won the low amateur prize over the field of six Simon pures with a 302 total. Hart finished ninth in the tourney as he tacked a pair of 73s to two opening 78s. Host Club Champion Pert Patteson was second with 313.

Maryland's Jinx Hits Team Again; Mondorff Is Out

The injury jinx which has struck all-too-many this season at Coach Frank M. Dobson, of the University of Maryland, struck another telling blow yesterday.

This time it is Pershing Mondorff, the team's best kicker, who was being groomed to replace Jim Meade, all-Southern back, out for the season with a broken ankle. Mondorff came down with acute appendicitis and will undergo an operation in Baltimore tomorrow.

Mondorff will be out for the season.

Hoyas and Roanoke Clash Here Today

Georgetown Gridders Are Confident Kick-Off Scheduled for 2:30 P. M. Game to Be at Griffith Stadium

Figuratively licking its collective chops in anticipation of another Virginia football feast, Georgetown's husky and confident gridmen await the kick-off that will send them sprinting over the cleat-marked turf of Griffith Stadium toward Roanoke College's goal line and very likely their second victory of the season. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Supposedly bereft of the services of Bernard Pedneau, left-foot kicker, and Charlie Stecker, veteran field general, the little Old Dominion eleven will be the underdog. It doesn't figure to halt the Hoyas any more than Hampden-Sydney, which Georgetown flattened last week by the lop-sided score of 51-0.

Perry Crumbley, a line-cracker, and Mark Barnitz, a fairly fast halfback, are two dependables Maroon supporters are counting on to give the Hilltoppers a run for their money. Roanoke has a light, but fast and aggressive line, in contrast to the District eleven's hard-hitting and ponderous outfit. Georgetown can throw at least three teams into action, and overwhelm the Virginians with sheer power.

Roanoke tied a powerful Catawba eleven last week after winning its first two games in commendable fashion. Bill Hancock, a wiry red-headed substitute halfback, snagged a Catawba pass late in the fray, shook off a half dozen would-be tacklers, and raced 35 yards for the tying touchdown. He'll see plenty of service this afternoon.

Jack Hagerty, Georgetown's head coach, will start practically the same line-up that opened against Hampden-Sydney last week, with McFadden, Moulin, Ghecas and Castiglia in the backfield. The starting line-ups:

Georgetown.	Position.	Roanoke.
Wixted	L.E.	Snidow
Robertson	L.T.	D.Goodwin
Outlaito	L.G.	E.Goodwin
Reichey	Center	Coots
Burke	R.G.	Higgins
Nealon	R.T.	Yeager
Donahue	R.E.	Moore
McFadden	Q.B.	Marable
Moulin	L.H.	Andrews
Ghecas	R.H.	Fedeneau
Castiglia	F.B.	Crumley

Field Judge—R. Grings. Referee—H. E. Armstrong. Umpire—J. P. Dunn. Linesman—A. G. Hausmann.

Hartnett Sees Doctor; Will Play Today

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Gabby Hartnett, the Chicago Cubs' manager and catcher, who played the first two games of the World Series with a badly damaged hand, visited a doctor soon after his arrival from Chicago today. Gabby didn't tell the outcome of the visit except to say he would be in the lineup as usual tomorrow.

Hartnett tore open a finger on his throwing hand during one of the "crucial" games in the late National League race and injured the one next to it the following day.

Kennel Club Closes Entry List Tonight

Show Set for Oct. 15 Alexandria Is Scene Benefit for Hospital Cash Prizes Offered

Since tonight is the deadline for entries to the Old Dominion Kennel Club all-breed dog show, to be held Saturday, October 15, in the Municipal Ball Park at Alexandria, Va., local postoffices are well stocked up with special delivery stamps, and prospective exhibitors are urged to get their blanks in the mail as early as possible.

They must reach the office of the Foley Dog Organization, Inc., 2009 Ranstead street, Philadelphia, by this evening to be accepted.

Raymond L. Scaggs, of Upper Malboro, Md., chairman of the bench committee for the show, announces that blanks may be obtained from all Washington pet shops and veterinarians' offices, while he can supply Maryland fanciers, and Mrs. Fred Sherry, of Falls Church, secretary of the club, can help those in Virginia.

According to Mr. Scaggs, advance entries from Maine, Louisiana, Oregon and California indicate stiff competition for the hundreds of dollars in cash prizes and many valuable silver trophies on the premium list.

Since about a third of the 600 dogs expected will come from the metropolitan district, much of this rich harvest should stay here.

Obedience Tests Set

Special features of the afternoon session will be the popular obedience tests, to be judged by Dr. M. G. Gichner, of Baltimore, and the childrens' classes, for boys and girls between 10 and 16, to be judged by Tom Gately and Robert M. Snodgrass.

On Sunday morning, Dr. Gichner will also supervise tracking contests, an attraction which even the largest Eastern dog shows rarely offer, on the estate of Mr. D. S. Mackall, jr., on the Great Falls road.

The list of judges includes Paul C. Blass, Pennsylvania, dachshunds, harriers, basset hounds; Mrs. Eleanor J. Dalton, Connecticut, St. Bernards, etc.; Mrs. Rudolph Engle, New York, working group, collies and others; Dr. H. Stanley Gorsuch, Maryland, setters; James A. Johnson, Maryland, chow-chows; Maj. E. B. McKinley, Washington, Irish terriers; Arthur Newman, New York, Bostons; Miss Anna K. Nicholas, toys, including group; Dr. Huntley Smiley, Washington, Scottish terriers; Mrs. Robert W. Wall, New Jersey, spaniels; Charles A. Wernsman, Connecticut, hound group and beagles, etc.; Lewis S. Worden, New York, sporting dogs, Pekingese, poodles, also best in show, sporting, terriers and nonsporting groups.

Offers Cash Prizes

The club offers $5 for the best of breed in every breed with six or more entries, plus cash prizes varying from $1 to $4, in regular classes, depending on entries. Mr. George Berner, president of the club, is giving a silver trophy for best in show.

Members who are represented on the trophy list and will bench dogs at the show include Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson, Glenmont, Md., chows; Mrs. R. C. Birney, Aspin Hill Kennels, Rockville, Md.; Bostons and miniature schnauzers; Dr. and Mrs. Louis Cornet, dachshunds; Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ellis, Falls Church, Va., collies; Mrs. Jere Mackle, Washington, terriers; Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Mansfield, Ashton, Md., St. Bernards; Fred Sherry (also chief steward), Irish terriers; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Scharfeld, Washington, wirehairs; Mrs. M. Carter Hall, Washington, terriers, and Mrs. Richard MacMahon, Glen Carlyn, Va., Dalmatians.

Refreshments are under the direction of Mrs. Jere Mackle, Mrs. Mary K. Powell and Mrs. Louis Cornet. The beneficiary of the show, to share in gate and lunchroom, is the Alexandria Hospital.

Roosevelt Is Beaten By Tech, 15 to 0

Winners Score in All Points in Second Stanza Well Checked in Other Periods Rough Riders Threaten in Second Quarter

Roosevelt High, taking on its first football opponent of the season, yesterday dropped a 15-0 decision to McKinley in the third game of the inter-high series. The game was played in the loser's stadium.

During the first, third and fourth periods the Riders were able to hold the rampaging Tech lads scoreless and even make strong bids for scores themselves. But during the disastrous second Tech amassed all of its winning margin when Paul Dean, quarterback, snagged Johnny Gilmore's pass on the 5-yard line and scurried over; Dick Metzler, Roosevelt fullback, fumbled long enough to get tackled behind his own goal for a safety, and finally Gilmore took the ball and ran through the whole Roosevelt squad for 24 yards and the final score of the game.

Lester Wicklein took Tech's open-kick-off and carried it 10 yards to his own 35. Halfback Hill was unable to make ground in three tries, and Wicklein was forced to kick back. The rest of the first period was played entirely within the 30-yard stripes.

Then came the two scores for which Gilmore was responsible. His long dash late in the period was as neat a bit of broken field running as the series will probably see. Running almost flat-footed, he picked the holes, stepped through them, and scored standing up.

Quarterback Dean, expected to be the spearhead of McKinley's attack, was bottled pretty thoroughly by the Rider line, and the ground-gaining burden fell on Fullback Fred Bach, a dependable plunger.

Roosevelt's strongest scoring threat came late in the second period but was cut short by the gun for half-time. Danny Boothe, an extremely lanky wingman, accepted the kick-off after Tech's final score and behind very fine interference moved from his own 35 to the same stripe on Tech's side of the field. On the next play, Dale Murray, a substitute back, heaved a pass into the flats to Boothe and the end held the ball, being stopped on the 17. The gun barked and the period was ended.

The last two periods were little short of see-saw play as Tech played safe with its lead and Roosevelt got nowhere with long and unsuccessful passes, Metzler to Boothe. On one of the aerial attempts, Metzler, brother of a McKinley star of 10 years ago, was tackled roughly by Substitute Keefauver on his own 45 and the ball was recovered by Ryan Souther of Tech. For a moment it appeared that Tech would score again, Bach, Gilmore and Dean making two first downs in succession, but Tech was finally forced to kick out of danger.

Eastern High Beats Gonzaga, 7 to 6

Taking the ball on a blocked kick two minutes after the opening gun, Eastern marched down the field from the Gonzaga 40 to the score that put them far ahead until the final minutes of the game. Johnny Carroll, young left end of Eastern, stepped back and booted directly between the goal posts for the point which eventually decided the contest.

From then on, through the second and third quarters, Gonzaga continually threatened to score, each time a penalty or fumble setting them back without the final punch. Then, with only a few minutes of the game remaining, Gonzaga took advantage of a fumble by Eastern on the 20-yard marker and moved quickly to the 8-yard stripe. Jesse Mann, substitute, tucked the ball under his arm and stepped the distance to 6 points. It was Bob Mulvihill who missed the placement which meant a tie for the Purple.

Woodrow Wilson Bows to St. Albans

Woodrow Wilson, still with an unblemished record in the schoolboy football series, took an outside defeat yesterday at the hands of St. Alban's, 12-0. The Presidents started strong and finished with long gains, but sagged in the second and third periods to lose by the top-heavy count.

St. Albans scored its two touchdowns after long drives down the field, the first resulting from a 15-yard pass, Bill Alexander to Pete Slingluff, in the second stanza, and the final score coming one period later when Alexander took the ball and stepped 5 yards to the goal.

Wilson came back in the fourth period, two passes accounting for 30 and 15 yards, respectively, but Slingruff, St. Albans end, kept the Presidents' passes scattered by snagging three. He intercepted two in the second period and one in the final.

Mrs. Clark Wins Title

Mrs. David H. Clark won the Army and Navy Club championship for the third time yesterday as she dropped a 10-foot putt on the final hole to defeat the defending titleholder, Mrs. T. J. Johnson, 1 up. It was one of two championships decided for the day, climaxing Women's Club Championship Week. Mrs. Henry Goodman won the Woodmont title over Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, 4 and 2.

The Chevy Chase play for the Sheridan trophy advanced to the final round, with Mrs. Landra Platt and Mrs. Bishop Hill victorious. They will meet today for the crown now held by Mrs. Hill.

The final round of the Indian Spring Club tournament is on tap this morning with Marion Brown, who won the Manor title for the second consecutive year Thursday, seeking a repeat triumph at the Four Corners course, this time over Mrs. Richard Kreuzberg.

Mrs. Clark added the Army and Navy crown to her Virginia State championships, a title she has won twice, and the Middle Atlantic. It was her third sweep of the Service Club medal and championships.

Mrs. Goodman, the new Woodmont champion, won the duffer's championship last year at Manor, and her victory over Mrs. Goldsmith was the result of great improvement in her game.

Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Goodman join Helen Dettweiler, Marion Brown, Mrs. R. P. Huff and Mrs. H. M. Brundage as champions crowned this week. Indian Spring and Chevy Chase will add two more to the list today, while Argyle and Beaver Dam's events will conclude this week-end. Washington's event begins Monday with a qualifying round.

Yankees Balk When Marse Joe Orders Fish

By Arch McDonald,
(WJSV Baseball Commentator.)

Hotel Commodore, N. Y., Oct. 7. The series goes Broadway tomorrow. It might be the Great White Way to the Yankees, but to the Cubs it looks like the Great White Wash.

McDONALD.

There is no truth to the report that if the Newark Bears win the little World Series against Kansas City tonight the Yankees will run 'em in against the Cubs in the remainder of the series and go home for the hunting season.

Exclusive McDonald Flash: "Rebellion In Yankee Camp!" The Yanks threatened to strike today when the luncheon menu provided by Mangaer Joe McCarthy showed fish as the main dish. It meant three straight days for the Yankees on a fish diet, begun at Wrigley Field last Wednesday.

Joe McCarthy is worried almost to the point of distraction and has already lost 12 pounds during the series. He has a date for a fishing trip which starts Monday morning and Dizzy Dean almost made a postponement necessary. If the Yankees don't hit their stride soon and start sewing up these series games in the second inning, McCarthy'll crack the whip.

All the Chicago folks were telling the Yankees what a great curve ball Dizzy Dean came up with since his arm went sore, but apparently Di Maggio and Crosetti don't understand English.

Clay Bryant, who has been announced as the Cubs' starting pitcher tomorrow, will be taken to his spiritual adviser tonight and before facing the Yankees will be permitted to order any food that he wishes.

Like the old big leaguer condemned to the gallows, the Yankees will be in there swinging, but, unlike our old pal, it looks like the Yankees will get the decision.

The Cubs entourage was taken to a show tonight by club officials in an attempt to cast the pregame tension. The name of the show was, we have it on good authority, "On Borrowed Time." It's quite a hit in New York.

Well, boys, it looks like six straight World Series triumphs for the Yankees and six straight World Series failures for the Cubs. Six of one and a half dozen of the other, you might say.

If it's any consolation to the Cubs, Lou Gehrig, Joe Di Maggio, Red Rolfe and George Selkirk haven't really started hitting yet.

Joe Di Maggio says his home run against Dizzy Dean was the hardest hit homer he has made all season. It climbed over the left-field wall and disappeared like a radio audience fleeing from an Arthur Godfrey broadcast.

Despite what has happened in the series thus far, I am still picking the Yankees to win in it. McDonald never gives up.

Manie O'Hara Wins, Pays $9.80

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP). — Manie O'Hara, the filly owned by Friedberg and Axton, of Louisville, returned to her best form today at Hawthorne to lead home Forever Prince by a length and a quarter in the Calumet Purse. Vassar was third.

Wallace Leisman rode Manie O'Hara into the lead at the start and held her there to the finish. The winner ran the mile in 1:39 4-5, and paid $9.80.

Jacola Wins Going Away in Feature Race at Laurel Park

Toddle On Is Beaten 2 Lengths

Winner Pays $2.70 Court Dance Third Fans Enjoy Thrills Double Is $108.60

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 7.—Thrills and chills, plus pathos and drama marked the Friday program at this track. In the day's feature, Jacola, a filly trained by S. L. Burch, of Washington, paid the shortest price of the Maryland season to date. In the steeplechase one of the jumpers was scratched because a stable man forgot to bring him to the paddock. In the fourth race, Rocky Road carried Jockey Robert Morris around the track twice before being caught. In the daily double there was a $108.60 pay-off.

Jacola, owned by Edward Friendly and the best of the juvenile fillies of last year, scored her easy victory in the Uniontown Purse. She was asked to run only for an eighth of a mile and this effort took her to the front. She led Toddle On, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman, of Washington, and Court Dance to the wire at odds of 7 to 20.

Little Swede was the steeplechase horse that didn't get to the post. F. McKay, who is owner and trainer as well as jockey for the gelding, came down from the jockey's room but found that he had everything but a horse. Officials looked around askingly and then ordered the gelding scratched. McKay reluctantly went back to change into street clothes.

Money Refunded

Due to the absence of a public address system there was some confusion regarding the betting on the horse but those who had purchased tickets had their money refunded.

The race was won by The Hour, ridden by T. T. Mott, jr., and owned by the boy's father. The Hour turned back Millrace, Game Runner and, among others, the favored Buck Langhorne. Mott took The Hour to the front early and the race developed into a game of "try to catch him," something that just couldn't be done, much to the delight of those who collected $22.40 for each $2 investment.

The healthy pay-off in the daily double was the work of Dorothy Pomp, another of those fit Watt Elliott horses, and Chainwick, owned by Harry Neusteter. Dorothy Pomp led most of the way but Chainwick scored the hard way. He drove out of the park in midstretch to win by half a length over Askaris, a field horse.

Mount Runs Away

Rocky Road, owned by Frank Hayes, mayor of Waterbury, Conn., showed the favorite on the board and apparently was ready for action as the field marched to the post for the fourth race. Jockey Morris attempted to warm him up and Rocky Road shook loose to start running away the wrong way of the track. After he had gone a mile, Happy Gordon, the outrider, made a spectacular effort to stop him. Gordon swung on the horse but could not hold his grip and Rocky Road went sailing around the track again. The second time, Gordon was able to grab and hold him, bringing him to a stop. Naturally, Rocky Road trailed the field in the race. After the race, Gordon had to catch him again.

Meanwhile, Micro had become the favorite. He was third behind John Francis, an $11.10 shot, and Waka who ran second.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Oct. 7 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture)—Fine Western grown wools were quite active and prices were strong on the Boston wool market today. It was becoming very difficult to buy good French combing lengths fine territory wools in original bags at 65 cents, scoured basis. Such wools were bringing as far as 67 cents, scoured basis, quite readily and some houses were asking 68 to 70 cents, scoured basis. Twelve-month Texas wools were bringing 67 cents, scoured basis, and holders in Boston were asking around 70 cents, scoured basis.

Gold Flood Sets Peak

By the Associated Press.

A record-breaking total of $204,844,905 worth of gold came into the United States in the week ended September 30.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that the figure was the largest for any week on record. It added that the sum was about $70,000,000 larger than that for any of the preceding weeks during which the European war scare sent huge shipments of gold across the Atlantic.

Since at least temporary peace has been assured by the pact of Munich, the gold movement has abated, however, except for metal engaged for shipment prior to the settlement. Altogether, more than $600,000,000 of gold was sent to the United States during the war scare.

Shipments in the week ended September 30 included $128,792,670 from England, $29,598,569 from the Netherlands, $3,840,000 from Sweden, $30,052,543 from Canada and $11,747,504 from Japan.

Paced by a shipment of $8,600,000 of Chinese coin, silver imports in the week rose to $10,182,241, the largest total for several weeks. A Chinese financial mission is negotiating here now for extension of the agreement under which the Treasury buys this metal.

The gold assets of the United States on October 5 were $12,762,800,740.51.

Gas Light Co. Plans Issue of $8,500,000

To Retire 5s of 1958
New Bonds Carry 4%
Mature in 25 Years

The Washington Gas Light Co. proposes to refund its $8,500,000 of 5 per cent bonds of 1958 with a new 4 per cent issue due in 1963. The company has filed an application for approval of the issue with the Public Utilities Commission.

The new bonds will be dated September 1 this year and the proceeds will be used solely for refunding the 5 per cent issue, which will be retired at 104½. The premium will come out of the company's treasury.

After careful consideration the company decided to place the issue through private sale and arrangements for the financing were made with a group of insurance companies. The companies and amounts they will purchase are as follows:

Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, $3,700,000; John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., $2,000,000; Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Milwaukee, $1,500,000; Massachusetts Life Insurance Co., $500,000; Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., $500,000; New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., $300,000.

The fact that the new bonds are to be turned over to the insurance companies means also that they will not be listed on the Washington Stock Exchange. The present 5 per cent bonds have been listed on the exchange ever since they were issued. So far this year there has been a turnover of $49,000 of these bonds on the Washington exchange, the last sale being at 105½. Their low for the year is 104¼ and the high 107.

Stock Seat $79,000, Advance of $9,000

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for sale of a New York Stock Exchange membership at $79,000, or within $6,000 of the highest price paid for a membership this year. The $79,000 represented a rise of $9,000 over the $70,000 paid for a membership yesterday, and an increase of $11,000 over a transfer Monday of this week at $68,000. It was the highest price paid for a seat since August 16, when a transfer was consummated at $80,000.

The highest price paid for a membership this year was $85,000 on July 13, and the lowest was $51,000 on June 15. The $51,000 price was the lowest recorded since 1918.

Cash Circulation $50.82 Per Person

Coin and currency in circulation in the United States totaled $6,621,973,228 on September 30. This was an average of $50.82 per person.

A month earlier the average was $49.95.

News of Improving Business Spurs Market
Buying Absorbs Heavy Profit-Taking
Carloading Gains a Cheerful Item

New York, Oct. 7.—Statistical evidence of an improvement in business helped the stock market absorb heavy profit taking today and while the list did not equal the new 1938 high established on Thursday, the close was up 0.16 point. Interest shifted to the steel and railroad shares while the motors held to a narrower range and closed with little change. A feature was the selling in the oils, based on a weakened gasoline market and the thought that the crude oil structure is not too firm.

Data on the business pick-up came from the railroad, motor and retail trade lines. In the case of the news from the motor field, there was an offset in the form of labor trouble in a number of plants and this accounted for the automobile shares failing to keep pace with the steels and rails. The weekly estimate on production shows the industry to be at its best level since July 16 and the figure of 37,665 units is 50 per cent above the previous week. Assemblies of the 1939 models are going ahead rapidly. Fractional changes predominated, and there was less than a normal turnover in these stocks.

A boost in car loadings to 697,938 cars meant a new high for railroad traffic since the week of November 6, 1937, and the betterment was more than is normally expected at this time of year. Sharp improvement in miscellaneous shipments, the major industrial classification, was responsible for the new high. While the response in rail shares was immediate, the problem of the carriers is operating expenses more than traffic at the present time. The Street is looking to a compromise in the present wage controversy to save the remaining solvent systems.

Southern Railway a Feature

Featuring the rail list today were the Southern Railway issues, the preferred adding 2¾ and the common being the most active carrier issue of the day. It advanced a fraction and both attained new 1938 maximums. Moderately higher were New York Central, Southern Pacific, Atchison, Delaware & Hudson and Coast Line.

Steel and Bethlehem ran their neck and neck race, closing again with only ⅛ point separating them, each up about a point. Followers of the steels are watching the industry's three biggest customers, the motor manufacturers, railroads and construction companies, for a cue to the immediate future and the outlook is favorable. A rate of operations of 55 per cent of capacity is expected before the end of the year by the conservatives of the industry with a few of the bolder spirits talking of slightly better than this rate. At present the industry is at 47.9 per cent of capacity.

Home building, which has gone to a seven-year high in the move which started last February, has improved the construction outlook and thereby helped increase the attention paid to the steel and building material shares.

A number of stocks had special moves today. Colgate Palmolive Peet gained a point, to a new high on the company's dividend action. Loft was active and up a point on the word of the naming of a new management for Pepsi-Cola Co. Radio was by far the most active stock of the day, gaining fractionally and making a new high on a volume of 82,300 shares. Crane Co. came forward in the building department, adding about a point.

Strength in wheat featured commodities, late gains being ascribed to reports concerning a liberal Uncle Sam, who has now about completed a third of the subsidized export of surplus wheat and has raised the United States flour export subsidy rate 10 cents a barrel. Wheat closed up 1 to 1¼ cents a bushel. Cotton moved narrowly with the market awaiting the Government's crop report due today. The close was 2 points higher to 5 points lower.

Treasury Bonds Firm

Listed bonds were firm in a quiet market today. Most of the fireworks caused by the war crisis and its aftermath now seem to be over, and the tendency is to settle down to ordinary problems. Treasury bonds moved ponderously forward, with 11 issues attaining new highs for this year. Nickel Plate bonds drifted downward in moderate trading. Czech issues fell in the foreign divisions, but others were firm. Turnover in all bonds totaled $8,740,000.

Gains in long term Treasury obligations ranged from 1/32 to 11/32 point, and these moves sufficed to send a good part of the section to fresh levels for the year. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations were similarly firm, and one fresh high appeared in this group. In the best grade corporate bonds similar conditions prevailed. United States Steel debentures touched their best figure since issuance, and the longer telephone 3¼ per cent issue established a record.

Secondary railroad issues reflected steady buying, with gains ranging from small fractions to a point or more. Nickel Plate obligations experienced another reaction from the sweeping moves of previous days. Local tractions dropped slightly, after their previous sharp advance. Holding company bonds and convertible issues moved forward with their related equities. Communications bonds were dull, but the amusement group held some strong spots.

Czech 8s of 1951 fell more than 4 points on the usual small turnover. German and Italian bonds were dull, but Japanese issues continued their improvement. The high grade French, Belgian, Scandinavian, Canadian and Australian bonds were in demand. Uruguayan bonds and Argentine municipals were strong spots among Latin-Americans.

Gains 3.3% in Week
17.3% Under Year Ago
Total 697,938 Cars

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended October 1 totaled 697,938 cars the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was a decrease of 145,923 cars or 17.3 per cent below the corresponding week in 1937 and a decrease of 252,725 cars or 26.6 per cent below the same in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of October 1 was an increase of 22,385 cars or 3.3 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 280,689 cars, an increase of 14,528 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 55,503 cars below the corresponding week in 1937.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 41,589 cars, an increase of 1,604 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 5,275 cars above the corresponding week in 1937, in the Western districts alone. grain and grain products loading for the week of October 1 totaled 27,168 cars, an increase of 2,476 cars above the corresponding week in 1937.

Livestock Increases

Livestock loading amounted to 17,216 cars, an increase of 689 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 4,575 cars below the corresponding week in 1937. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week of October 1, totaled 13,613 cars, an increase of 503 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 4,736 cars below the corresponding week in 1937.

Forest products loading totaled 32,487 cars, an increase of 465 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 5,931 cars below the corresponding week in 1937.

All districts reported decreases compared with the corresponding weeks in 1937 and 1930.

Broker Indicted For Stock Deal

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that Colin B. Arrott, of Portland, Oreg., had been indicted in the United States District Court of Oregon for violations of the fraud provisions of the securities act and of the mail fraud statute.

The indictment charged that Arrott had defrauded an elderly rancher of Ruffing, Idaho, by inducing him to exchange cash and 728 shares of the common stock of Fundamental Investors, Inc., for 26 Philippine Railway Co. 4 per cent bonds.

Construction Costs Continue Upward

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—For the third consecutive month construction costs have shown an increase, although the advance has been narrow, the Engineering News-Record reported today.

October construction costs, the News-Record said, are 0.7 per cent higher than September and 0.86 per cent higher than in July, when the gradual decline in effect since last October was ended.

New Financing

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Reflecting the end of uncertainty caused by the European war scare, new financing for the week increased sharply to $104,087,300, the largest since the last week in August, it was shown today in a compilation by Poor's Publishing Co.

Cotton Dull; December 8.29

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Cotton moved irregularly today when trade and foreign buying encountered larger hedge selling. December, which had advanced from 8.26 to 8.34, closed at 8.29 with final prices 2 points net higher to 5 points lower.

The market opened 4 points higher to 1 point lower with disappointing Liverpool cables offset by trade price fixing against larger textile sales yesterday. Foreign buying absorbed early hedge selling in distant months, and prices advanced early above recent resistance levels based on 8.30 for December contracts. The market sagged somewhat later, especially in the distant months, under hedging after the foreign demand had let up. Other liquidation appeared toward the close.

Wheat Prices Carried Up 1½c a Bushel

Subsidy a Factor
Third of Quota Sold
Corn Advances

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Wheat ran up briskly 1½ cents a bushel late today, and held most of the gain. Helping the bulge was word that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is already about one-third through with placing in foreign markets 100,000,000 bushels of this country's wheat surplus. It was announced also that the United States flour export subsidy rate other than from the Pacific Coast has been increased 10 cents a barrel.

Notice of proposed purchases of corn for Government relief distribution had some stimulating effffect on the corn market.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1 to 1¼ cents higher, compared with yesterdays finish; December, 64⅞@65; May, 65¾@65⅞. Corn, ½ to 1 cent up; December, 46@46⅛; May, 49⅛@49¼. Oats, ⅛ to ¼ cent advance, rye showing ⅜ cent gain, and provisions varying from 12 cents setback to 5 cents advance.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

GOVERNMENT attorneys do not prefer civil service blanketing in at the moment, and if the attitude, as expressed in the report given by the Cairns committee, appears beyond understanding it may be said here that the issue has two sides and the brief of the attorneys may be something like this:

In principle, the Government attorneys adhere to the merit system and desire it as an institution and policy. But they were filled with misgivings when the Executive Orders of June 24 gave indication that as many of the Federal personnel as possible under its scope would be blanketed in.

Looking upon their own ranks, the attorneys considered that almost to the last man the positions were filled by specialists. They saw an almost complete overhauling of the civil service, an enlarging of affairs which would have to be done in a hurry, the quick compiling of registers—and alarmingly, the prospect of filling attorney jobs—jobs designed for specialists—from hastily compiled registers.

SO, after, the Cairns committee studied the situation, it was found that the attorneys should not be blanketed in, but that some kind of merit system should be developed for the attorneys. This special system might continue until such time as the commission compiled what could be regarded as competent registers.

There might be some such arrangement as the Treasury has, whereby Treasury and the commission more or less work together in selections.

AND, all the while, one other thought occurred, and it was discussed by the lawyers: the thought of veterans' preferences. Veterans have preferences in matters of appointment to jobs, as you know. And their preferences make up much for grade and their places on the registers. The attorneys at a recent session insisted that they want only men who actually have made top grades.

A line is imperatively needed here. At the meeting where the veterans question was discussed, the speakers all were veterans; and it was made quite clear that the attitude did not reflect on veterans' preferences. The question was practical and not theoretical. There was no feeling about the veterans one way or another. The attorneys simply and emphatically wanted their ranks filled by men who actually made the top in the long, still grasp of law.

IF THIS column has caught their attitude, they felt that it would be far better to search out the bright young men from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Virginia and the other top colleges of law than to rely on registers which at best will require a year to become satisfactory. In other words, it would be better to go to the colleges and hand-pick the cream of the crop from the graduating classes.

Another thought: Law school graduates have not as yet become civil service conscious. At the moment, and traditionally, every typist and filing clerk—not to speak of the graduates in technical and highly scientific fields—is civil service conscious. The young lawyer, the brilliant and the dull of them, graduate and then go downtown and hang out their shingles. Few consider the Government as a future and field.

During the discussion of all this, 33 agencies of the Government were represented, and by the cream of the legal staffs. To the findings, broadly, but one dissenting voice was raised, and this gentleman thought it "unfortunate" that the Federal attorneys went on record as against blanketing in. "But we are far from against the civil service," other voices said.

Red Cross Veteran in China, Mrs. Mary Ferguson, Dies

Members of Mrs. Ferguson's entire family have devoted their lives to service with the Red Cross. Her husband, Dr. John Calvin Ferguson, while serving on the Central China Famine Relief Commission in 1910-11, organized the first Red Cross Society in China.

Their daughter, Mrs. Raymond Mackay, 1026 Sixteenth street northwest, currently is working on the local Roll Call drive and is a member of the Gray Ladies of Walter Reed Hospital.

Mrs. Mackay spent several years with her parents in China, aiding them in promoting Red Cross work. Her father has given 50 years to the service.

Working as a trio, the family has greatly aided the American Red Cross in promoting co-operation between the United States and foreign countries in relief activities, officials of the organization said yesterday.

Dr. Ferguson was with his wife at Peiping when she died Thursday. He is retired and is the author of numerous writings on Chinese problems.

He was last here as a member of the Conference on Limitation of Armaments in 1921. In his life in China, Dr. Ferguson has held many official positions with the Chinese government and still serves in an advisory capacity.

A Bit of Olde England
English home taken over by mortgagee; less than 2 years old. Built of stone, brick and rough textured stucco, with heavy Ludowici tile roof. Comprising center hall, large living room, featuring beam ceilings and rugged stone fireplace. Step-up dining room, tile kitchen, replete with ultra-modern conveniences; 4 bedrooms and 2 delightfully appointed tile baths; "Ye Olde English Tap Room" and 2-car garage complete the basement arrangement. This lovely home is located in a suburban community of fine homes on a large corner lot amid tall oaks, hickories and dogwood. "Truly a beautiful home and offered at the unprecedented price of $11,350." J. Wesley Buchanan, MEt. 1143 until 6 p. m.

OVERLOOKING THE POTOMAC
ZIGZAGGING gentle southern slopes to the crest of the ridge. I came to a charming Colonial home ruggedly built of stone, surrounded by an abundance of sheltering shade, bearing all the requisites of good taste. Assure for comfort, love of beauty and sound construction, a flagstone porch commands one of the finest views of the Potomac. The interior is equally inviting and intriguing. For instance, there are 3 floor levels and 2 cheerful log-burning fireplaces; the dining room is spacious and the kitchen modern in appointment; the bedrooms, 4 in number, are well arranged; 2 tiled baths. There are many other details I haven't told you about. Priced at $12,250, and if your credit is good you may practically write your own terms. Due to unforeseen circumstances this property must be sold. Phone J. WESLEY BUCHANAN, MEt. 1143, until 8 p. m.

A Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

Bob Burns Says—

I remember when I went to school we weren't allowed to use our imagination very much. Our opinion on any subject depended entirely upon the teachers' interpretation of it, but today the schools encourage free thinking. Pupils take pretty near any subject and jest tear it apart.

Not long ago, on my boy's birthday I gave him $2 and said, "Now, son, I want you to learn the value of a dollar—don't take this money and spend it foolishly—remember 'a fool and his money are soon parted.'" My boy says, "Yes, I know that, but thanks for partin' with it, anyway!"

Roper Council Joins Plea for Business Peace

Sees Benefits for All Monopoly Group Acts
Hearings About Nov. 15

Twenty-five industrialists, businessmen and bankers meeting here as the Business Advisory Council of the Department of Commerce formally applauded yesterday the White House suggestion for an end of "saber-rattling" and approved a policy of co-operation between Government, labor and industry.

At the same time the temporary National Economic Committee, known as the Monopoly Investigating Committee, moved to advance to another stage in its proceedings by sounding out members on fixing a day for a meeting at the end of next week. Virtual agreement was reached to defer public hearings until after the election. The date probably will be around November 15.

The full scope of studies already put under way by Federal departments and agencies acting for the committee was disclosed in an unofficial 13-point compilation described by officials as generally correct. It shows the studies range over the whole field of American economic enterprises and the problems connected therewith from production and distribution to prices, wages and control methods.

Big Industries Covered

Most of the big industries of the country come within the field of the studies, but whether all the studies will figure in the public hearings and how far particular businesses will be called upon for witnesses are matters yet to be determined.

Senator O'Mahoney, chairman of the Monopoly Committee, again called for the co-operation of business, banned "witch hunting," and urged business not to "raise spooks." He declined to get annoyed over the speech Thursday of Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, who warned of governmental bigness, cited the danger that the committee might go in for "head hunting," and urged business to approach the inquiry watchfully, with alert, "even militant co-operation."

"The committee will welcome the co-operation of business, and I am sure its members will be particularly pleased when they hear that Mr. Parkinson is urging it. We want the co-operation of business, whether it is alert, positive, or even militant," said O'Mahoney.

Harriman Pledges Aid

W. Averell Harriman, chairman of the Business Advisory Council, who promised co-operation with O'Mahoney, offered the council's more general peace gesture yesterday to the White House. A council resolution said:

"The members of the Business Advisory Council are heartily in accord with recent expressions of a White House spokesman in regard to the necessity for co-operation as a basis for lasting industrial recovery. We wish to reiterate our view to that effect as expressed to the President on various previous occasions and our confidence in the potential benefits to all segments of the population if such a policy of co-operation is fully supported by Government, labor and industry."

The council announced that its November meeting will be held at Houston, Tex., November 10 to 12.

Abuses to Be Pictured

The first public hearings of the monopoly committee are expected to take the form of testimony by officials who have been directing the agency studies, letting them paint in broad strokes the whole picture of American industry.

Then, it was indicated yesterday, the hearings are likely to proceed on a topical basis. As the subject of patents, for instance, is discussed, developments in various industries may be cited and then, in some cases, witnesses from particular businesses may be called to the witness stand. The committee will avoid "smearing" tactics, but, said one official, "everyone knows there have been some abuses and some of them may have to be illustrated."

Industries covered in the various studies include steel, oil, milk, drug, aluminum, nickel, sulphur, concrete, glass, cans and containers, rubber, automobile, paper, coke, brick, tile, farm machinery and implements, utilities, food products, bread, banking, investment trusts, holding companies and insurance.

Trial of Woman's Suit Against Financier Halted

Dedham, Mass., Oct. 7 (AP).—Trial of a $40,000 suit brought by Mrs. Ione Nugent, of Boston and New York, against Philip Loring Reed, Dedham financier and former vice president of Armour & Co., for "confidential investigations," halted abruptly today because of the illness of Mrs. Nugent's attorney, Anthony Dicecca.

The presiding judge granted a continuance until Monday afternoon. Mrs. Nugent testified earlier she was forced to assure Reed of her "entry into the Congressional set in Washington" before he gave her the assignment.

Delinquency Quiz May Include Harvard After Legion Attack

Dean Hanford 'Personally Regrets Incident'

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 7.—An attack by Harvard freshmen on an American Legion Junior Band composed of youngsters from 8 to 16 years old brought official condemnation today and a suggestion from Mayor John Lyons that his youth commission studying juvenile delinquency broaden its scope to include the Harvard yard.

Four students were arrested in connection with the attempt last night to break up a legion parade in the University City and were ordered to appear in court October 18 on charges of interrputing and disturbing a public assembly. They were listed as Frank A. Pemberton, jr., of Newton, Joseph E. Ambrose, of Danvers, James M. Blumgarton, of New York, and John S. Caylor, of Canton, Ohio.

The Cambridge mayor earlier said a Harvard student was "no different from any poor boy from any part of Cambridge. If a poor boy indulged in such disgraceful tactics, everyone would be demanding that he be sent to jail."

Gov. Hurley, also a Cambridge resident and a Legionnaire, recommended punishment for the students involved.

"I believe the laws of Massachusetts should be respected by all the people, including those who are educated or supposed to be educated," he said.

Anti-Skim Milk Process Succeeds

By the Associated Press.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 7 (AP).—Commercial success in making milk from which the cream cannot be skimmed was announced today by Cornell University.

Neither the milkman, nor "Pa" pouring off the top of the morning milk bottle first, can get the cream, the announcement says, even if the bottle stands for a year.

The feat is accomplished by a process of getting the fat, which forms cream, so completely distributed through the milk that it is never again able to separate.

Senate Renews Probe of WPA In Kentucky

Doubt Hopkins Denials
Election Charges Grow
Guffey Letter Checked

By the United Press.

The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee said last night that it "does not agree" with WPA Administrator Hopkins' denial that State WPA officials were unsually active in the recent Kentucky primary, and ordered its investigators back to the State for further study.

"Our investigation will be resumed immediately," Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, told reporters.

The committee also ordered further inquiry into the authorship of a letter soliciting funds and sent out by the Pennsylvania Democratic State Committee, over the name of Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who is chairman of the State campaign committee. Guffey has denied any knowledge of the letter. Chairman Sheppard said. The committee has held that Senators are forbidden to solicit funds.

Contradict Morgenthau

At the sametime, the committee replied to an inquiry by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., that it believed existing law bared any and all Federal employes from making contributions, directly or indirectly, to the campaign of any Senator or Representative.

"It is the opinion of the committee," a formal statement said, "that no Federal employe may legally contribute, voluntarily or otherwise, directly or indirectly, to the campaign of any Senator, or member of, or delegate to Congress, or resident commission, whether in the primary or general elections."

Sheppard explained, however, that the committee interpreted existing law as permitting Federal employes to contribute to campaign funds of a State or national committee in support of a full ticket in a general election rather than for the benefit of a single Congressional candidate.

He added that the committee believed all Federal employes are barred from contributions to any primary campaigns.

Noting that it had referred to Hopkins several cases of alleged irregularities in the Kentucky Democratic primary, in which Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley retained his seat against Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, the committee said it had received Hopkins' reply denying the charges, and added:

Call Kentucky Acts "Flagrant"

"The committee is of the opinion that the facts already presented by the examiners representing the committee indicate such flagrant violations of regulations and law respecting the political activities in Kentucky of WPA officials and employes as well as of other governmental agencies, and that the findings of WPA and of the committee's investigators are so divergent that further investigation should be made before final conclusions and recommendations are made."

Sheppard revealed that the committee had ordered an investigation of charges by former Senator W. Warren Barbour, New Jersey's Republican Senatorial nominee, that WPA attaches in his State were engaging in allegedly illegal political activity.

Red Cross Sets 2-Year Mark

Day's Figure Is 10,345
Speakers Take to Air

The Red Cross Roll Call neared the end of its second week yesterday with the biggest enrollment in two years. With 10,345 signed up the total for the 12 days of the campaign reached 47,406, which is 7,734 above the corresponding period's total last year.

Government units also registered the greatest number of enrollments of any day in roll call history with a total for the day of 7,830, compared with the 1937 high of 5,539. The Navy Department, reporting for the first time, turned in 1,509 new members; the Department of Commerce 1,663.

Red Cross speakers broadcast through the day from various radio stations. Among them were Raymond Clapper, newspaper columnist and vice chairman of roll call speakers, who said in a talk over WJSV that the Red Cross has proved its value in small disasters as well as those of the magnitude of the recent New England storm and flood.

Sergt. R. R. Rains of the fire rescue squad told of the first aid training his organization had received from the Red Cross and Charles Breun, jr., chairman of the Sioux city, Iowa, chapter, praised the roll call organization here.

Marccy L. Sperry, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., in a talk over WRC called the Red Cross "the greatest plus sign in civilization." He said the service of the organization is "something more than duty, something more than the strictest justice, an extra something that you share with your friend."

U. S. Disaster Aid Praised

It's a "fortunate coincidence," Chairman Norman H. Davis, of the Red Cross, said yesterday, that the largest Federal relief forces in history have been available in recent years when floods and other natural disasters seem to have been increasing in severity.

Although he said he was not advocating that large and permanent Federal forces be maintained for disaster relief work, Davis praised highly the services performed in this field by the WPA, CCC, Coast Guard, Public Health Service and Army and Navy.

"They have done a marvelous job in the recent New England situation," he added in an interview.

Canada's Premier Plans U. S. Visit

Ottawa, Ontario, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King will leave here tomorrow for the southern United States for a rest and holiday, it was learned tonight.

It was expected the prime minister will go to Georgia and remain away two or three weeks, and that he will time his return north to be in Washington to sign the new Canadian-American trade treaty, which is understood to be nearly completed.

During King's absence Ernest LaPointe, minister of justice, will be acting prime minister.
